GUNS TO BACK NEW LEAGUE

SENATE STOPS ROAD WORK BY U. S. SOLDIERS

200 Million Highway Measure Passed by Upper House.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The senate voted today to stop the alleged use of American soldiers from the north as road laborers in southern states against their will.

Aroused by reports that thousands of northern soldiers receiving $30 a month were being employed beside Negro laborers getting $5 a day for road building in the south, particularly in Virginia, the senate adopted an amendment offered by Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey forbidding the detail of troops to road building service against their will. The amendment provides also that when troops are so used the government must pay them the wages received by civilian labor on such work.

The question came up in connection with the Bankhead amendment to the postal appropriation, which provides $200,000,000 for highway building. The amendment carried, and $50,000,000 will be available this year, $75,000,000 each in 1920 and 1921.

South Contests Action.

The soldier work resolution was stubbornly contested by the southern senators, who voted solidly against it.

The fight today was an outgrowth in part of charges made yesterday that a number of Wisconsin troops enlisted in the motor transport service had been used against their will since Aug. 15 to construct roads in Virginia at $30 a month, while Negro laborers employed beside them received $5 a day.

Senator Lodge said today he was informed that 40,000 troops had been engaged in building a piece of road in Virginia near Camp Humphrey. This road, he said, was called a military road, but was to form a part of the main highway between Washington and Richmond.

Text of Resolution.

The Frelinghuysen amendment provides: "That when any officer or enlisted man in the army, the navy, or the marine corps of the United States shall be or shall have been detailed for labor in the building of roads or in other highway construction or repair work, the pay of such officers or enlisted men shall be equalized to conform to the compensation paid to civilian employés in the same or like employment, and the sum due to each such officers and enlisted men, as herein provided, shall be computed by the secretary of agriculture and paid out of the appropriation herein made to the state wherein such employment was had and such equalized compensation insured; provided that no enlisted man of the army, the navy, or the marine corps of the United States shall be detailed for any such duty except by his own consent."

Adopt Good Roads Rider.

The Frelinghuysen amendment came up in connection with the highway provision rider on the postal appropriation bill. The good roads rider was agreed to by a vote of 51 to 17 after a sharp contest in which charges of "pork" and "waste" were made.

Before the final roll call on the rider was taken Senator Moses of New Hampshire proposed an amendment providing that the amount of money spent by the federal government for the construction of military roads in the various states should be deducted from the share of those states of the $200,000,000 appropriated under the pending measure. This amendment was aimed at southern states which, it was asserted, have had millions of dollars' worth of roads constructed as "military highways" at government expense during the war. The deduction of the amount spent in the various states would practically wipe out the southern states' share of the $200,000,000, it was said.

South Rejects Amendment.

Naturally strong opposition was raised by the southern senators against the amendment and it was rejected by a vote of 35 to 20.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa, one of the leaders of the "anti-pork," vigorously assailed the measure.

"The slogan of both parties seems to be: 'Let the people pay—what do we care?' If this keeps up for a while longer we'll have a taxpayer's party in this country instead of having two 'tax eating' parties."

SENATOR CALLS LANDIS 'WRIST WATCH DESPOT'

Thomas Denounces the Jurist on Senate Floor for Recent Incident.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Senator Thomas of Colorado declared in the senate today that Judge K. M. Landis of the United States District court at Chicago ought to be impeached because he ordered a witness to discard a wrist watch he was wearing in court.

Senator Thomas said: "He asked the witness upon the stand who was wearing a wrist watch whether he belonged to the army," Senator Thomas said. "The reply was that he did not. The judge then ordered him to take the watch from his wrist, saying that no man should be permitted to wear a wrist watch who did not belong to the army or navy.

"I think a member of the bench guilty of such infinitesimal, contemptible despotism should be impeached. I think any judge who would so conduct himself betrays by such conduct his utter unfitness for that or any other public position."

Defended by Lewis.

Senator Lewis of Illinois rose to Judge Landis' defense. He expressed the belief that Judge Landis was joking.

"I cannot conceive for a moment that he really meant seriously to reprove the witness," Senator Lewis said.

"It may have been an exhibition of judicial humor," Senator Thomas said, "but it is the kind of an incident that does not arouse my sense of humor at all. I hope for the sake of the judiciary that this is unfounded or that it is a clumsy joke, but such incidents serve very largely to confirm that prejudice against federal courts which is one of the characteristics of the time and is based largely upon assumptions of petty tyranny and oppression that are unworthy of the bench and disagreeable to its occupants."

Kenyon Praises Landis' Patriotism.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa took up Judge Landis' defense.

"No more patriotic man or better judge, in my judgment, has ever sat upon a bench than Judge Landis," Senator Kenyon said. "His brand of patriotism is illustrated by his boy, who stopped here a few days ago on his way back home from France, his only boy, with a magnificent record in bringing down German airplanes."

MUST FILE SERVICE RECORDS.

The "wrist watch ruling" which aroused Senator Thomas' ire, was made Jan. 11, when several attorneys appeared in court wearing wrist watches.

Asked by Judge Landis what branch of the service they had been mustered out of, the lawyers admitted they had not been in either army or navy.

"Enter an order," directed Judge Landis, turning to Clerk Joe O'Sullivan, "requiring all wrist-watched attorneys to notify you what branch of the service they represent."

BAKER TELLS OF BOMBS THAT CAN KILL THOUSANDS

Boston, Mass., Feb. 8.—Secretary of War Baker warned a large audience here tonight that, unless the league of nations idea prevailed, scientists would invent for another war weapons of destruction beyond the comprehension of those who fought in the recent world conflict.

He said he knew of an invention that was being perfected which would enable men to drop electrically controlled bombs containing 500 pounds of explosives upon unprotected cities 150 miles distant. These implements, he said, would kill thousands.

Bill Provides Ministers to Czecho-Slovak Nation

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—At the request of President Wilson provision was made today in the diplomatic and consular bill by the senate appropriations committee for ministers to the new Czecho-Slovak nation and the new government of Poland.

Secretary Lansing informed the committee that the president had given instructions by cable that provision be made for the ministers.

The ministers would be paid salaries of $12,000 a year each under the bill, which provides $9,363,844 for the diplomatic and consular service. The total is about $500,000 less than that in the house bill.

NEW YORK LABOR BEGINS FIGHT ON PROHIBITION

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The machinery of organized labor, representing all unions in New York affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, was set in motion today in an effort to prevent national prohibition.

For the first time in the campaign against the drys, the word "strike" has been used. Here are the principal developments in the situation:

1. The Central Federated union has voted to submit the question of a strike against prohibition to all affiliated organizations.

2. At leasts 100,000 persons here will be wearing "No beer, no work" buttons before tomorrow night, according to John Sullivan, vice chairman of the executive board of the C. F. U.

3. Resolutions placing individual unions on record against prohibition have been prepared by officers of the C. F. U. and have already been acted upon by several organizations, while requests for them have come from unions representing 100,000 workers.

4. Protests have been sent to all the New York members of congress against the bone-dry amendment to the constitution, in accordance with a formula submitted by the New York State Federation of Labor.

Woman Sculptor Remade Faces of Wounded Heroes

New York, Feb. 8.—Mrs. Maynard Ladd, a Boston sculptor, who has been serving with the Red Cross overseas as a maker of faces for maimed soldiers, arrived here today on the White Star liner Baltic.

Mrs. Ladd said she had made new faces for seventy French and five American soldiers, taking a plaster cast of the disfigured faces, filling in with plaster the missing portions, and then by a process of electrolysis constructing these portions in copper.

Copper noses, ears, and chins, she said, can be enameled so realistically and attached so skillfully as virtually to defy detection.

An income tax bureau for the information and convenience of readers of this newspaper will be established by "The Tribune" immediately following the final adoption by congress of the war revenue bill and its signing by the president.

The bureau, co-operating with the Chicago office of the internal revenue bureau (which through the courtesy of Collector Julius F. Smietanka, will provide experts to answer questions in conjunction with a clerical force) will be situated on the main floor of The Tribune building and may be conveniently reached through either the Dearborn or Madison street entrance.

Articles of a popular vein dealing with complexing phases of the new tax schedules, and making them plain, will appear in "The Tribune" from time to time. Answers to questions of general interest from readers who may be puzzled over their income tax problems will also appear in this paper.

13 MAY BE LOST OVERBOARD FROM PACIFIC CRAFT

Bellingham, Wash., Feb. 8.—From six to thirteen persons were washed overboard and drowned today from the cannery tender Uwanta of the Pacific American Fisheries company as the boat was making its way from the company's plant on Eliza island. The tender was carrying about fifty persons, nearly all from the Eliza island plant.

Mexico Refuses Demand on Money of Germany

Mexico City, Feb. 8.—The Mexican government through its ministry of foreign relations today formally refused to comply with the French government's request that permission be refused for German and Austrian money and property to be sent out of the country.

The reply stated that the Mexican government feels it must comply with the treaty of 1883, which provides for protection of German and Austrian financial and property interests.

William S. Hart to Quit Screen; Rumor He'll Wed

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—After having portrayed the hero in innumerable strenuous western pictures for many years, William S. Hart today announced his intention of casting himself permanently in the rôle of retired millionaire.

"I have worked hard for a number of years," Hart declared today, "and as soon as I complete my present contracts I shall retire from the film world and take a well earned and much needed rest."

It is hinted Hart will wed the daughter of a millionaire Montana cattleman.

ARMY, NAVY, WILL PROTECT WORLD PEACE

Program Is Accepted Except for Minor Changes.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The first world's constitution, practically complete tonight, will be given the test of universal public opinion next week.

Official announcement was made today that the committee compiling the draft for reorganization of the league of nations had accepted all of the twenty-two articles and had referred the constitution to a subcommittee for a partial redraft, necessitated by some minor changes.

One clause accepted is that the league shall have an international army as well as navy.

The committee will meet tomorrow to complete the minor redraft.

Other Questions Decided.

Two other questions of vital interest were decided by the peace conference today. They may be summarized as follows:

A supreme economic council to handle all questions of finance, food, blockade, and control of shipping and raw materials was established at the suggestion of President Wilson. The new council, which will relieve the supreme war council of much routine work, will consist of five members of each interested government.

On President Wilson's recommendation, two civilian representatives of each government were added to the armistice commission. This will have the effect of removing the armistice terms from absolute military dictation under Marshal Foch.

INCREASE IN POWER

BY CHARLES A. SELDEN.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The plans for the league of nations go much farther in the use of force than was originally contemplated in the American scheme, according to an explanation given this morning by Ferdinand Larnaude, associate of Leon Bourgeois as French member of the commission.

M. Larnaude apparently had authority from his associates today when he sent for the correspondents and outlined the progress that had been made.

According to M. Larnaude the much debated question of enforcement of the league's mandates apparently will rest, in the last analysis, with moral suasion.

What the League Comprises.

The plan agreed upon, M. Larnaude said, embraces these principal features:

First—The league shall have an executive committee, with full powers, always in session, the ten or twelve members being appointed by the larger powers directly, but acting for the entire league.

Second—There is to be a judicial tribunal, before which nations may be ordered to appear by the executive body to settle differences.

Third—There is to be an international parliament, sitting once a year, with delegates from all the member nations, to consider world legislation.

Fourth—There is to be an international military force, consisting of an army as well as a navy. Each nation is to maintain its part of this army within its own borders, subject to call by the executive body of the league, to serve wherever needed.

How Force Is Used.

The military force of the league is used only to compel the nations to avail themselves of the preliminary machinery of the league to settle their differences without war. If this machinery fails, the war will be permitted without further interference by the league, provided the belligerents observe such rules and regulations of warfare as may be formulated by the league.

It is further planned that an economic boycott and similar forms of pressure will be used to bring to terms any nation which wants to fight.

The insistence on an effective land and sea force came from France, which refused to consider a league without

HERE'S A MAYOR!

Two-Fisted Talk by Ole Hanson, Seattle's Executive, Touching the Strike, the I. W. W., and Americanism.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 8.—Mayor Ole Hanson today issued the following statement regarding Seattle's general strike:

"Two years ago 15,000 workmen were employed in the industries of Seattle. There are now 65,000. The unions have admitted to their ranks under the stress of war conditions every bolshevik and I. W. W. who desired to join. These men have secured control of many labor organizations. The conservative members have shown their yellow streak by allowing the foes of organized government to run their unions and their affairs.

"When the shipyard strike was called the men went out unwillingly in most instances, although there is a feeling that the lower paid men were not getting sufficient wage when figured on the present cost of living.

"Then the radicals, having read of the revolution in Petrograd, tried to duplicate the initial steps of the same here. They wanted to run our light plant and all industries, believing that we would surrender because of economic pressure and suffering of our people. They had forgotten the lesson Germany acquired when they tried the policy of ruthlessness.

"The city government told them to go to hell—that all things would run as long as there was a government and made no concession to the revolutionists. They closed down the newspaper plants through fear of injury of the employés of newspapers.

"Business, always cowardly, hunted its hole for a little time until I announced that all people would be protected to the last man and that we had 1,500 men armed with rifles to kill on sight any one that caused disorder.

"Yesterday I notified the strike committee that at 8 o'clock this morning everything would operate. Everything is activity in Seattle this morning. Every municipal car is running. Our light plant has never shut down one minute. Neither has our water plant. Gathered in Seattle are Joe Ettor of Lawrence, Mass., fame; Mucky McDonald and men of his stripe from all over the union.

"Gathered here are hundreds and thousands of Russian bolsheviki who have arrived here during the last two years. These scoundrels want to take possession of our American government and try to duplicate the anarchy of Russia.

"The seat of government is the city hall. We swore in 1,000 extra police and hold in reserve citizens armed with rifles and shotguns. I gave orders to shoot on sight any disturber of the peace. They know from the experience they had at the riot a few weeks ago that we meant business and, believe me, we did.

"I wanted a showdown. If there is a majority of these fellows in the United States I don't want to live here. They told me the troops were disloyal and would not help us. I told them that was a lie, but even if it was so, we would fight until we were dead before we even allowed them to turn out one eight candle power light.

"Chief of Police Warren is a real man who loves his country. We decided that we would not call in the federal troops. If they are called in to quell disorder some one else must call them. We won't be here. The great body of union men saw the light. Today they are bitterly resenting their false leadership and will overthrow their officers in many unions.

"This is a test of unionism or I. W. W.ism. If any one owes higher allegiance to any organization than they do to this country, they are traitors and should be treated as such. That is all there is to it. This is a time for union men to stand up and be counted. This is a time when every American must forget all other allegiances and stand by the government.

"The unions of the nation are on trial. They are either American Federation of Labor loyalists, or bolshevik traitors.

"This morning the strike is broken Business is resuming. Strikers are returning to work. Our city no longer lies prostrate. Ninety per cent of Seattle stands firm for Americanism. The other 10 per cent will be driven from this community."

Oil Found in England by American Drillers

LONDON, Feb. 8.—American drillers, working for the government, have struck oil in a well near Brimington Derbyshire. No announcement is made as to the extent of the flow. Six wells are benig put down in Derbyshire, testing what is believed to be an extensive oil field.

BIG SEATTLE STRIKE NEARS END, BELIEF

Business Resumed; Unions Considering Settlement.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 8.—Faced by desertions in union ranks, coupled with results brought about by Mayor Ole Hanson's ultimatum that troops would be used if necessary to restore Seattle's business to normal, the sympathetic strike, involving about 55,000 workers, seemed near its end tonight.

The general strike conference committee continued in session tonight discussing whether or not to call off the sympathetic strike.

During the afternoon business fast began assuming normal conditions. Municipal street cars had been operating all day. Late in the day Puget Sound Traction company cars, with a soldier and special police officer on the rear platform of each, were taken out.

All papers except the Times and Post-Intelligencer have appeared. Tonight these newspapers announced they would resume publishing regular editions on their own presses regardless of the strike situation.

Backbone Appears Broken.

Similar signs that the backbone of the strike had been broken appeared in various ways, so that it was believed by city officials that all workers, except possibly the 25,000 metal trades men of the shipyards, would be back at work by Monday.

These men went out Jan. 21, asking for increased wages. The sympathetic strike was called Thursday morning.

Four causes for the strike's expected failure were given by city officials. The first was the fact that the city maintained operation of light and gas utilities, many men refusing to strike; the rationing scheme adopted by the strikers of using twenty-one "soup kitchens" to feed strikers failing to function properly; the presence of regular army troops, and the evident lack of public sympathy.

Label Immune Vehicles.

Taxicabs bearing the signs, "This car exempted by organized labor," following hearses in funeral processions, were among the unique spectacles presented. Wagons of a laundry company allowed to operate to supply hospitals with clean linen and the city's garbage wagons also bore exemption signs. All such signs were ordered removed by Mayor Ole Hanson today, who said:

"We will operate all wagons and trucks we need without signs."

Police and fire department men, it was said, were driving an oil company's gasoline truck to supply fire and police stations with gasoline.

BUTTE STRIKE QUIETING

Butte, Mont., Feb. 8.—With United States troops patrolling the approaches to the principal mines of the Butte district tonight the companies continued hoisting ore, although with greatly reduced forces, despite a general strike call issued last night by the Industrial Workers of the World in protest against a wage reduction of $1 a day because of a decline in the price of copper.

Twenty strikers were arrested today charged with disorderly conduct. In the number were two men wearing uniform and said to be returned soldiers. Considerable disorder was reported today, mainly early this morning, before the soldiers had been stationed in the vicinity of the mines. Little trouble has been experienced since picketing of the mines was interrupted by the troops.

More Soldiers Expected.

Additional soldiers are expected to arrive here tomorrow, Sheriff O'Rourke having announced that more regulars have been ordered from Fort George Wright at Spokane.

Early this morning, as a result of plans agreed to at mass meetings held last night at the call of the local I. W. W. hundreds of striking miners, some of them armed, turned back men who started for work this morning, with the result that mining in the district is practically suspended this morning.

The pickets gathered at the I. W. W. hall at 6 o'clock this morning and left for the various mines in detachments large enough to picket the various avenues of approach. Miners in several instances were waylaid and beaten.

Mechanics whose unions have taken no action in respect to a strike, were held up and sent back from the mines by the strikers.

The I. W. W. strike has no connection with controversy between the city and the police and fire departments. The policemen and firemen were about to quit their positions because they could not cash their salary warrants and in anticipation of this the council late yesterday afternoon, ordered patrolmen and firemen discharged dating from next Monday.

Strike action of the I. W. W. followed notice of a reduction of $1 daily in the wage of miners, effective yesterday, the reduction being based on the price of copper and made in accordance with an agreement with the old Western Federation of Miners several years ago. Skilled miners now are receiving, under the cut, $4.75 per day. Late reports showed 1,400 miners out at several big mines.

Cut Wages at Globe.

Globe, Ariz., Feb. 8.—A reduction of 75 cents a day in the wages of employes in the copper mines, mills and smelters in the Globe-Miami district effective next Monday was announced tonight by the Inspiration Consolidated Copper company. Notices of similar reductions will be posted tomorrow by the Old Dominion company and the Miami Copper company, it was announced. Five thousand men will be affected by the new wage scale.

Tacoma Strike Appears Broken.

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 8.—The general strike in Tacoma tonight appeared to have collapsed. Street cars are running on their former schedules, theaters are open, stores have resumed business, and the barbers returned to work.

At Longshoremen's hall a meeting was in progress, it being admitted by members of the local that the object was to reconsider the vote on the strike which resulted in the determination to walk out two days ago.

Troops continued at their posts throughout the city tonight, although it was not believed that they would be needed.

CALL OUT BRICKLAYERS

New York, Feb. 8.—All union bricklayers and hoisting engineers employed in various cities throughout the country on contracts held by members of the Building Trades Employers' association of this city will be called out on a sympathetic strike Monday morning in an attempt to enforce the demands of carpenters employed by the association for a dollar a day increase in wages, William L. Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, announced this afternoon.

Textile Decision Deferred.

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 8.—An offer of fifty-one hours' pay for forty-eight hours' work was made to the general strike committee of textile workers at a meeting tonight by Charles G. Wood of the state board of conciliation and arbitration following a day of conference.

The offer was unofficially understood to come from the manufacturers as a compromise to the workers' demands for fifty-four hours' pay. Action was deferred until Monday because of the small attendance of delegates.

GASOLINE BLAST IN WISCONSIN TOWN KILLS TEN

Platteville, Wis., Feb. 8.—Exploding gasoline, ignited by an insignificant blaze in the basement of the Realty building here today, caused at least ten deaths, the injury of several other persons, and a property loss of nearly $200,000.

The building contained stores, flats, and offices, and was in the heart of the business district. When fire started the local fire companies were called, but they had only fairly started on their task of subduing the flames when the gasoline exploded. All four walls of the building were blown outward, the debris being thrown across the street and showering upon neighboring buildings.

The dead:

C. Raferty, owner of the building.

Clyde Gilmore, a fireman.

Otto Hale, a fireman.

Ernest Dickson, owner of a jewelry store in the building.

Glen Vanderdee, a merchant.

Espey Dunn, 14 years old, son of a physician with offices in the building.

Fred Steinhoff, a passerby, who was caught by the falling walls.

Milton Rotzell, found in building.

Leland Brambee.

C. Clestron.

Every physician and nurse in the city responded to the alarm, but there was little need for their services, the victims having been killed almost instantly.

TREAT 'EM ROUGH! YANKS DOING IT

Apparently life is not one sweet symphony for Germans inhabiting the Rhinelands occupied by American troopers. Miss E. C. Percival of 4146 North Tripp avenue has just received a letter from her brother, Lieut. F. S. Percival at Coblenz, which reads:

"Our general headquarters has put out an order that all Germans in uniform shall salute our officers, and they get rather rough treatment from some of the boys if they don't.

"We had the German flyer who shot down Quentin Roosevelt here. The other day he had a crash and broke both legs and four ribs. When our mechanics saw him fall they cheered. Rather rough on him, eh?"

Cable dispatches recently carried a rumor of the death of this German flyer.

Pennsylvania Club Holds Luncheon, Elects Officers

The Pennsylvania society of Chicago at a luncheon in the Mid-Day club yesterday, elected the following officers: Dr. William E. Buehler, president; Charles Piez, J. Rex Allen, John H. Stehman, and L. E. Myers, vice presidents; P. S. Goodman, secretary and treasurer. Charles M. Schwab was elected an honorary life member for "his work during the war." Gov. Spoul of Pennsylvania also was elected an honorary member.

Spanish War Veterans Hold Annual Roundup

The annual roundup and dance of the Military Order of the Serpent was held in the Congress hotel last night. The order is composed of Spanish war veterans and the ceremony and dance was for the benefit of the relief fund for members who served in the recent world's war. It was founded in Cleveland in 1904.

LULL IN STRIKE DOES NOT STOP BRITISH PERIL

Every Effort Is Made to Avoid Break Just Ahead.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The government settled the strike of the underground railway motormen again early this morning. Official notice was given out that an agreement had been reached and the men were ordered back to work by the union.

But few, if any, of the men went back. None of the tubes was running late this afternoon. The feeling is said to be that it is not worth while to start again before Monday. And on Wednesday the government and railroad unions start negotiations which may result in a nation-wide strike and tie up all transportation facilities.

Careful reading of the agreement between the government and the union does not show that the men have gained any of their demands or that the underground railway has yielded a single point.

Other Unions Discuss Strike.

The national officers of the Electrical Workers' union, whose London strike seems to have completely fizzled out, will meet at Manchester tomorrow to decide what if any action shall be taken next week.

The national officers of the Coal Miners' union will meet with the government to discuss the six hour working day, higher wages, and the proposal that the government shall take over all of the mines in the kingdom.

These three decisions involve transportation and fuel, the foundation of all trades and prosperity, and the future of the United Kingdom is deeply involved in them.

Chase Out Bolshevik Agents.

Meanwhile the government is taking steps to prevent further preaching of the bolshevik doctrines in these islands. M. Soemus, the Russian violinist, an avowed disciple of bolshevism, who has been touring the coal mining regions of Wales, where he has fiddled and preached bolshevism, was arrested and is locked up in the Brixton jail. He will be deported to Russia together with a number of other undesirables.

Steps are being taken to satisfy labor. With the opening of parliament Premier Lloyd George will make an important address chiefly devoted to the labor questions. Almost at once—perhaps on Wednesday—the government will introduce bills creating a new department of national health, providing funds and methods of building thousands of houses and other measures dealing with the vexed period of reconstruction.

Carried in Army Lorries.

The government today sent out more than a thousand huge army trucks, which ran all day between the various suburbs and the heart of the city, carrying all who applied free of charge. The running of these trucks, manned by men in khaki, further aroused the anger of the strikers and other trade unionists.

The taxi drivers' union, to which most of the army motor drivers belonged in civil life, sent a formal protest to the secretary of war declaring that their members did not enlist to break strikes and hinting that if the army lorries were not immediately withdrawn their men in the army might take some concerted action.

A large number of private motor car owners also sent their machines out to the suburbs in the morning and brought them down to the city filled with workmen and women who would otherwise have had to walk.

Member of House Hit.

A member of parliament who was lucky enough to get a bed at my hotel last night went to the Waterloo station this afternoon to take a train for his home in Hampshire, some sixty miles out. He was told there were no trains and no prospect of any. He rushed back to the hotel to find they could not give him a bed for the night. He telephoned to four of the largest garages in London for a car to take him to his home. He was informed there was probably not a car in London which was not engaged. Finally he got his house in the country on long distance and ordered his own car sent to get him.

We now face the prospect of riding all night over dark roads in a motor car or sleeping on a billiard table. And all the complaint he had to make was "It is beastly awkward." Thousands of returning soldiers on leave are sufferers from the strike. One sees them carrying their big packs for miles over the London streets, and today scores found themselves unable to get down to their homes in the country because of the stoppage of trains.

Urges the Restoration of Hungarian Kingdom

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 7.—[Delayed.]—A resolution demanding the reëstablishment of the kingdom of Hungary was adopted yesterday at a public meeting in Budapest, according to a dispatch today from the Hungarian capital. Great enthusiasm is said to have been shown at the meeting when the resolution was adopted. The agitation for the restoration of the monarchy is reported to have caused great unrest and the government is taking strong measures to suppress the movement.

SURPLUS OF LABOR STILL ON INCREASE, DEPARTMENT SAYS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—A "much heavier increase" of unemployment this week is reported by the labor department today. The percentage of cities reporting surpluses of labor has risen from 50 to 57. Cities reporting shortages of labor have dropped from 13 to 11 per cent. Supply of labor equal to demand was reported by 32 per cent of the cities, compared with 38 per cent last week.

"Slight surpluses are reported throughout the state of Illinois," says the report, "with Chicago reporting the supply about equal to the demand. The largest amount of unemployment in Illinois is in the building trades. There is an urgent demand for locomotive machinsts, boilermakers, and a surplus of about 1,200 clerical workers.

"Detroit reports 35,000 unemployed, which is an increase of 2,000 over last week. Grand Rapids reports a surplus of 2,500, which is an increase of 500 over last week. Unemployment throughout the state is increasing.

"Minneapolis reports a surplus of 5,000, the same as last week. Duluth and St. Paul report the supply about equal to the demand. There is a heavy surplus of clerical workers throughout the state.

"Milwaukee, which last week reported a surplus of 10,000, now reports a surplus of 11,000. Superior reports a surplus of 1,000. Racine reports the supply about equals the demand. The heaviest surplus in the state seems to be in the building trades and helpers.

"Indianapolis reports a surplus of 5,300, an increase of 500 over last week. Evansville reports a surplus of 1,500. Fort Wayne, South Bend, and Terre Haute report surpluses of about 500 each."

SHOE SHORTAGE OVER IN MUNICH

MUNICH, Feb. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Munich's scarcity of shoes, which was getting serious when the war stopped, has improved sufficiently so that during the next six months there will be available a supply large enough to fit out 75 per cent of the population with one pair for each person. Shoe dealers have demanded the suspension of the card system for shoes, whereby a person was entitled to one pair a year. The dealers find themselves well loaded up with military shoes, for which there is little demand now, and will attempt to unload them at the government fixed price of $8 a pair.

WHY EMBARGO? ENGLAND ASKED, AND FRANCE, TOO

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The state department today addressed inquiries to the British foreign office respecting the British embargo, enforcement of which, it is feared by American business interests, will injuriously affect the export trade of the United States and possibly cripple some American industries.

The note to the British government does not take the form of a protest. Charges of discrimination against the United States have been lodged with the state department, and it is to determine if these allegations are well founded that the department has instituted an inquiry.

It was learned also today that the state department has inquired of France in regard to the cartels which have been created by the French government through which that government will control the purchases of materials in the United States to be used in French reconstruction work.

Brundage Refuses to Indorse Security League

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Branding the National Security league as a "tool of Wall street and the interests," Representative Roscoe C. McCulloch of Ohio urged "punishment commensurate with the great wrong they had done" in testifying today before the special house committee investigating the organization.

His attack was followed by a telegram from Edward J. Brundage, attorney general of Illinois, denying all connection with the league and assuring Representative Fred A. Britten of Chicago, who introduced it in the hearing, that the Brundage faction had not opposed the reëlection of Mr. Britten.

Rights of Small Nations.

"It shall be declared that the work day in industry and commerce shall not exceed eight hours a day except in case of extraordniary emergency, such as danger to life or property;

Adequate Wage for Work.

"The sale or use for commercial purposes of articles made or manufactured in private homes shall be prohibited;

"It shall be declared that an adequate wage shall be paid for labor performed—a wage based upon and commensurate with the standard of pay conforming to the civilization of the time;

"That equal wages shall be paid to women as is paid to men for equal work performed;

"The incorporation of the points laid down by President Wilson."

Thoughts for the Times Prompted by Conditions in Seattle and Butte

BY CHARLES H. WACKER.

[Chairman of the Chicago Plan Commission.]

Foreign statesmen, acting on the truth that "self-preservation is the first law of nature," have been eager and quick [as already shown] to safeguard the interests of the countries which they represent. They look upon this as a duty; our statesmen must do the same.

In this country we "do things on the great American plan of going in first and getting ready afterwards." Today we are as unprepared industrially for peace as yesterday we were unprepared for war.

But if our people will now turn their united and undivided attention to the restoration of industry with the same zeal, fervor, and patriotism with which they devoted themselves to the war, the same brilliant record may be made for peace and prosperity.

Yesterday we were the deciding factor in winning the war for democracy. Today we are engaged, wholly without preparation, in a serious and dangerous commercial struggle which, if not wisely and justly directed, may lead to consequent disastrous and calamitous internal trouble.

The reconstruction and rehabilitation period is at hand. How long will that period last? No one can tell, but I venture to predict that it will last two years, or at least until all of our boys have been returned and permanently placed in remunerative positions.

To talk in generalities means nothing. This discussion will be of no value save as it contains a concrete suggestion for bridging the chasm.

Not only the federal government, but also all state, county, city, and village authorities should immediately order the prosecution of needed public work. In this way employment would be provided for men in every nook and corner of this great country. Such work on a big scale would set humming in motion the wheels of every branch of industry.

The far reaching effects of a comprehensive building and public works program may be compared with the erection of a skyscraper.

Many persons see only the exterior—the height, the breadth, the number of stories, and the cost. These are the outward show and represent merely a part of the many industries employed in its construction. What actually goes into the building is the material, the work, and the product of scores of industries.

First, the common laborer makes ready for the foundation with the pick and shovel. Skilled labor follows with the sinking of the caissons; bricklayers, stone masons, and concrete workers come next; then stonecutters, structural ironworkers, and carpenters. Following these are the roofers, glaziers, and painters. Then the host of interior workers—metal workers, electricians, plumbers, marble workers, plasterers, interior decorators, gas and electric fixture and telephone people, sign painters, window shade and ventilator adjusters, and others.

Back of all these are the ramifications of business, the manufacturing, wholesaling, and retailing of commodities and wares of many kinds. Still back of these are the producers of raw materials from the mines, the quarries, the soil, and the forests. All this before the furnisher steps in to complete the job and make the place habitable. There is the sale of the real estate and the transportation of materials and wares. Hence every branch of human activity feels the radiating benefit of this single operation with its many diverse relationships.

So it is with the making of public improvements. A street improvement is not merely so much length and breadth. It is the employment of many kinds of labor, representing all sorts of business, from the production of raw material down to its manufacture, its wholesaling, and its utilization. After the actual street widening comes the "furnisher"—grading, paving, sidewalks, conduits, electric lighting, readjustment of street car lines, and grass and tree planting. In the wake of these is the vast rehabilitation of old buildings and the construction of new ones, involving the large employment of labor and material and money.

Business and labor are the direct beneficiaries in the largest and widest possible way and the indirect benefits affect the whole community.

Big public improvements inuring to the welfare of the people at large must be promptly undertaken. The carrying out of these will give employment to hundreds of thousands of unemployed, who otherwise might become dependents and the nuclei of revolution.

PLANS VOYAGE OVER ATLANTIC BY AEROPLANE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Secretary Daniels tonight permitted the announcement to be made that the American navy is planning to undertake a trans-Atlantic airplane flight and that it hopes to "beat the world" in its effort to negotiate the first aerial voyage between America and Europe.

Commander John H. Towers has been detailed for special duty in connection with the plans for the selection of naval personnel and material for the proposed flight.

Commander Towers will collaborate with Admiral Irwin, who is in charge of naval aviation, and with Rear Admiral Taylor, chief naval constructor, who will have charge of the work of the construction of the aircraft to be used. Selection of the pilots who are to attempt the voyage is being made.

FORM PERMANENT BOARD TO BRIDGE WAR-PEACE GAP

Illinois Employers and Labor Men Hold New Conference.

The second session of the conference of manufacturers and labor men, called by Gov. Lowden to work out plans for readjusting industries in Illinois to peace conditions, was held yesterday at the state industrial commission rooms in the City Hall Square building. Gov. Lowden presided.

A permanent organization was effected by electing William N. Pelouze, vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, chairman and George W. Perkins, president of the Cigarmakers' International union, secretary. An executive committee, to which the manufacturers and labor men each named five, elected William Beye of the manufacturers chairman and George C. Slater for the labor men secretary.

Gov. Lowden Is Pleased.

Gov. Lowden expressed himself as highly pleased with the progress thus far made and with the spirit of conciliation shown by both sides.

"There was the best of feeling between the representatives of both the manufacturers and labor," Gov. Lowden said. "The determination was expressed on both sides for a frank consideration of questions affecting employers and employés, as well as a firm determination to continue the coöperation in the field.

"It was recognized that most differences come from misunderstanding and that a better understanding between employers and employes must result in largely eliminating these differences.

Will Stimulate Industry.

"It was also believed that the better understanding thus brought about would help to stimulate industry generally and thus furnish more employment. Confidence in the future is one of the important conditions of business activity. This confidence has been strengthened by these conferences."

U.S. GETS CREDIT FROM AUSTRIAN FOR ENDING WAR

Enemy Strategist Points Out How America Turned Tide.

BY LADISLAV CZAPSKI.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

VIENNA, Feb. 5, via Paris, Feb. 8.—Field Marshal von Hoetzendorf, regarded by Austrians as one of the biggest strategist military leaders that the dual monarchy ever produced, in the first interview he has granted to an American newspaper correspondent since the United States entered the war declared it as his conviction that if America hadn't stepped in when she did the entente powers would have been beaten by the end of 1917.

"From the moment when America, for reasons which I do not understand even today, threw the gigantic weight of her man power, food, and wealth on the side of the entente things began to look darker and darker for the central powers," he said, speaking in French, with ease and precision. "It was at a moment when the armies of the central powers had Serbia and Roumania just where they wanted them. We stood far in the interior of Italy. We held Belgium in our grasp, while in northern France our position grew stronger in proportion as France's fighting power dwindled from day to day. We had just dealt a knockout blow to Russia, which lay at our feet helpless, and we were on the point of turning our concentrated strength against England.

England Remaining Enemy.

"England remained as our most formidable opponent, not so much because of her armies in Flanders, but, in the first place, because, thanks to her fleet, she held a knife at our throats. Even England wouldn't have succeeded in defeating us by starvation, as we had a powerful counter weapon in the shape of submarines, which in due time would have made a mere phrase of 'England's mastery of the sea.'

"It was at a moment like this that America flung herself into the conflict. At first we didn't take her intervention seriously, as we couldn't discern a sufficiently powerful motive behind her action.

"American idealism? In politics and diplomacy that term is used whenever it is expedient. The Lusitania? Ruthless U-boat war? There again you have pretexts. I feel there was exactly as much justification for the submarine war on the part of Germany as for the starvation by blockade on the part of England.

Outsiders Take Chances.

"Every outsider who deliberately enters a battlefield must be prepared to suffer the consequences. So with the American passengers on the American ships on the high seas, where England and Germany were at death grips. But whatever her motive, whether of high or low ideals, America decided to war against the central powers.

"When we later realized that she was in the fight to win or lose all, we did not at once give up all hope. It became our object to finish our other opponents before America could develop her entire striking force. Germany had this in view when she launched the big offensive in France and Flanders last year. To prevent Italy from sending aid to her allies, Austria had to strike a simultaneous blow on the Italian front. By this time, however, bolshevism had eaten its way into the Germany army, so that it gradually broke up under the allied pressure.

Italian Drive an Expedient.

"As regards our own offensive in Italy, the move was made out of the sheer necessity of seconding Germany, as in reality our strength in men and war material was unequal to the task.

"In a word, American money, food, and material, and, above all, her enormous possibilities as a source of man power, enabled our enemies to grow ever stronger at a moment when our human material resources began to decline, both in quantity and quality.

"The fact that America did not deploy all her purely military forces on the battlefield does not affect the truth of what I said. For the central powers were not defeated by the force of arms. They were forced to give way, partly owing to the spread of bolshevist ideas in their armies, in the case of the dual monarchy, and also owing to the decomposition of the fighting forces along nationalist lines, but in the first place, owing to the overwhelming superiority of the entente in man power, food, and material. America's entry in the war made this preponderance possible."

May Disclose Mystery.

Among the mysteries of his long military career, which the field marshal may disclose in his memoirs which he told me he will write, is his reason why he retired from the command of the Tirolian army group. As this occurred a month after the Austrian catastrophe on the Piave, it is generally thought that his removal was the result of military failure. The field marshal emphatically denied, in his talk with me, that he was in any sense responsible for the collapse of the offensive. He says as a matter of fact he warned Emperor Charles beforehand that the venture might prove a fiasco or worse. But the drive had to be made as a part of the central powers' offensive plans.

Conrad Gives Version.

The only explanation the field marshal himself would give was that as early as February, 1917, when he retired from the position as chief of the imperial general staff, he asked the emperor to put him on the retired list, but yielded when the latter ordered him to take Tyrolian command. After the disastrous offensive he again asked to be relieved, and this time the emperor granted him permission.

Conrad, who is a man of slight build, with small, brisk eyes and close cropped gray white moustache and sharp, nicely chiseled features, struck me as extraordinarily vigorous and young for his seventy winters.

PARIS HUMDRUM AS IT GETS BACK ON SOCIAL FEET

Display Slow Returning, but Problems Are Being Met.

BY GERTRUDE ATHERTON.
[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Nothing amuses me more in Paris than the envious letters of my friends. Misled by the perspective of history, which lends glamour and it is safe to say many fictitious incidents, they infer that "living in history," being "present at the greatest historic event since the congress of Vienna," means a series of brilliant pictures, peopled by famous personages as picturesque as they may possibly appear after emerging from the creative imaginations of gifted historians some fifty years hence.

Alas for romance (and for the anxious correspondents) nothing could be further from the truth. The congress is composed for the most part of elderly gentlemen, very much afraid of taking cold, who travel to and from the Quai d'Orsay in closed limousines to avoid being drenched to the skin. For it rains morning, noon, and night in Paris.

Social Functions Few.

Nor is the meeting of this great and portentous congress to be made the occasion for a brilliant series of social functions. As each of the delegates arrived he was given a dinner and reception by his ambassador, a public reception at the Hotel de Ville, and a luncheon at the Elysée. That ended it. In London, if the congress were held there, it would be quite different, and in brilliancy would eclipse anything in history. The British, generous and extravagant, entertain automatically, and in spite of short rations—they are far worse off than the French—would regard it as a matter of noblesse oblige to give this supreme "historic event" the setting it deserves.

Paris, the light, the frivolous (to the one-eyed outsider), closedup like a tomb. The girls and young married women would not even dance with the lonesome American officers (who were driven to waltzing or turkey-trotting with one another) lest their own men might even then be in the death agony.

The natural consequence is that England is running along quite normally, and France, since the day of the armistice, has gone dancing mad. It must be remembered that when the war broke out there was the usual crop of young girls just out the winter before or about to make their debut the coming season. Down went the social lid, off went all the young men to the front.

Reaction Is Setting In.

Now has come the tremendous reaction. It may be that Englishwomen have formed the habit of work, but the French girls, at least, never wish to hear it again. They want the long-withheld rights of their youth; they want to play and dance; above all, they want to marry. The last is to be a difficult proposition, for 1,800,000 Frenchmen lie under the field of honor, some 2,000,000 are mutilated, and 1,000,000 are tubercular. Although some 10,000 of our soldiers have married French girls, I cannot learn that a single American officer has succumbed. Insanity, hysteria, and all sorts of dire afflictions are prophesied, and many girls have already married outside their class, and, so far as can now be foreseen, the last is the only solution—a bitter pill for proud French families to swallow.

Of course, this determination to enjoy life once more means a constant round of private entertaining, simple as it may be; but the opera, at least, is making a desperate bid for some of the old external brilliancy.

Couldn't Borrow a Tiara.

When the king of Italy arrived in December a friend of mine was asked to the reception at the Italian embassy on the following evening. That meant a tiara, and all her jewels had been sent south during the bombing and the Bertha-ring. She went to one of the jewelers in the Rue de la Paix and asked if he could lend her a tiara for the occasion. He threw up his hands in amazement. "But, Mme. la Marquise, we have not made a tiara for years. There has been no demand."

Just before I left she went to the Opera house to buy her season tickets, and happened to meet the manager. "No jewels, I suppose?" she asked. "It will still be de rigueur to be very simple."

He, too, threw up his hands, but in despair, in entreaty. "But no, I beg of you, Mme. la Marquise. Please wear all your jewels. The women of Berlin are simply gorgeous at the opera. Shall Paris play second fiddle to the vulgar capital of the boche?"

Simplicity Not Permanent.

Let no one imagine for a moment that the result of this war will be a new simplicity except where the bank account is too lean to admit of any sort of extravagance.

I have another friend, belonging to the bourgeoisie, whose fortune was hit hard by the war. She still has her house, but long since gave up her car and extra servants. During the war, although she worked unceasingly in private œuvres and for the government, she managed to receive her friends as usual on Thursday, giving them the slim freshments everywhere in vogue. "Now," she told me when I met her again in December, "I must make every sacrifice to give my friends a sumptuous tea. So many tremendous fortunes have been made in my class during the war and they only waited for the fighting to stop to indulge in every extravagance."

I will only add here that my first friend, driving home through the Rue de la Paix, saw tiaras in every jeweler's windows.

NEXT LIBERTY LOAN TO BE THANKSGIVING SENTIMENT—GLASS

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 8.—The next Liberty loan will be a "thanksgiving loan" as well as a "victory loan" and must be floated in a spirit of patriotism rather than on a cold commercial basis, Secre- Glass declared in an address here tonight before the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

"A little thought will teach the wisest among the financiers that it is impossible now to float, purely for investment purposes, a loan of $5,000,000,000 or $6,000,000,000,' Mr. Glass said. "We have got to appeal to the patriotism of the American people and it will not be done in vain.

"The honor of the government is involved. Being your government, it is your honor that is involved. Four Liberty loans have 'gone over the top' and nothing nor anybody can shake by faith in the purpose of the country to put the capstone to the splendid structure of national credit by making the victory loan an abundant success.

"The American should supplement the patriotism of war by the patriotism of peace.

"When I am told of the difficulties which will beset the victory loan I refuse to lose faith in the enduring patriotism of the American people. I decline to believe that the fathers and mothers who gave 4,000,000 sons to die if need be that liberty might survive will now haggle over the material cost of saving the very soul of civilization from the perdition of Prussian tyranny."

FOOD CONDITION IN VIENNA SOON TO BE ON SCREEN

U. S. Photo Officer in Austrian Capital on Picture Stunt.

BY LADISLAV CZAPSKI.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

VIENNA, Feb. 6.—[Via Paris, Feb. 8.]—After staying in Berlin throughout the Spartacan fighting, of which he has a pretty complete picture record for the American army's archives, Lieut. A. J. Sutton of Washington, D. C., United States signal corps, arrived in Vienna yesterday to make movie films and still photographs of food conditions in the Austrian capital.

Rich Drink; Poor Starve.

On his way from Berlin Sutton spent several days in Prague, where he photographed the municipal soup kitchens and other public eating houses which have been established to ward off famine. He says he was struck by the deep contrast between the mode of living of the wealthier classes and the poor populace. While the former crowd the cafés in the evenings, eating sumptuously and drinking champagne in unlimited quantities, the average classes must subsist on two small bowls of soup daily, because of the high prices.

Sutton, whose food films will be shown at the picture theaters of the United States under the auspices of the Committee on Public Information as a part of its propaganda upon the feeding of the central powers, says it is a mistake to say that the Czecho Slovaks have plentiful stocks of foodstuffs.

Fancy Food Obtainable.

Almost any kind of food, including the fanciest of pastries, can be obtained at first class hotels and restaurants, but the prices are ridiculously high.

American visitors, few and far between, continue to be treated by the Czecho-Slovaks with marks of the warmest friendship. When an American officer enters a crowded café, the orchestra breaks off the piece it is playing and launches into "Yankee Doodle" or "The Star Spangled Banner," the guests springing to their feet and yelling and cheering for America.

Say Starving Armenian Women Eat Children

Reports of women luring children in their houses, killing and eating them, to relieve famine, came yesterday to the committee on Armenian and Syrian relief.

"It seems too distressing to print," said the representative of the committee, "but it is only a vivid reminder of the awful needs of these people. The report came to us from Beitna, Beirut."

Dr. Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago will speak in the interests of the relief work at 11 o'clock today in Central church, the Auditorium theater, and on Monday before a joint meeting of the ministers' associations at the Illinois theater.

Three Naval Flyers Killed by Fall at Pensacola

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 8.—Three naval flyers, Ensigns Duane Rutledge, Robins, La.; David Mingle, Tyronne, Pa., and Ralph McCormack, East Boston, Mass., were killed last night when their hydro-airplane from the training station here fell 500 feet into the bay and was demolished.

WOUND STRIPE IS PASS

Last night was a big night for wounded men and convalescent warriors. A big entertainment—mostly girls—was given at the First Regiment armory, Sixteenth street and South Michigan avenue, under the auspices of the Council of Foreign Language Women.

Wound stripes served as tickets of admission. Among the young women taking part in the chorus, representing various "nations," were Miss Menette Marchand, France; Miss Marjorie Monroe Grant, Scotland; Miss Bessie Keating, Ireland, and Miss Gudwin Gerner as "Columbia." Miss Cornelia Kodl, portraying Holland, was one of the most popular characters.

Women who helped arrange the work of the chorus were Mrs. E. W. Bemis and Mrs. Stephen Hyrniewiecka. Convalescent men from the Fort Worth and Chicago hospitals were guests.

WILHELM SHUNS PUBLICITY NOW; TO TALK LATER

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Former Emperor William may issue a statement and see correspondents at some date in the future, but at present he cannot receive newspaper men.

This is made clear in a letter from Count von Bentinck, the former ruler's host, to the Paris correspondent of a Roman publication who had requested an interview. The count says that the former emperor recently refused to see American and British correspondents, as he wishes to live henceforth as a private citizen. The letter concludes:

"'For the moment,' the emperor said, 'it is fitting to observe silence. The day will come when I ought to speak and shall.'"

$125,000 FIRE AT OTTAWA.

Ottawa, Ill., Feb. 8.—Fire which destroyed the Boston store with a loss of $125,000 last night, was still burning fiercely today and firemen were battling to prevent spread. The store was the largest in the city.

ALLIED ARMIES FORCE RETREAT OF BOLSHEVIKI

ARCHANGEL, Friday, Feb. 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—British and Russian troops, supported by American machine gun and trench mortar units, began an attack at 10 o'clock this morning against the bolsheviki on the Petrograd road south of Kadish. There have been no final reports on the results of the fighting.

The infantry went forward after the Canadian artillery had silenced the enemy artillery in a bombardment of several hours.

Protect American Lines.

The attack was made for the purpose of protecting the American positions at Sredmakrenga, about thirty miles eastward, from a flank attack.

The bolsheviki are shelling the American positions in the Vaga sector continuously.

All Males Must Serve.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The bolshevik government has decided that all males in Russia, irrespective of nationality, must serve in the Red army, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company.

Poles Defeat Bolsheviki.

WARSAW, Feb. 5.—[By the Associated Press.]—Polish forces have occupied Bialystok, about 115 miles northwest of Warsaw, and the danger from the bolshevists is diminishing along the Polish frontiers. The Czechs continue their advance in Galicia.

Irish Republic Worth $220 to Chicago Man

An Irish republic is worth $220 to Samuel Matson of 4443 Lamon avenue. He has a $50 bill which the "Republic of Ireland" promises to redeem with $50 and interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum six months from the time of acknowledgment of the independence of Ireland or with 6 per cent interest bearing government bonds payable in five years from that date. The bill was issued May 1, 1866. Mr. Matson bought it for a few dollars thirty years ago. The value with accrued interest is now about $220.

GIVING GERMAN LANDS TO POLAND CALLED AN ERROR

Peoples Would Retrograde, Lichnowsky Asserts.

BERLIN, Tuesday, Feb. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—"The surrendering of any portion of German territory to Poland would mean not only that that portion would be dragged down to the level of a less efficient, less orderly, and less developed economic administration, with its resultant great economic damage to the inhabitants of the lands affected, but would also destroy northern Germany."

This conviction was expressed to the Associated Press by Prince Lichnowsky, the former German ambassador to Great Britain, in the course of a conversation concerning peace questions.

It is understood that he is to be a member of the German peace delegation. In his opinion it is misleading to speak of any Prussian border districts as having an "undoubted Polish population."

Says Cities Are German.

In upper Silesia there are districts, he admits, in which the Poles have a numerical preponderance, but the cities and villages, he says, are preponderately German, as are also nearly all the industries and larger landholdings. He contends that the Poles here are not real Poles, as they do not even speak Polish, but a dialect.

The material condition even of the Poles themselves, according to Prince Lichnowsky, would become much worse if they came under what he termed "Polish misrule" and were cut off from Germany. Industries and coal mines would be ruined if they lost the German market. Transportation to German consumers would be impossible without railway rebates such as have long been granted.

Posen and West Prussia.

Of Posen and West Prussia, Prince Lichnowsky said: "These provinces were at the census of 1910 inhabited by 1,946,663 Germans and 1,861,942 Poles. It is well-nigh impossible to trace a clear line of demarkation. Of the seventy-two counties not a single one boasts a purely Polish population. Danzig, Marienwerder, Bromberg and Posen, the first three have a preponderance of Germans, and even in the district of Posen the German population reaches a percentage equal to the population of eastern Galicia, which is claimed by the Poles.

"In the first three districts the populations are vastly more German than foreign, Danzig counting 97 per cent Germans; Thorn, 67 per cent; Graudenz, 86 per cent, and Marienwerder, 96. Only within the district of Posen do the town populations present slight Polish majorities."

Should Join Russia.

"From geographic, as well as economic considerations," he continued, "the natural and real solution of the Polish question is for Poland to become part of the greater Russian federal republic. That would solve at the same time the question of a Polish seaport and a Polish market."

Prince Lichnowsky declared that a propaganda was being carried on by the Poles in the German border districts, and that a strike movement had ben inaugurated in Upper Silesia by Polish agitation. It had assumed a decidedly bolshevist character, he added, "the strikers demanding above all that no military measures should be taken to protect the frontier against the Poles."

He proposed as a solution of the Polish and Czecho-Austrian problems the union of all parts of former Russia, including Poland and Galicia, into a United States of Russia, and a similar union of German-Austrian, Czecho-Slovak, Magyar, and Slovenian states, with the inclusion of Triest, on condition that Germany keep her eastern boundaries, which, he declared, are indispensable for a peaceful and effective reconstitution."

"LURE OF PARIS" IS DUPLICATE OF CHICAGO'S OWN

Danger Is No Greater and American Can Protect Self.

BY PERCY HAMMOND.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Parents are uneasy at home, we are told, for fear their soldier boys in Paris may stumble, if not fall, among the city's scarlet snares. Here they are, you suspect, poor innocents, exposed to all the hazards of this metropolis of wine and women, pitifully imperiled by the crimson lip and the siren smile.

Sex has no tin helmet, you fear, and more than a trench is required to save a youthful he-man from cakes and ale and a good time. So, though they have sheathed the vengeful blade and rest in the calm repose of the armistice, our boys in France, their parents fear, are endangered as to their morals.

No Cause for Alarm.

I stir around among the so-called flesh pots of Paris bent upon an academic investigation of what simmers therein and I find no particular cause for perturbation. If your Henry or your Cuthbert is addicted to stepping about in his home town, be it Denver or Minneapolis or Kansas City, he will step about in Paris. If he flirts with Maude or Pearl in Los Angeles, he will trifle with Colette or Gabby in Montmartre.

On the other hand, if your Ralph or your Raymond is averse to beer and the brass rail, if he is bored by the propinquity of wild women and jazz time, preferring the fireside, he is reasonably secure against the traditional temptations of both banks of the Seine. The conduct of the Chicago soldier in Paris is similar to the conduct of the Chicago soldier in Chicago. He is as good in the Abbaye or the Savoy as he is in Colosimo's and Freiburg's.

The trouble with us American soldiers is that we think we have to take a tin horn with every drink. There is little reticence about an American in his cups. He is candid and unafraid. But since in Paris he is put out at 9:30 o'clock he is almost as safe as he would be in New York or New Orleans or San Francisco.

Prohibition and Other Things.

We have decided it in America with the Koran that there is a devil in every berry of the grape, that every hop has a cloven hoof and that a goblet containing a modest claret is a chalice of hell, full of beaded poisons. That decision is undubitably correct. Like Doctor Johnson we find abstinence easier than temperance.

Alcohol to many of us is a drug to make us forget, not a sprightly fillip to make us remember. Therefore it ought to be forbade. But in my two months gadding about France, where the grape is believed to be as harmless as a Jersey's udder, I, who am a prohibitionist, have seen this:

No drunken French officer.
No drunken French civilian.
One drunken French soldier.

And I have seen tens of thousands of French.

In brief, the morals of your gallant offspring are as safe in Paris as they would be in Jack's, New York, or in the Pompeian room of Chicago.

FRESH ATTACKS BY SPARTACANS IN COAST CITIES

Germany Menaced Anew as David Is Chosen President.

BERLIN, Thursday, Feb. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—The internal situation in Germany is seriously menaced by numerous Spartacan groups who are showing themselves in the north and east coast cities and at various places in central and southern Germany. The newspaper publication of war bulletins on happenings on the new German-Polish and German-bolshevik fronts adds to the nation's woes.

While the Spartacan insurgents have apparently been routed in Bremen, they are fomenting fresh riots at Hamburg, Kiel, and Lubeck and are becoming extremely bold in Dusseldorf, Gotha, Jena, Erfurt, and Eisenach. In Berlin government troops are carrying on a renewed search of houses for concealed weapons and ammunition because of the open threats of the communists that a new insurrection is being organized.

Rioting in Kiel on Wednesday resulted in a number of dead and wounded.

David Elected President.

WEIMAR, Friday, Feb. 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dr. Edward David, for many years one of the leaders of the German Social Democratic party, today was almost unanimously elected president of the German national assembly.

Dr. David is one of the under secretaries of state for foreign affairs. He received 374 out of a total of 399 votes, the Independent Socialists withholding their votes.

A Weimar dispatch dated Friday and received Friday night erroneously reported that Carl Kautsky, also an undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, had been elected president of the assembly.

Speech by New President.

Mr. David's speech was little more than a repetition of the words of Chancellor Ebert on Thursday, especially when he referred to Alsace-Lorraine and the union of Austria with Germany, both of these references being loudly cheered. He said that the old German structure had been destroyed and appealed to the assembly to build up a new and better house in the place of the old one.

Dr. David brought a wave of approval when he said that political self-discipline was a pre-condition to political self-determination and another when he declared that the assembly should be the headquarters of the free word.

"Ripe for Democracy."

Germany was a country ripe for democracy, he continued, but he warned the assembly that the eyes of millions of people in the world were directed toward it. Germany, he said, could earn the confidence of this world only by rapid creative work and must understand how to bridge the gulf to coöperative understanding.

His greeting to Alsace-Lorraine and the declaration that Germany would not stop insisting that it have the right of self-determination evoked a great demonstration, as did his reference to the Austrians, whom he said he hoped to be able to welcome as colleagues.

At Work on Cabinet.

The composition of the cabinet appears to be the principal problem commanding the attention of the new German lawmakers, meeting here in the national assembly.

The original proposition was to form a ministry of fifteen members, seven of whom should be majority Socialists, four Centrists, and four Democrats. The Majority Socialists, however, now are understood to be contending that they should be certain to have a majority which the Independent Socialists cannot disturb by any political maneuver.

The new ministers probably will bear the title of "imperial minister" instead of "state secretary." Several of them will be without portfolio, even though additional portfolios be created.

WORLD LEAGUE CALLED PERIL TO U. S. RIGHTS

"If Washington were alive today he would denounce a league of nations to enforce peace," S. S. Baldus, manager of the Extension magazine, official organ of the Catholic Church Extension society, declared in an address before the Irish Fellowship club at a luncheon of the club at the Hotel Sherman yesterday.

Mr. Baldus pointed out that the league would be made up for the most part of representatives of foreign governments, whose decisions will be binding upon the people of the United States and who have power to back up their mandates by force.

"If there had been in existence in 1776 such a league as I proposed, the mighty nations of that time would never have permitted us to declare independence," he declared.

"There would be no United States of America; we would still be a colony of Great Britain. Our struggle for independence would have made us a prey for the league."

Peter J. Peel, president of the club, named as delegates to the convention of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Philadelphia Feb. 22 and 23, Joseph A. O'Donnell, Michael L. Igoe, Judge John P. McGoorty, Joseph M. Coffey, and Ex-Gov. Edward F. Dunne.

He also announced a committee on arrangements for a meeting in Orchestra hall March 10 to welcome Charles N. Wheeler, war correspondent, who was in Ireland during the greater part of the war period.

Mob Seeks Negro Slayers to Burn Them at Stake

Sharon, Pa., Feb. 8.—Threatening to "burn them at a stake," a posse of 1,000 persons today was searching this vicinity for two Negro bandits who shot and killed Mrs. Stefanino Derotta, after robbing her grocery store at Petroleum, near here, last night. The woman's two daughters, aged 6 and 9, who witnessed the shooting, said one of the robbers held her while the other shot her through the heart.

such a force as a protection for her against Germany. Incidentally M. Larnaude said that the chief danger of war coming in the future would be found in Germany, the Balkans, and the new states in eastern Europe.

TO MAKE TERMS STRONG

LONDON, Feb. 8.—When the supreme interallied war council met in Paris today one of the questions which it discussed was the gravity of the relations between Germany and Poland, according to dispatches from Paris. The military danger with which Germany menaces Poland, it is felt, may threaten France later on. So far, it is declared, the Germans have turned a deaf ear to the injunctions of Marshal Foch in regard to the evacuation of territory claimed by the Poles. The Germans are holding an army in readiness to march into Poland and are concentrating troops in the east.

The war council is resolved, according to an Exchange Telegraph company dispatch, to compel Germany to carry out the clauses of the armistice and in the renewal of the armistice on Feb. 17 will probably impose such conditions that from the point of view of demobilization and disarmament all the danger threatening Poland will be removed.

A Reuter dispatch from Paris says it is declared in well informed French quarters that in view of the German attitude toward the Poles, the associated powers may think it advisable to consider the question of the occupation of the port of Danzig and the railroad from Danzig to Thorn with allied and Polish forces.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The official report issued by the league of nations committee of the peace conference, issued tonight, was as follows:

"At 10:30 a. m. today, at the Hotel Crillon, the commission of the league of nations held a meeting marked by the same accord of view that has characterized its previous sessions.

"At the end of the meeting the commission finds itself nearing the end of its task. A few matters were referred to a drafting committee for clarification, and these matters still require reference back to the commission. Certain points as originally accepted may be reopened for discussion before the committee makes its report to the conference.

"On Sunday afternoon the drafting committee above referred to, consisting of MM. Hymans [Belgium], Bourgeois [France], Lord Robert Cecil [Britain], and M. Venizelos [Greece], will meet in Lord Robert Cecil's room at the Hotel Majestic, in order to prepare a report for the next meeting of the committee."

An official report issued by the full peace conference in regard to the economic questions committee and the armistice committee said:

"The peace conference approved the following resolution proposed by President Wilson:

"First—Under present conditions many questions not primarily of military character, which are arising daily and which are bound to become of increasing importance as time passes, should be dealt with on behalf of the United States and the allies by civilian representatives of these governments experienced in such questions—finance, food, blockade control, shipping, and raw materials.

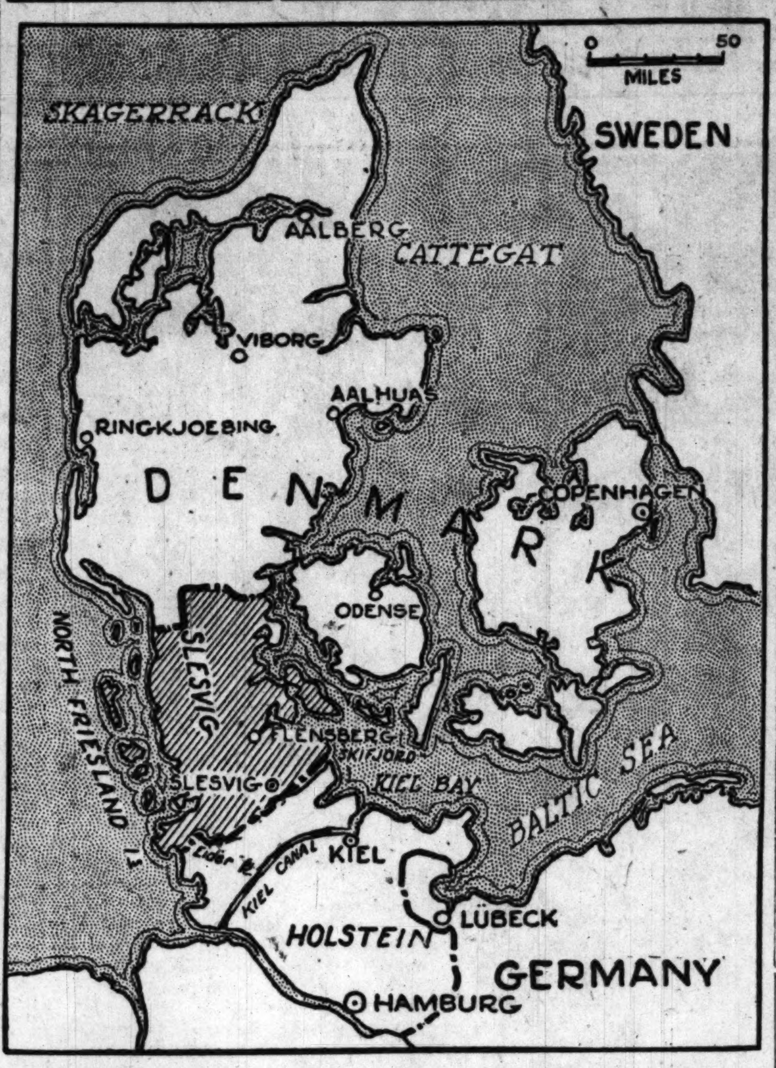
"Second—To accomplish this there shall be constituted at Paris a supreme economic council to deal with such matters for the period of the armistice. The council shall absorb or replace all such other existing inter-allied bodies and their powers as it may determine from time to time. The economic council shall consist of not more than five representatives of each interested government.

"Third—There shall be added to the present international permanent armistice committee two civilian representatives of each government, who shall consult with the allied high command, but who may report direct to the supreme economic council."

The Ukrainian soviet government has accepted the proposal for a joint conference at Prinkipos, it was announced tonight. It suggests, however, that the meeting be held at Paris instead, and says that the tentative date of Feb. 15 is too early.

The Russian political conference here, composed of Prince Lvoff, M. Sazanoff, and other anti-bolshevists, gave out a statement declaring that Foreign Minister Tchitcherin's acceptance of the invitation for the Lenine-Trotzky government is a repetition of Brest-Litovsk politics. The statement charges that the bolsheviki came into power through betrayal of the allies. It brands the bolsheviki promise to pay their debts to the allies as "a mere ruse, incapable of fulfillment."

DENMARK'S PEACE CLAIMS



The claims of the Danes at the peace congress, it is reported, will be confined to a demand that the northern portion of Schleswig be returned to them. This rectification of the boundary will bring back to Denmark only that portion of the lost provinces of Schleswig and Holstein that have remained essentially Danish in spite of the Germanization of the last half century.

Prof. V. L. Birk, writing in the National Tidende of Copenhagen, defines his country's aspirations as follows: "We do not desire a boundary line south of that which divides Danes from Germans. Under no circumstances will we be guardians of the Kiel canal."

This boundary is described by leading Danes as follows: "This line is the ancient rampart of Dannewirke, or Danes' work, which, together with the so-called rampart of Kovirke, extends from the Slifjord on the Baltic to the Spangebaeg and Trae-Aa, following that watercourse to its junction with the Eider river, and thence to the North sea. The Danes claim rightfully all territory north of this line, and south of it no Dane, who has the good of his country at heart, desires to go."

CHINA ATTACKS CLAIM MADE BY THE JAPANESE

Asserts World Must Decide the Issue of Freedom.

SHANGHAI, China, Feb. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—The China press today prints an editorial attacking the policy of Japan toward China's delegation at the peace conference, as revealed by demands made by Yukichi Obata, Japanese minister at Peking.

"Minister Obata's startling demand that China gag its delegates at the peace conference has done great service," the editorial says. "It has set forth effectively and opportunely to the whole world the issue of the far east. The issue is whether this hemisphere is Japan's domain or if China is still an independent nation.

Issue Growing Steadily.

"Since August, 1914, the issue has been growing. From Japan's ultimatum to Germany to what Minister Obata calls his friendly visit to the Chinese foreign office its development has been thoroughly and ruthlessly the logcial sequence of events—the taking of Tsing Tao, the widening of that wedge until it included a large part of Shantung, the sinister twenty-one demands, the Japanese contribution to the undoing of Yuan Shi Kai, the steady encroachments in Manchuria, the secret Russo-Japanese treaty, the blocking of China's entry into the war except under Tokio's aegis, the underwriting of the corrupt northern militaristic party, the series of nefarious loans that turned over the resources of an eldorado for a song, the setting up of a civil administration in Shantung, the arms alliance of 1918, all the other secret agreements, the Lansing-Ishii 'paramount interest' agreement, until now we have the naked question, Is China a Japanese colony?

Only One Meaning Possible.

"Can there be any other meaning of Minister Obata's demand? If China is denied the right to present its case before the peace conference, if its delegates can speak only by and with the consent of Japan's delegates, then it has no identity as a nation. Then it is a Japanese dependency.

"It is for the allies to answer and the answer will be implicit in the spirit that shall dominate the peace conference and in the form of the peace treaty. If President Wilson's ideals are really to prevail, if old world politics are to go, if the league be a vital force, then now, once and for all, we must set our face against this sort of imperialist far east.

Allies Must Accept Challenge.

"It is for the allies to accept Japan's challenge. The Chino-Japanese relations of the last four years must be aired. The Chinese delegates must be fully heard. The twenty-one demands must be reëxamined, the secret treaties scrutinized, the illegitimate ones cancelled. That to which Japan is justified by the test of the new international ethics, for which millions of us died, let it have—nothing more."

AMERICANS O ASSUME RULE IN MONTENEGRO

Natives Urge Major to Take Control for Present.

BY THOMAS S. RYAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

CATTARO Feb. 6, via Paris, Feb. 8.—The most extraordinary aftermath of the recent revolt was the coming of a deputation to Maj. F. M. Scanland, commanding the American battalion, with a request that he rule over Montenegro until the Serbians set up a new régime.

The revolution is calmed, for the moment at least. Up at Cettinje 165 doughboys are looked up to by all parties as the highest court of appeal. Every one trusts them. If they say "spades," nobody thinks of making it "clubs."

But those of us who came late can still listen to the echoes of discontent. At Antivare, just the other day, a Montenegrin rose at the New Year's feast [old calendar] and proposed "To the king!" and a companion shot him down. Then, too, in the very house where I live, the heavily cloaked figures wearing the Montenegrin kapa file up and down the stairway throughout the night and one of them, a self-styled lieutenant, told me that they would "try again."

Sniping Still Goes On.

Rumors of an uprising filter across from Albania, where the modern grenade supersedes the rifle in private quarrels. There are rebels scattered about Lake Scutaria; government troops are sniping them from the hills.

But Montenegro's next call to arms will find the people cold. Americanism has touched them. Mercy for vanquished, food and clothes for the helpless—these things are strange and sweet to the hillmen.

"We will wait for the great chief Wilson," they say.

And that, indeed, is a name to conjure with. In this old Austrian province the children wear "Wilson" written across their caps.

More Food on Way.

Meanwhile aid is at hand. The steamer Western Plains is leaving for Constantinople, but two other ships loaded with flour will enter the gulf this week. Capt. Lawrence is planning to make Antivari his base and to send [illegible] ton sloops up the Scutari river and [illegible] lake to the interior. He will deal with the government's central committee which, in turn, will transfer the supplies to the community bodies. Later he hopes to distribute pork, sugar, coffee, beans, and corn, the first two being of prime importance in the absence of fats and sweets.

Either Cattaro or Antivari will serve Montenegro and lower Dalmatia, while Ragusa will be the base for Herzegovina and Sparato for the most of Dalmatia.

At Zeelenika the American troops have promoted the public welfare by cleaning up the unspeakable filth left by two thousand five hundred Russian prisoners.

Red Cross Is at Work.

Coöperating closely with Capt. Lawrence is an American Red Cross unit now under the orders of Capt. E. J. [illegible]. Three doctors, thirteen nurses, and fourteen miscellaneous workers landed at Cattaro on Jan. 13 with medical supplies for the Montenegrins. Additional personnel and shipments of food are expected daily.

As influenza has been epidemic in many towns the unit now is quartered in Cattaro, carrying aid to the mountain districts, over almost impassable roads. Typhus, moreover, has been reported among the Lisgrins at Zeelenika.

This unit soon will move to Podgoritza, to make its abode in the former royal palace. Native doctors will work beside the Americans and in all probability will take over the task in July.

Prices Are Exorbitant.

While at Corfu, Greece, less than a day's sail from here, food seems abundant and fairly cheap, prices are soaring wildly in Cattaro. Lard, if found, sells at 15 kronen a kilo, and meats at 11 kronen, while flour bread is 10, mixed flour bread, 8; milk, 5, and eggs are 1 kronen each. Shoes are from 400 to [illegible] kronen a pair, candles are 3 kronen apiece.

But the price list, which I posted in my room, is more decorative than useful, as most articles, such as wearable [illegible], are not buyable. Yesterday an American lieutenant offered me $80 for a pair of shoes. Clothing and food in trade bring better bargains than the [illegible] of the realm.

Still the people are hopeful. The holidays, from Christmas, on Jan. 7, to New Year's, on the 14th, were celebrated as never before. We spent the Serbian Christmas at sea with a chorus of students from Belgrade, who were reunited from London, Paris, and other cities of refuge. They sang, and danced as in Belgrade days. But about it all was the fevered abandon of the moment, for none was sure of finding again his home or loved ones. There was warm hope in their Christmas songs and icy fear.

Lieut. Bartholf Is Cited; Was Aboard the Tuscania

Lieut. Herbert B. Bartholf (Pilot) U. S., One Hundred and Third aero pursuit squadron, No. 1842, has been cited for bravery and given the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action near Ancreville and [illegible], France. Lieut. Bartholf, according to the citation, is officially credited with bringing down two German planes of the Fokker type.

Lieut. Bartholf sailed from New York on the Tuscania and was rescued after the Tuscania was torpedoed and sank off the coast of Ireland Feb. 5, 1918. He is now in Paris awaiting orders to return to the United States. Lieut. Bartholf is the son of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] B. Bartholf of Glencoe.

CAKE OF SEVENTY-FIVE CANDLES

Forty Club's Birthday Anniversary Gift to Veteran Theater Manager Finds More Than One Interested Recipient.

Florence Eleanor Davis, Will J. Davis, Jessie Bartlett Davis

Will J. Davis, veteran theatrical manager of Chicago, celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary at his home, 4740 Grand boulevard, yesterday. Mr. Davis was the recipient of a pryamided cake, three feet in diameter, with seventy-five candles distributed over the four tiers. It was the gift of the Forty club.

Old time friends and members of the Forty club vied with each other in sending cheer and best wishes to Mr. Davis. Sam E. Kiser, the humorist, wrote as follows: "I wish you many more birthdays—in fact, I hope you may help the rest of us to become hilarious on some future birthday of yours twenty-five or thirty years after people who have made the country dry have been driven to drink because of their inability to think of anything else to do to make the rest of us unhappy."

"I would love to step in and shake you by the hand and maybe get you to mix me a toddy," telegraphed F. H. Wilson from Cleveland. Other prominent friends of Mr. Davis who sent their greetings were LaVerne Noyes, LeRoy Goddard, Fred Hallbach, Bennett Griffin, Daniel Frohman, Fred Ryder, Harry J. Sommers.

Mr. Davis' little granddaughters, Florence E. and Jessie B. Davis, were interested guards of the great cake.

SAYS FASHIONS OF PRESENT DAY DISFORM WOMEN

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 8.—Dresses which many women now are wearing are causing them to become "knock-kneed, knock-armed, and sway-backed," recently declared Mrs. J. Milton Mensendick in an address before the Twentieth Century club.

Dr. William A. Stecher, director of physical education in the Philadelphia public schools, agrees with Mrs. Mensendick that dresses which make women answer to that description are in style, but he asserts that there is no danger that they will become permanently disabled by their efforts to conform to the new fashions.

There is nothing the matter with woman's frame of body, but there is with her frame of mind, he said. In other words, she is not knock-kneed, etc., because she can't help it, but rather because she wants to be in fashion.

"Dr. Celia Mosher of Leland Stanford university says all of a woman's muscles can be developed to be as strong as those of a man," adds Dr. Stecher. "Women are men's muscular inferiors 10 to 33 per cent, statistics say. This is due to no innate disability, but to woman's dress and to traditional ideas regarding modest, feminine exercise.

"On the other hand, men are women's inferiors when it comes to feeling the cold."

Triangle of 12 Years Standing Comes to Court

One day the boarder left and Anthony Kolosawga made the discovery that Mrs. Kolosawga had left also. That was twelve years ago, in New York. Mr. Kolosawga came to Chicago yesterday and found wife and boarder, George Beyerin, living at 714 West Twenty-fifth place. Beyerin met him at the front door with fist and foot. Kolosawga countered. The police came. The triangle will be analyzed tomorrow in the Morals court.

BAKER'S PLANES OVERSEAS CLAIM BRANDED FALSE

Ordnance Worse Off than Flyers, Col. Byllesby Declares.

A direct charge that Secretary of War Baker falsified in saying the United States had several thousand airplanes in Europe when the armistice was signed was made yesterday at a luncheon at the Press club of Chicago by Lieut. Col. H. M. Byllesby, chief assistant in the purchasing department of the army abroad during the war.

Col. Byllesby also warned against future wars, seeing Japan as a possible adversary. He declared the only preventive is preparedness and universal military service.

Former Gov. Myron T. Herrick of Ohio also spoke and warned against the dangers of bolshevism.

Ordnance Scandal Loomed.

"I noticed in the papers a few days ago," said Col. Byllesby, "that the secretary of war stated that at the time of the signing of the armistice we had 9,000 or 10,000 airplanes in Europe.

"Well, part of my job was to know what that situation was and my figures are woefully and totally different from Secretary Baker's.

"I have every reason to believe there was an impending scandal—I don't mean of a military or graft nature—in the ordnace department. I have reason to believe the ordnance was far worse off than the aviation department."

Mr. Herrick told of dissension meetings being held in Cleveland, where Eugene V. Debs and others speak, and of their "fanning the flames of discontent" and anarchy.

Wants Bolshevism Ended.

He told of the crime wave there and of the enactment by the Ohio legislature of a statute under which he, as president of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Bar association, was enabled to name special prosecutors aside from the city law force to break up crime and sedition.

"I think it is high time," he said, "that every city in the United States makes these people understand—those who are not citizens of the United States and those who are—that if they plot against this government they will be deported, put behind the bars, electrocuted, or shot."

Several policemen escorted the delegation from the stage and then to the Union station, where Chief Tracy saw them safely bound for New York.

Wife's Return to Husband Frees Two in Morals Court

Charges of disorderly conduct against John Muste, a factory worker, and Mrs. Rose Boeder, both of Grand Rapids, Mich., were dismissed by Judge Frank Graham in the Morals court yesterday when the woman promised to return to her husband, Oscar, and John agreed to provide funds for the journey. They were arrested Thursday evening in a room at the Hotel Meyers, Twelfth street and South Wabash avenue.

FRENCH ORPHAN FINDS 47 LITTLE CHICAGO PARENTS

Pours Forth Heart to the Children Who Have Adopted Her.

Over in Bordeaux, France, at 11 Rue Reynard, there live 9 year old Marthe Peyronnet and her widowed mother. A Croix de Guerre, hung from the picture of a poilu in the uniform of the "Blue Devils," attests the manner in which the father died for his country.

Out at Keeler and West End avenues there is the Tilton public school, the eighth grade pupils of which have just embarked upon a shining adventure in philanthropy. They have adopted Marthe—each and every one of the thirty girls and seventeen boys in the class.

Pours Out Heart.

Already they have written her and sent her a gift and in reply she has poured out her heart in the following letter:

"I want to thank you very much for having the kind thought to adopt me. . . O, how grateful I should be, and if I were not so small and if it would not give my mother so much sorrow I would quickly cross the seas to come to throw myself into your arms and thank you for your kindness.

"It was a great joy when I learned that you shared our deep sorrow, which has been very hard for you. . . I thank you, dear little friends, and with sweet gratitude please receive the affectionate kisses of a little girl who loves you very much."

Buy Her Doll.

And here's a secret that Marthe mustn't know: She'll be 10 years old June 19, and yesterday a committee from the eighth grade went downtown and bought her a doll. And each of the thirty girls is going to make the doll a dress and everything.

ALL EUROPE FOR WORLD LEAGUE: MARY M'DOWELL

Social Worker Tells of Labor Conditions in England.

BY C. V. JULIAN.

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Public sentiment abroad is so thoroughly aroused in favor of the idea of a league of nations that the politicians of Europe do not dare to oppose it, according to Miss Mary McDowell, head of the University of Chicago settlement and social welfare worker, who arrived here today on the liner Baltic.

The amazing reception accorded to President Wilson in France and England was more of a manifestation of approval of the league of nations as outlined by him than it was a tribute to him personally or to the United States, she said.

Wilson Becomes a "Voice."

"President Wilson has ceased to be a man to the Europeans," she said. "He has become a voice. He has put into words the ideas that have been formulating in the minds of the people of war torn Europe during the last few years and which they themselves were unable to express in words. The ideas and ideals to which he gives voice are more than that to the people abroad—they are a sort of a religion.

"Americans abroad are convinced that the time has come when the United States must become a citizen of the world. They realize that never again can the United States be an isolated, provincial nation. It must take its place in the family of nations. America's future is inseparably bound up with the future of the world, and most of the Americans abroad realize it. I was opposed once to our abandoning our isolation, but I now am convinced of the necessity of it.

Warriors Against War.

"The fighting men of all nations feel that there must be no more war, because war has become too efficient. This applies to the American soldiers over there as well as to those of other nations. Canadian soldiers who came back on the Baltic with me and who landed at Halifax had the same idea.

"People who make a study of such things told me, however, that there is actually less disquiet among the working classes of England than there was during the ten year period which preceded the war. It is simply that labor troubles right now are receiving more notoriety. But that does not mean that labor has any intention of returning to pre-war conditions. The working classes are longing for normal conditions, but not for pre-war conditions.

Get Used to Baths.

"Among the women there are thousands who before the war never knew what bathing facilities were. During the war they went into the factories and every effort was made by the government, as a war measure, to care for their comfort. They lived in big social centers, where they enjoyed physical comforts and a social life they never knew before. They are never going back to the old life.

"The women of England are agitated over the servant problem. It is the only thing which is discussed at afternoon teas. They can't understand why the girls and women who have been wearing uniforms, receiving good wages, enjoying comforts they never knew, and experiencing some sort of social life for the first time, are not content to return to the work of housemaids, where they have no comforts and no social life. The agitated women have already forgotten to be grateful to these girls and women who held on in the munition plants and saved England from disaster.

New Plan for Servants.

"The women workers have become independent and schemes are being worked out whereby when they do servants' work they will receive wages large enough to permit them to buy their own meals and to live in their own homes or at socialc enters or 'hostels.'"

The young men who are coming back from war to take their old places in the factories do not mind the presence of women workers, but some of the older men resent it rather bitterly, Miss McDowell said.

Miss McDowell attended a labor conference where there were 1,000 delegates from London county, and the plan that was given most consideration was that of erecting 100,000 houses for workingmen in London. Labor is determined that the old tenements must go.

Speaking of the doughboys in Europe, Miss McDowell declared: "This is the most critical time for our men in France, as it is for our women workers who are over there. The stimulus of war is gone and they feel dissatisfied. They cannot see the necessity of their being there now, for one thing, and they are wild to get back home. If ever their morale was in need of strengthening it is now. They need all the social life possible."

Miss McDowell, who went abroad on a mission for the Y. W. C. A., said she would make a report in favor of the Y. W. C. A., opening social centers in Metz, Coblenz, and other places occupied by the A. E. F.

Regarding moral conditions in France and England, she said:

"An abnormal situation exists there now, and when you have an abnormal situation you cannot have normal moral conditions."

MISSING MEN LIST CUT DOWN DURING WEEK

"Unaccounted For" Now Number 7,783 in Gen. Pershing's Report.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8. — Last week's casualty report, showing more than 10,000 men of the expeditionary force missing in action, has been corrected to make the total 7,783.

Gen. March said today Gen. Pershing had reported the new total with the information that the figures were being reduced by from 100 to 200 names a day as a result of the checking of records in the central records office in France.

At the same time Gen. Pershing gave the war department new totals of casualties in the First and Second divisions, the marine brigade in the latter being included. They were as follows:

First Division—Killed in action, 2,303; died of wounds, 1,050; missing in action, 1,789; prisoners, 106; total, 5,248.

Second Division—Killed in action, 2,176; died of wounds, 1,329; missing in action, 1,067; prisoners, 148; total, 5,260.

Uncertain as to Rainbows.

Gen. March, chief of staff, said today that he had no idea when the Forty-second (Rainbow) division would be returned to this country

"The Forty-second division," he said, "is a part of the army of occupation. Within a reasonably short time the people in Europe, the allied heads and the president will have reached a definite conclusion as to what the size of the army of occupation will be, and the United States will furnish a certain number of troops. If they determine upon, say ten divisions, all the rest of them will be brought back, except the ten divisions, with their services of supply troops, and as has been announced it is our policy to bring the troops back to the very limit of our shipping. The determination of the number of divisions would first have to be made, and we would then have to decide which divisions were to make up the army of occupation and which were coming home."

May Parade in Washington.

"Is there any plan to bring the Forty-second division to Washington for a parade?" the general was asked.

"There is a very warm spot in Secretary Baker's heart for the Forty-second, and I shouldn't be at all surprised if that could be managed," he replied.

When asked if the department has any policy of selecting National guard units for return in advance of regular army, Gen. March said:

"There is no such thing. We have been trying to make one army of that outfit over there, and the fact is our replacement system has changed the men who were originally with any given division around so that they no longer represent the section from which they came originally."

The demobilization machinery is now at such a point of efficiency and operation, the chief of staff explained, that it is capable of handling more men than Pershing can possibly send, with available shipping. Of the troops in the United States only the overhead detachments, which must be maintained for future demobilization of returning units, will be left.

Gen. March said that demobilization in the United States now was on the home stretch. Up to yesterday a total of 67,038 officers and 1,033,512 men had been discharged, while the total ordered for discharge had reached 1,442,000.

236,824 Returned.

Up to Jan. 31, 236,824 men had been returned from France. The department estimates that 160,000 will be returned in February. This is an increase of 46,000 over the January total, due largely to the transformation of cargo vessels into transports. Gen. March said that fifty-one cargo ships had been ordered converted and that the first of these were now coming into service.

Plans for divisional parades in home cities have been upset by the irregular flow of troops homeward. Gen. March said the units were returning in such scattered form that in a great majority of cases it now seemed impossible that divisional organizations could be held together long enough for large parades.

ILLINOIS CITIZENS IN NEW YORK ASK TO AID TROOP WELCOME

GOV. FRANK O. LOWDEN has received a number of letters from former Illinoisans resident in New York, asking that they be included in any plans made for the reception of Illinois troops upon their landing from France.

The work of the Illinois committee is progressing. A number of leading New Yorkers, who formerly lived in this state, have held a meeting to form the Illinois committee, and have expressed willingness to defray all costs of the committee.

It is probable that within a few days an Illinois citizen of prominence will go to New York as agent of the governor, to arrange for coöperation between the New York committee and the state, and give the work of the committee the official status that may be required. It is believed by the governor that the headquarters will be established in a short time, and through it returning Illinois troops will receive not only a warm welcome on behalf of their state, but that all information and aid they desire will be afforded.

TWO AMERICANS SLAIN IN MEXICO

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—The recent murder of two Americans on an island in Tampico lake was reported today in advices from Mexico through official channels. The victims, whose names were not given, were beaten and shot.

The same advices also said that the manager of the Standard Oil company at Tampico was beaten and robbed of $10,000 on Jan. 21, and the paymaster of the Texas Oil company robbed of $4,000 near the same spot last Tuesday. The former was so badly injured that he was unable to make a report until four days later.

Ninety men working for oil companies in the Tampico district have been killed in the last year.

CITY TO EXTEND WARM WELCOME TO MAJ. GEN. WOOD

Chicago's official glad hand will be extended to Maj. Gen. Leonard A. Wood, newly assigned to the command of the central department, on Tuesday, when he reports for permanent duty at army headquarters, 230 East Ohio street.

Representative citizens, from the executive and arrangement groups of the city's welcoming committee, plan to invade the general's office at 3 p. m., bringing with them the expression of Chicago's good will, and extending a warm welcome to the new commander. Col. William Nelson Pelouze, chairman of the city's committee, will head the welcoming contingent.

Forty thousand dollars' worth of welcome can be accorded Chicago's returning heroes. A check for that amount, the result of city-wide contributions to the homecoming tag day fund engineered by Mrs. Frankenthal, has been deposited in the Central Trust and Savings Bank of Illinois to the credit of the welcoming committee. It will be checked out as needed for the entertainment of returning fighters.

Checks will be approved only after they have been signed by Clayton Smith, city treasurer, and countersigned by at least one member of the finance subcommittee appointed by the city council when the welcome home organization was formed.

Scores of welcome home badges, carrying the bronze seal of Chicago on a red, white, and blue ribbon, were distributed to members of the welcoming army who will wear them on all official occasions.

Preparations are afoot for the welcome of the Three Hundred and Thirty-first Blackhawk artillery regiment, which is scheduled to leave Camp Merritt for Camp Grant the latter part of this week, stopping from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. in Chicago to be fêted. The city may also greet hundreds of her hero sons in the Fifty-eighth heavy artillery regiment which will leave Camp Dix soon for demobilization in Seattle, Wash.

300 "BACK TO JOB" FLAGS.

The competition for a design to supplement the service flag and indicating the return of former employés to their former jobs closed yesterday with nearly 300 designs submitted. The judging of these will be done by the Bureau of Returning Soldiers and Sailors of the United States employment bureau. The Association of Commerce will pay the winner $50.

SSING NURSE CLEWS BLOW UP; POLICE AT SEA

Benson, Peoria, as Well as Bloomington Tips Prove Myths.

Two clews, expected to solve the mystery of the disappearance of Dollie Chesher, the Lake Shore nurse, blew up yesterday. It looked like a solution when D. J. Heineke of Benson, Ill., called up the police and said Mrs. Chesher was down there.

"She answers the description, missing finger and all," Heineke told Lieut. John Norton at the detective bureau. A general sigh of relief was heaved. The hunt was over.

Pretty soon the village marshal at Benson was on the wire. The authorities here wanted to know all about the capture. He explained:

"We thought we had her, but on second look her finger wasn't off at all."

The mysterious young woman who caused the excitement got off a Santa Fe train last night at 5:30 o'clock, without luggage, and began wandering about, according to Mr. Heineke, who saw her first. Benson is in Woodford county, not far from Peoria, where a hunt earlier in the day had centered.

Several saw the girl and then again they didn't see her. In a little while everyone in town, almost, agreed that she answered the description of Dollie Chesher to a T and most of them knew that the "index finger of her right hand" was missing. Soon the marshal found the Santa Fé passenger and she disproved the whole theory by showing her index finger.

The Bloomington Incident.

Earlier in the day Bloomington and Peoria were both confindent that Dollie Chesher, missing since Thursday, was or had been among them. A young woman got off of the Chicago train at Bloomington, called up the Jefferson hotel at Peoria, and then caught a train to Peoria. Patrolman Hinshaw of Bloomington was on the lookout for Mrs. Chesher and listened while she called.

Chief of Police J. J. Jones of Bloomington notified the Chicago police. It was found by THE TRIBUNE that a woman had registered at the Jefferson hotel in Peoria from Chicago. She was believed to be the same woman Patrolman Hinshaw had seen.

She gave her name (which is withheld at her request) and her forwarding address as the Methodist hospital, Peoria, Ill.

At her Chicago address this information was quickly forthcoming.

"Why, yes, Mrs. ——— is in Peoria. She is stopping at the Jefferson hotel."

She was located by a TRIBUNE staff correspondent and identified herself. And so the other clew vanished into thin air.

Mr. Bradshaw, the Mysterious.

And now comes again into the case the "mysterious Mr. Bradshaw of Bloomington." Ever since Friday morning the police have been hearing of a "Mr. Bradshaw" who has been making an independent search for the girl.

Everywhere in Chicago that a clew has bobbed up Mr. Bradshaw has also bobbed up. But the police never managed to find Mr. Bradshaw. Last night Detective Sergeant John Heise, on the case, decided to go out and have a talk with Mrs. Lillian Heise, 4820 Indiana avenue.

It was at Mrs. Heise's home that the nurse kept a room all of the two years she was nurse at the Clarence E. Parker home, 999 Lake Shore drive. This in itself, the police figure, is a mysterious matter and they have hoped to solve it.

Sergt. Quinn had barely slipped into Mrs. Heise's parlor chair than she said to him:

"Meet Mr. Brawshaw of Bloomington."

Sergt. Quinn jumped to his feet. Glad to see Mr. Bradshaw, mighty glad! What did he know about the case?

Just an Old Friend.

Nothing, strictly nothing, said Mr. Bradshaw. He was an old friend of Dollie. Dropped into town occasionally and had been in the habit of looking her up. A girl from back home, you know. Sometimes took her to the theater or out to dinner.

Automobile mechanic back home, single, and just interested in the case as a friend. Awfully sorry to learn the young lady was missing, and wanted to help find her.

The Bloomington correspondent of THE TRIBUNE reports:

"There are only four Bradshaw families in Bloomington. I have reached them all. None of the men in any Bradshaw family is in Chicago. All seem to have perfect alibis—they're married."

"I'm going back to Bloomington tomorrow," the mysterious "Mr. Bradshaw" told Sergt. Quinn.

Last to See Girl.

Mrs. Myrtle Butler, owner of the Bellevue Beauty parlor, told yesterday of the visit of a man who said he was from Bloomington and who declined to give his name. He said he was a friend of Mrs. Chesher, she explained, and asked the way to the Chicago avenue police station, saying he intended to join the police in the hunt for the girl.

Miss Esther Hanson, an employé of Mrs. Butler, is the last person, so far as is known, who saw the girl. Miss Hanson told of seeing the nurse walking north on Michigan avenue at 4:15 o'clock Thursday afternoon with the Pekingese spaniel and the "girl with the long blue coat." Fifteen minutes afterward the dog was found five blocks away, whining in an alley.

Kidnaped, Mrs. Parker Fears.

Mrs. Parker, at whose home Mrs. Chesher was "as a daughter," said last night:

"We are confident she has been abducted and held against her will. She would never have abandoned Sunee, our Pekinese spaniel, found in the alley. She was extremely fond of the dog. She would never stay away from us like this and send no word.

"As much as we hate to admit it, we can reach no other solution. She must have been kidnaped."

Failing to find the body of the missing nurse in empty buildings, in alleys, or in the weeds of Streeterville, where Miss Josephine McDonald so mysteriously died a couple of weeks ago, the police turned to the lake. They took out a department motorboat and skirted the shore. Grappling hooks failed to bring up a body and after hours of tossing on the chilly waves this hunt was temporarily abandoned.

If Sunee Could Only Talk.

Thus the mystery for Dollie Chesher, who walked out for an hour in the air last Thursday afternoon with the Pekinese spaniel and did not come back, seems as far from solution as the first night, when the search started.

Sunee, the Pekinese, if he could speak, might have a tale to tell.

FIGHT TO WREST CENSOR POWER FROM P. O. CHIEF

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The opening round of a fight to abolish Postmaster General Burleson's censorship powers took place in the senate today in connection with the postal appropriation bill. The administration forces, standing solidly behind Mr. Burleson, won.

Senator Borah of Idaho moved to suspend the rules in order to make an amendment repealing the sections of the espionage bill empowering the postmaster general to exclude treasonable and seditious publications from the mail. The motion was rejected by a vote of 39 to 25.

Although there has been much criticism of Postmaster General Burleson's exercise of censorship powers, the growing menace of bolshevist propaganda undoubtedly influenced many senators to vote against Senator Borah's motion who would otherwise have supported it, now that hostilities are ended.

Committee amendments increasing the house appropriation of $300,000 for the aerial mail service to $850,500 and authorizing the postmaster general in his discretion to contract for pneumatic mail service in New York were adopted.

LANDIS MAKES RELICS OUT OF A LOT OF PASSES

Millionaire Coal Man and "L" Chief Give Up Free Rides.

The case of "Johnny Jones, the grocery clerk, vs. the Gold Coast," was up before Federal Judge Landis yesterday.

The moot questioin was, Should "Johnny Jones" pay increased fares over the Elgin, Aurora and Chicago electric lines and those more favored with gold ride on passes? The finality of the question is that starting with tomorrow morning every man who attempts to jam into "Johnny's" seat with him will be a full paid fare, unless he is a road employé.

The affair started when the interurban line asked for an injunction against the public utilities commission so that it might increase its fare from 2 to 3 cents a mile as "an emergency matter." It claimed it was suffering big financial losses. Then Judge Landis discovered the road had a pass list of 385 names. He called for it and E. C. Faber, general manager, brought it in yesterday morning. The jurist took a squint at it and ordered some forthwith subpœnas for pass holders.

Calls Millionaire Coal Man.

R. Floyd Clinch, millionaire coal dealer, was the first to appear. He took the witness stand.

"Mr. Clinch, have you a contract of any kind with the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago railroad covering the question of transportation over its lines?" asked the judge, peering over his spectacle rims.

"No; but I have an annual pass," the coal man replied.

"Was your pass issued in consideration of a debt of any kind?"

"No, it was merely a complimentary matter. I am an officer of the Chicago North Shore Electric line."

"Well, now," continued the judge, "I have a petition before me in which these fellows representing the Aurora-Elgin line tell me they are in a bad way for money, and it seems they are not charging some folks anything to ride and they want an order to charge other people more. Now what is your theory of this?"

"The road should have enough revenue so that it may serve the public," Mr. Clinch answered.

"And then you want to ride free. What do you mean by the public? Every one?"

"Well, the issuing of passes is a privilege allowed by the interstate commerce commission."

"I see; but is there any reason why they should hand you a pass and let you ride without paying your fare?"

"Like Invitation to Dinner."

"Why, judge, it's just as if I was invited to a dinner. The same proposition. It's a custom."

The judge paused a moment. Then he said quizzically:

"Do you want to keep this pass?"

"Yes, I do, judge," Mr. Clinch answered.

"All right. Enter an order, Mr. Clerk, invalidating pass No. 54," answered the judge, and then with a smile he said, "Mr. Clinch, you may keep it as a souvenior—a relic."

And then, taking the pass, he wrote on it in scrawly hand, "Relic No. 1," and passed it back to the witness.

"Better to Abolish All Passes."

Britton I. Budd, president of the elevated lines, was the next pass holder to take the chair. He explained that the electric suburban line is a tenant of the Metropolitan West Side Elevated, of which he is head, and is also helped in the maintenance of its equipment.

"My pass was merely an exchange of courtesies," Mr. Budd said.

Offers to Send Ticket.

"Well, now, Mr. Witness, if Mr. Britton I. Budd wanted to ride out to the Fox river valley on a fishing trip," queried the judge, "is there any reason in the world why he shouldn't pay his fare just like Johnny Jones, the grocer's clerk, must do?"

"No reason at all," replied the elevated line head. "I haven't my pass with me, but I'll send it in to you right away."

Mr. Budd said Mrs. Budd's pass hadn't been used since the family moved up on the north shore. It also will be sent in.

Village Chiefs Also Favored.

Herman G. Hetzler, president of the Western Indiana railroad, and Francis S. Peabody, head of the Peabody Coal company, who had also been summoned in to be asked about their passes, were out of the city and could not be reached by deputy marshals. J. C. James and Frank De Loy of the legal department of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, and C. D. Peckenbaugh, superintendent of the same road, also were named in subpœnas.

The long list of pass holders turned over to the judge ran the gamut of railroad officials in Chicago and also included the police chiefs of Oak Park, Maywood, and Forest Park. After tomorrow morning all will be invalid and will be taken up as presented to conductors. Only regular employés will ride free. The fare increase is expected to become effective Tuesday morning.

EXPERT THINKS DOHRER CONVICT WHO FLED PAROLE

Leavenworth, Kas., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—First Lieutenant W. H. Dohrer, accused of soliciting and accepting bribes with promises of obtaining the discharge of soldiers at Camp Grant, Ill., has been identified by R. H. Hudspeth, finger print expert of the Kansas penitentiary, as a prisoner who broke his parole.

Hudspeth telegraphed a minute description of the missing Kansas prisoner to the federal authorities at Detroit to aid in establishing the identity of Dohrer.

According to Hudspeth's record, Dohrer was brought to the Kansas penitentiary from Cowley county, Kas., in October, 1915, to serve from one to five years for forgery. He was going by the name of W. K. Breegins Dohrer was released on parole in December, 1916, and in April, 1917, he broke his parole.

Hudspeth says the same man served two years in the Huntsville, Tex., penitentiary for defrauding a friend out of $600.

SCHOOL PRINCIPLES INDORSE PLANS FOR COMMUNITY CENTERS

PUBLIC school principals indorsed every phase of the rapidly growing community center movement in Chicago last night, and, as representatives of both the board of education and people of their school communities, advocated opening schools for every social and educational activity.

Fifty-two principals met in the City club for discussion of the community center movement. Acting Superintendent Peter A. Mortenson declared that Americanism and the development of civic and social ideals can best be brought about through the general use of school buildings by all Chicago people. Dudley Grant Hays, director of extension work, promised increasing activity in the centers during the spring and summer.

"I want to see the centers serve Chicago communities in every possible way," declared Trustee Max Loeb, chairman of the joint community center commission.

Organization of girls' clubs in city high schools was urged by Mr. Mortenson, speaking before the Woman's club.

Overstuffed Pillow Davenport in Silesia, 7 ft. 6 in. long. Sale price..........$110

Large Arm Chair, to match. Sale price, $65

YOU are interested in the service you get when you trade with a store; it would help if you knew just what sort of service the owners of each store want to give; it would have a good deal to do with where you did your buying.

Because some new customers seemed surprised at our selling only new, fresh goods at our Semi-Annual Sale, guaranteeing these goods, and permitting their return if not entirely satisfactory, we want to devote this advertisement to an explanation of Scholle service.

Our business has been built on the one idea of selling only good furniture; guaranteeing that it is good and that it will stay good; agreeing that you must be satisfied with what you buy here, not only when you see it attractively displayed in our store, but when you get it into your home, and always thereafter. Such satisfaction is a source of pleasure to you, and that means good will for us. This good will of our customers is the most valuable thing we have. Whenever a piece of Scholle furniture fails to give complete satisfaction it fails to create good will; we therefore are anxious to replace it with something which will continue the feeling of good will—whether that something is other furniture or your money back.

Now for the present application: As these principles apply to every transaction in this store from a dollar and a half candlestick to a thousand dollar bedroom suite, and as these principles have built our business, why shouldn't they apply during a Special Semi-Annual Sale when we are putting forth an extra effort to give you big values?

GIVES REVENUE BILL BLACK EYE IN PASSING IT

House Adopts Six Billion Measure, but Sharply Criticizes It.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—The house tonight concluded its work on the record breaking war revenue bill by adopting, 310 to 11, after six hours' discussion, the conferees' agreement on the measure.

It now goes to the senate for final approval, which is expected early next week.

Changes demanded by the house managers in the provisions affecting personal service corporations, Mr. Kitchin said, would result in obtaining much more revenue from government war "cost plus" contracts.

"We caught all those cost plus fellows," he said.

A statement that the bill taxed salaries of representatives and senators as well as of the president and federal judiciary was applauded.

Zone Law Remains.

Brief mention was made by Mr. Kitchin of the controverted question over second class postage rates. The senate, he said, "very graciously yielded" its amendment, and the present zone law remains.

The $60 bonus for men discharged from the military service was praised by Mr. Kitchin as democratic. To the argument that more should be provided, he said the men did not want to be considered as "beggars."

Regarding the 10 per cent tax on high priced articles of wear classed as "semi-luxuries," Mr. Kitchin said he felt such taxes should not be imposed in peace times, but, as the senate had retained the policy at reduced rates and with clothing exempted, the conferees were powerless under the rules to eliminate the section.

May Repeal Semi-Luxuries.

Before the semi-luxury taxes go into effect April 1, he said, he believed legislation would be presented to repeal or modify them.

Representative Fordney of Michigan, senior Republican of the house managers, concurred in Mr. Kitchin's statement that the bill did not provide enough revenue.

The $60 pay bonus for soldiers was criticized by Mr. Fordney and Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts, Democrat, said he was inclined to vote against the bill because of its small bonus allowance.

Severely Criticized.

Severely criticizing the bill, Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, one of the Republican conferees, also declared it would raise much less than would be necessary, but said he must support it as a war measure.

"It is still the Wilson-McAdoo-Kitchin bill," said Mr. Moore, "with a few harbors of refuge . . . presumably for deserving taxpayers," adding that it would "help the American people understand the ease with which their money has been spent."

Mr. Moore declared President Wilson yielded to the hue and cry against the $8,000,000,000 house bill and recommended the reduction to $6,000,000,000.

Representative Kitchin admitted the bill's levy should be larger. "I fear the future will confirm my doubts," he said, "and that the year's expenditures will be billions larger than the treasury's estimate."

Escape With $1,700,000,000.

Corporations, he said, could well stand higher taxes as their profits during that period were $12,000,000,000. Propaganda had been carried on to defeat the bill and let present tax rates remain. If this was done, he said, profiteers would "escape with $1,700,000,000 of war profits" and great corporations would hold profits made from the people.

The so-called "relief" sections of the bill, providing tax reductions and rebates in case of shrinking inventories or net losses in business, were praised as just and fair and designed to protect business, which, he said, will suffer "hundreds of billions of such losses."

Other relief provisions, however, especially the tax exemption for oil prospectors, he criticized as "special favoritism, unjust, unfair and unwarranted.

13 MONTHS A YEAR NEW CALENDAR IDEA TO SAVE MILLIONS

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—A plan to save $50,000,000 a year in time and $15,000,000 in coin by the addition of a month to the present twelve month calendar has been launched by the American Equal Month association, according to an announcement made by that organization tonight.

The idea is to divide the year into thirteen months of twenty-eight days each, making each month begin with a Monday. This, of course, will leave one day lying around loose in an ordinary year, so it is proposed to make that day New Year's day, an independent legal holiday, located between the last calendar day of the previous year and the first day of the following year. In leap years the extra day will also be made an independent holiday and will be slipped in between two months, where it will not be noticed.

The thirteen month, or rather the extra month under the proposed system, will be called "Liberty," to make the calendar more American, the officials of the association say. Thus, the calendar will read January, February, Liberty, March, etc.

The saving in money will be through the abolishment of printed calendars. That is where the saving of time and labor will come in, it is averred.

The officers of the association state that the bill has been very carefully drawn for presentation to congress, and provides that the change will take place on Sunday, the first day of 1922.

4 MEN, 5 WOMEN TAKEN IN RAID ON "MIKE DE PIKE'S"

"Mike de Pike" Heitler's notorious Wigwam saloon, formerly the Burr Oak inn, was raided again last night by seven men from the sheriff's office under Deputy Thoney.

Four men and five women were captured. They will be arraigned next Thursday before Justice McKee of Oak Park.

The Wigwam has been the scene of a number of underworld gun battles and gang fights and is known to the police as a hangout of desperate characters.

The raid was "pulled" early in the evening and took those there by surprise.

Letter to Wife Leads to Arrest of Fugitive

John J. Klino, 35 years old, formerly cashier for the Brenner Coal company of Detroit, who fled on Oct. 20 after he is alleged to have embezzled $600, was arrested yesterday when he called for a letter at the general delivery window in the postoffice.

Klino, the police said, became lonesome for his wife and children and wrote to her to answer his letter through the general delivery. The Detroit police learned of this and notified the detective bureau.

Klino refused to discuss the embezzlement.

'LIE,' MAYER SAYS OF HENEY STORY OF PACKER BAIT

Didn't Offer California Lawyer a Juicy Job with Armour.

New York, Feb. 8.—Levy Mayer of Chicago, counsel for Armour & Co., issued a statement here tonight denying the charge made today by Francis J. Heney before the senate agriculture committee in Washington that Mr. Mayer had offered him employment with the packers.

"The charge of Heney, made during my absence in New York, is an infamous lie," said Mr. Mayer's statement. "He says the attempt was made by me at an open session of the committee. At that time Mr. Armour was testifying. Why did not Heney get up then and immediately denounce this imaginary charge? The lie is too transparent; it is very clumsy.

"Heney has for months attacked the honesty and integrity of every one of the five big packers and of all their lawyers. Now, in despair, he resorts to still another lie. Some days ago the committee asked me to appear next Monday to discuss the constitutionality of the pending bill. I will then appear and have more to say."

HENEY SPRINGS SURPRISE.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Francis J. Heney sprang something of a surprise in the senate packers' investigation today by telling the investigating committee he had turned down a job with Armour & Co.

He stated that while J. Ogden Armour was on the stand in open hearing recently, Levy Mayer, Mr. Armour's counsel, leaned across the table and whispered to him:

"As I told Frank Walsh in Chicago, if you come with us we'll give you more business than you can handle."

"I think," Mr. Heney commented to the committee today, "that a lawyer who would do that ought to be disbarred."

Senator Kenyon of Iowa said that Mr. Mayer probably will be before the committee to testify on Monday. Mr. Heney said that his purpose in relating the incident was to enable the committee to ask Mr. Mayer about it when he took the stand.

Veeder on the Stand.

Henry Veeder, counsel for Swift & Co. was on the stand again today. He will return to the stand again on Monday, when it is the intention of the committee to have Mr. Heney cross examine him about the Diamond T letters.

Mr. Heney devoted much of the day to an effort to show how the packers tried to dominate live stock men and small packers by financial pressure brought to bear through control of banks. He also undertook to answer Mr. Veeder's charge that the live stock men raised a fund of $150,000 for their campaign for a meat packers' investigation.

"If the cattle men did not come in and subscribe this $150,000, it only shows how little they thought of the campaign for a meat investigation," Mr. Veeder contended.

"It shows the power of the 'Big Five' control over the live stock industry," said Mr. Heney. "The packers, through their banks, actively tried to prevent cattle men from subscribing to the fund. We have evidence to prove this and can bring it here."

Idaho Man Changes Views.

Dr. J. M. Wilson of Idaho, representing the American National Livestock association and other western cattle growers' organizations, got into an argument with Senator Norris and Senator Gronna over the testimony of the packers. He appeared so friendly to the packers, and inclined to take their side to such an extent that Senator Norris asked him whether he had changed his attitude since last year when as a member of the resolutions committee of the American National Livestock association he had endorsed resolutions strongly favoring the investigations of the packers by the federal trade commission.

"In your resolutions of 1918 you arraigned the packers severely and declared that the feeding of cattle had been unprofitable for two years when the consumers had to pay the highest prices for meat," said Senator Norris. "But your present resolutions which you have just read to the committee take a different tone. I want to know why the change?"

Blames It on the War.

"Well, the war is ended now, and we had to be careful what we said while the war was on," replied the witness.

He also told the committee that the cattlemen felt that the present investigation of the packers by the senate was having a bad effect upon the packers' business abroad. "If they are as bad as you make them out to be then the people of Europe will be suspicious of them, and won't deal with them," Mr. Wilson said.

HEAD OF FAMILY DISAPPEARS ON WAY TO DENTIST

Louis Tease, 55 years old, 2714 North Rockwell avenue, has been missing since Thursday afternoon. He had been employed in the ordnance department of the Otis Elevator company at Ashland and Twenty-fifth streets.

He quit work early Thursday afternoon saying he had to go to his dentist, Dr. Thomas G. Miller, 3203 Madison street. He never got there. He had his week's pay check with him, but it is not known that he had cashed it.

He is described as weighing about 220 pounds, smooth shaven, rather florid, and somewhat bald. He wore a gray suit and a black overcoat. He has a wife and with them lived a little granddaughter.

BANDITS TAKE CASH, CLOTHING AND SEALSKINS

As Joseph O'Connell, driver for the Bremner Biscuit company, 901 Forquer street, emerged from a grocery at 2946 Throop street last night, a man with two guns ordered:

"Step right in the old wagon and drive slow."

O'Connell obeyed and the man rode with him a short distance, robbing him of $130 in cash and checks.

Thomas Oliver, driver for the W. F. Kelly Teaming company, confessed twenty-six carcasses of veal which disappeared Jan. 13 had been stolen and sold. William Druggan of 1057 West Fourteenth place and Joseph Waterloo of 901 West Nnieteenth street were accomplices, he said.

Auto bandits Friday night robbed the following places: Straus & Vogel, 1923 Crystal street, women's clothing, value $1,500; Schwartz Brothers, 300 South Market street, woollens worth $1,850, and Mark Brothers, 226 West Division street, clothing valued at $700.

Miss Marian Roberts of 6928 Sheridan road reported she was robbed of a sealskin coat and $200 Jan. 28.

Mandel Brothers

bespeak your early inspection and delighted approval of the new "Period" Vocalions

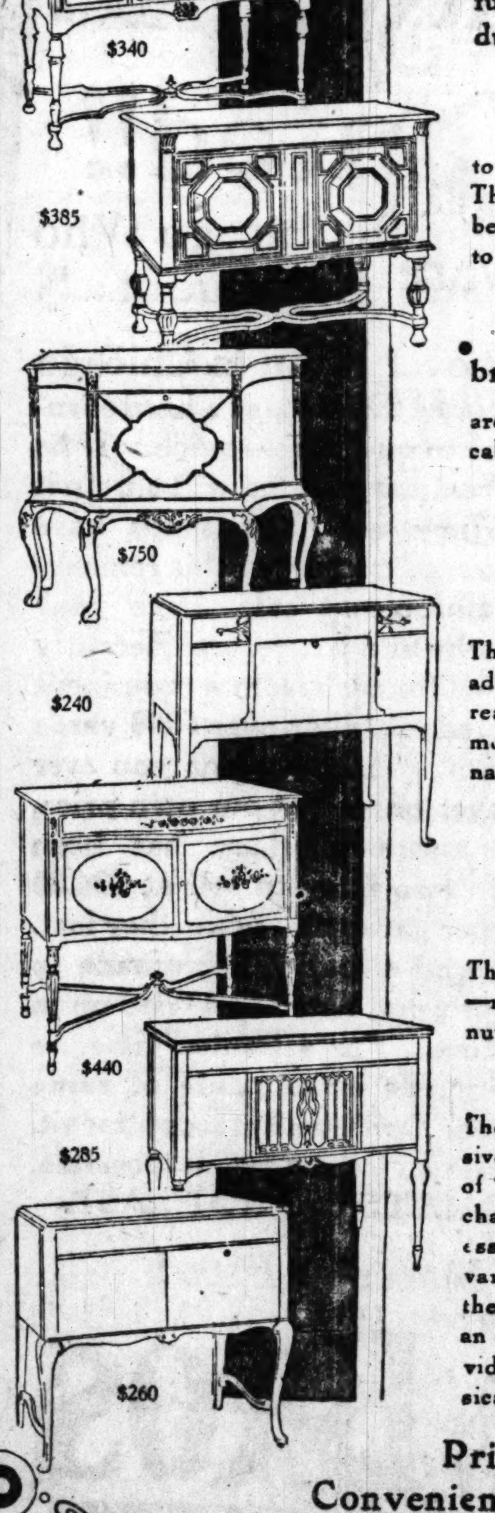
In overcoming the limitations of the phonograph—in replacing its typical tone with one of richness, sonority and extraordinary realism—and in adding the fascinating element of personal expression control—The Aeolian Company has immeasurably increased the musical value and pleasure-giving character of the tone-reproducing instrument.

Vocalion salons, ninth floor



As a logical further advance, The Aeolian Company has entered into a cooperative arrangement with two leading furniture manufacturers for the production of to harmonize with modern home interiors. The motifs of many of these designs have been taken from historic pieces well known to furniture connoisseurs.

Period case designs

The styles of Duncan Phyfe, Sheraton, Heppelwhite, the brothers Adam, and Chippendale are represented, as well as those of unknown cabinetmakers of earlier periods—

Gothic, Elizabethan,
Italian Renaissance,
Jacobean, Queen Anne,
William and Mary, and others

The importance of this pronounced artistic advance in case design is emphasized by reasonable pricing—many of these Period models, indeed, costing no more than ordinary phonographs in conventional cases.

One or another of the fourteen Period designs here illustrated will harmonize with practically any modern interior

Their beauty is enhanced by exquisite finish—regular mahogany, brown mahogany, walnut or lacquer.

Personal expression control

The "Graduola"—a revolutionary and exclusive Vocalion device—enables any one tiring of "record monotony" to introduce new and charming interpretative variations. Without essentially altering the original, one may vary details of tone and shading as do artists themselves in different performances. Thus an opportunity also is provided for the individual to exercise and develop his own musical taste. Ninth floor.

DIAN GIRL AND OIL LAND SAVED FROM KIDNAPING

Guardian Going Back to Oklahoma to Give Warning.

At 8 o'clock last night a taxicab drew up to the home of Cyrus C. Mitchell, [illegible] South Dearborn street. The driver was admitted to Mr. Mitchell's home, where he remained for twenty minutes. Then he emerged he drove directly to the office of State's Attorney Hoyne. There, in Assistant State's Attorney Duval's office, H. P. Paris of Oklahoma paid the taxi driver a bill for services. Thus ended what Mr. Duval and Attorney William Brown later termed "a concerted effort for several weeks" to take to Oklahoma Miss Martha Hope, 18 year old half-breed Indian girl, who is Mr. Mitchell's ward. Paris has gone back to Oklahoma to inform "certain interests" there that kidnaping in Illinois means life imprisonment for those convicted.

Girl Owns Oil Lands.

"Miss Hope about three weeks ago became 18 years of age," said Attorney Brown. "She is the owner of valuable oil land in Oklahoma—near the town of Eufaula. She has already been practically swindled out of half her holdings, which were originally 160 acres. Prosecutor Duval and I, as her attorney, will see to it that she is protected."

Then developed the story of how Mr. Paris came to be in the offices of the state's attorney. "Mr. Paris," Prosecutor Duval explained, "is the second guardian appointed by the Oklahoma courts for Miss Hope. He sent the cab to get Miss Hope with instructions to the driver to bring her to the North western station. Mr. Paris says his purpose was to take her to Oklahoma so he could file a report and get himself discharged as her guardian.

"I believe Mr. Paris is telling the truth. But there has been an effort on the part of certain interests to get this girl into Oklahoma for the purpose of securing control of her property. I'm sending Mr. Paris back to warn those interests."

Brown Takes Up Story.

"About three weeks ago," continued Attorney Brown, "a man named Thomas Bratton and another who claimed to be Miss Hope's uncle came to Chicago. They offered the girl $500 for her eighty acres, on which there is now an oil well producing about fifty barrels a day. She refused. They then sent her brother, Jefferson Hope, here. He was offered $400 to induce his sister to sell for $500. But Jefferson is young and he liked the big city, so he simply stayed here.

"It developed that other interests were after the girl. Mr. Mitchell informed me of what was going on. I went to the United States district attorney. He referred the matter to State's Attorney Hoyne. Since then the state's attorney's office had been watching developments.

"When the taxi driver came to Mr. Mitchell for the girl he thought it was just part of a general scheme to kidnap her. He telephoned me. I informed Mr. Duval and he sent detectives to the Morrison hotel to bring Mr. Paris to his office."

$867,000 SALE BY U. S. NOT TO AFFECT MARKET

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Wholesale builders, supply men, contractors, and builders were gratified today on receipt of orders from the board of sales of the United States government that $867,000 worth of building materials at Camp Grant will be disposed of in a way that will not affect the market.

Lieut. Barth, son of Col. Charles H. Barth, expects to be transferred or discharged this week. He has been serving as aid to his father, camp commander, but as Gen. Barth has been reduced to his regular army rank of colonel he must do without the services of an aid.

The Three Hundred and Thirty-first field artillery, a Blackhawk unit, is expected to arrive here at the end of the week to be mustered out of service. Most of the officers are Chicago men.

WHISKY AND OIL FORM "BOMBS" IN LIVELY BLAZE

Frequent explosions in the basement of a two story brick building at 557-59 East Sixty-third street, last night during a fire, kept firemen at a distance for a time and attracted a large crowd when the flames broke through the roof. The building, owned by David Levi, 4707 Indiana avenue, was destroyed at $20,000 loss.

Chief Joseph Kenyon of the Twelfth battalion, after keeping the flames from spreading to adjoining property, said he would ask an investigation by the fire attorney today.

The explosions were caused by the flames attacking a $5,000 stock of whisky owned by F. L. Brandel, whoh runs a saloon at 559, and by oils owned by the Gragg Cleaning company at 557 East Sixty-third.

The flames soon broke through the roof and the light in the sky brought hundreds of persons to the scene. The fire was brought under control after a two hours' fight.

Held as Murderer of Wife of Chicago Soldier

Houston, Tex., Feb. 8.—William M. Hart was denied bond following a preliminary hearing here today on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Mrs. Pauline McConnell, wife of a Chicago soldier.

Testimony by physicians indicated that Mrs. McConnell had engaged in a terrific struggle before she was shot. Her shoulder and arm had been dislocated and numerous bruises were found on the body.

Hart claimed Mrs. McConnell shot herself while he had his arms about her.

OPIUM LAYOUTS, BAR SILVER AND PRISONERS TAKEN

In a raid on the Paris hotel, 538 South State street, yesterday afternoon government revenue agents uncovered a cache of morphine sulphate, an opium joint, and took into custody a patron having in his luggage a suitcase filled with bars of pure silver.

Joseph Reynolds, proprietor of the hotel, and Elizabeth O'Hearn, an alleged drug peddler living there, were taken before United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason and held under $3,500 bonds each. The guest with the silver, who gave his name as Frank Russell, was held at the federal building for several hours and then turned over to Detectives Carlton and McFarland.

The raid, staged under the direction of Dr. W. H. Sage, head of the narcotics division of the internal revenue department, was a sequel to another staged at the home of Horace Fisher, 2638 West Park avenue, late Friday night. Fisher and his wife together with their 3 year old daughter were taken to the government building. In the morning the woman was sent to the Paris hotel with a marked $5 bill to buy half a dram of morphine.

When the raiders under Agent Jack Dennison entered the place they found Mrs. Fisher with the morphine and the O'Hearn woman with the marked bill. Reynolds was in bed. Scattering through the rooms of the hotel the agents discovered the "hop joint" on an upper floor. It was elaborately outfitted with pipes ready for smoking.

Tells Police of Being Robbed in Hotel Room

Robert Leak of Williamsport, Ind., spent three days in Chicago without seeing any "bad men." Friday night, he told the police yesterday while he was in his room at the Saratoga hotel, two men entered and after beating him took a diamond ring he had purchased for his wife, a $45 overcoat, and $90 in cash. The ring, he said, cost him $150 the same day.

He reported the occurrence to the hotel management, but, failing to get action, went to the detective bureau. The hotel management said last night it had informed the police of the theft.

Drive Grocery Owners Into Ice Box; Steal $300

Four masked men held up the grocery and market of Thomas Leyden, at 3000 Archer avenue, at 9:30 o'clock last night, escaping with $300 in cash. The burglars imprisoned the owner, his son, Frank, and John O'Donnell, a clerk, in an ice box in the rear of the store.

The victims were able to describe the robbers.

'WEEKS AHEAD OF HIS EVERY JUMP,' SAYS WIFE, SUING

Mrs. Jas. E. Kourt Backs Love Letters with a Breezy Speech.

A packet of letters and a slangy word picture of the alleged infidelity of her husband were offered to Attorney Charles E. Erbstein yesterday by Mrs. Martha B. Kourt, 146 Eugenie street, who sought a separation from James E. Kourt, part owner of the Kennard Studios, 60 West Washington street, until recently a sailor.

As a result a bill for separate maintenance, charging infidelity and naming two women—Miss Alice Billings and Lorraine Higgins—was filed yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Kourt were married June 30, 1914, and lived together until Feb. 3, 1919.

The Wife's Story.

"I know that man like a book," said Mrs. Kourt. "I was three weeks ahead of his every jump and knew just exactly what he was thinking about. He never put over a thing that I didn't wise up to. He's a smart bird, but I know a few tricks myself.

"Two weeks ago I put the rush act to one of the men who works at the office. I learned a lot of stuff, but he gave me a bum steer. I listened to his story of hard luck and then gave him my ring to hock. That about broke my heart. But the next day I spotted that ring decorating the finger of this Billings woman. Wouldn't that throw a peeve into you?"

Mrs. Kourt said she recovered the ring—after a battle.

The letters she displayed, said to have been written by the husband to his wife, wavered in affection.

Letters in Case.

Read them:

"Dear Buster—Don't you tell any one where I am——. To be real truthful with you (you always asked me to tell the truth) I am really and truly in love with a little girl who does not know I am married. You won't spoil it for me will you dear? I have made up my mind to have my happiness or die. KEN."

In another he speaks of ingratitude.

"Dear Buster: There's no use camouflaging any longer. Don't you think for a minute that your Ken does not love you and does not appreciate all the good things you have done for him. When I run over the past I find not one thing but that was good and kind.

Admits Other Loves.

"But I have not lived up to the standard of sweetheart and husband, and I have allowed others to come into my life and share my love. Now I have found one who really truly loves me.

"Some day your Ken will come back to you—when it's too late. It will be when he loves you with a true and upright love—the kind he should have given you long ago. The tears are falling now—I must stop. KEN."

NEW YORK HAVEN OF BOY MISSING WITH $26,000?

Mother Declares He May Have Gone to Uncle.

Joliet—or a suburb of New York City—is believed to be the hiding place of 16 year old Abe Munick, office boy of W. H. Colvin & Co., who disappeared Friday afternoon with $800 in currency and $25,000 in checks.

Detective Sergeant Thomas Mangin of the detective bureau, after a talk with the boys' mother, expressed the opinion last night that Munick had gone east.

The mother, Mrs. Samuel Munick, with her five children, is in straitened circumstances at the home, at 1104 South Francisco avenue. Abe was the chief wage earner of the family.

Mother Is Ill.

Mrs. Munick, who is in bed recovering from a recent operation, said Abe was very fond of visiting an uncle who lived near New York. He made a visit there only six months ago.

The police of the suburb were supplied with a description of Abe and asked to watch the uncle's home. A charge of larceny by bailee has been filed against him.

Detective Sergeant Charles Essig was sent to Joliet on advices from the chief of police there that he was holding a man who had been seen with a boy answering Munick's description in Joliet Friday night. The man said he was J. H. Anderson of 1312 Euclid avenue, Chicago Heights. He refuses to talk.

Girl Knows Nothing.

Fifteen year old Stella Rosenthal of 1521 South Turner avenue, believed to have information concerning the disappearance, was found yesterday, but the police are satisfied she knows nothing about Munick. Another girl was being sought last night at a west side address.

Colvin Has No Clew.

William H. Colvin, head of the brokerage firm, in a telephone conversation from his home in Evanston at midnight last night, said he knew of no new developments in the case. He had not heard Munick had been seen in Joliet, he said.

Munick, with the checks and currency was sent by the brokerage firm in the Woman's temple, at La Salle and Monroe streets, to the First National bank shortly after 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. The distance is two blocks. Munick never reached the bank.

Kelly Awarded $1 Balm for Wife's Lost Love

Joseph A. Jacques, superintendent of the Kenwood Bridge company, was found guilty of alienating the affections of Mrs. Maud M. Kelly by a jury before Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday. Damages of $1 were awarded to James S. Kelly, who brought the suit against Jacques. Kelly had asked for $25,000.

WANDERS TO CREEK TO FREEZE.

Atlantic, Ia., Feb. 8.—R. J. Funk, an aged man who had lived alone in a little house in Anita, wandered from the house Wednesday night, fell exhausted in a creek bed, and froze to death. The body, clad only in night clothes, was found late yesterday.

3-DEATH, $13,000 LEGACY HEIRESS TELLS HER STORY

Body Is Exhumed to Decide the Cause of Death.

Mrs. Lillian E. Ruemenapp, nurse, and beneficiary in the will of Mrs. Maryetta Dyke, whose body was exhumed yesterday as the first step in an investigation started after three deaths in Mrs. Ruemenapp's home, told her story to THE TRIBUNE last night.

The nurse was named as sole beneficiary to a $13,000 estate left by Mrs. Dyke, 2525 West Monroe street. The will was made the day before Mrs. Dyke died. Mrs. Dyke's body was exhumed for post-mortem examination by Coroner Peter M. Hoffman on the strength of statements voiced by neighbors of the Dykes.

The vital organs were taken from Mrs. Dyke's body for microscopic and chemical examination to determine officially the cause of her death. In the office of her attorney, Thomas J. Peden, Mrs. Ruemenapp told her story, stopping every now and then to suppress sobs.

Met at World's Fair.

"I became acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Dyke the year of the world's fair in Chicago," she said. "From that time on I was almost as a member of the family. I came and went. Once I even went to California. But I always came back to their home.

"After my marriage they and my husband were very friendly. Last June, while my husband was away, Mr. Dyke, who was about 86 years old, tried to fix a steam pipe. He fell off a stepladder, broke his hip, and injured his leg.

"He was taken to the Frances Willard hospital. He had had pneumonia and, perhaps because of the anæsthetic, it returned. He wanted to be taken to my home. Mrs. Dyke agreed and the hospital authorities permitted it, warning us he was desperately ill.

Warned Against Visitors.

"He sank steadily and only lived a couple of days. Dr. Hugh MacKechnie warned me against permitting visitors to worry him. That is the reason I did not permit neighbors to call on him. Dr. MacKechnie was with him when he died.

"My husband became janitor of a large building in Detroit. Mrs. Dyke wished to visit us. The first time she came to our home I accompanied her. Just before Christmas she decided to come to Chicago to do some business. She thought she could make the trip alone.

Complained of Chills.

"When she returned to Detroit, the night before Christmas, I noticed she was ill. Before I took her home from the station I stopped at a drug store and got some remedies. She complained of chills and pains.

"The next morning I summoned Dr. E. A. Ranney against her wishes. He told me her case was serious. Later he told me no human aid could save her. 'Has she any property? Has she made any will?' he asked me. I replied, 'She has some property and I don't know of any will.'

"'You must tell her she is going to die,' he said. I replied, 'I can't do it.' Then he said, 'All right, if you don't I'll feel it my duty to.' He went into her room and in a little while came out, saying, 'She said that she doesn't care; that she has been lonesome since her husband died and is ready to go.'

Doctor Called Lawyer.

"He asked me to send for my attorney to draw up a will. I replied, 'I don't want to do that. She always has said she was going to leave her property to me. If my attorney drew up the papers some one might talk about it and cast reflections on me. Get some other attorney.'

"He called an attorney I did not know. They drew up the will. I did not see it and had no knowledge of its contents. Mrs. Dyke died the next day. Just before she died she said to me, 'Please don't bury me on New Year's day. If you do you will have other deaths in your family within the year.'

"Because it was her wish I chose to bury her at once, on Dec. 31. She died the 30th.

Died of Influenza.

"She died of influenza and pneumonia. On Jan. 2, I think it was, while I was still in Chicago, I got a telegram saying that my husband was very ill. I hurried home and found that he had taken influenza.

"He developed pneumonia and died. He was buried just two weeks from the day Mrs. Dyke died."

As Mrs. Ruemenapp touched upon the deaths of her husband and her two aged friends, speaking of Mr. Dyke as "daddy," she was so filled with emotion that at times she could not speak at all and had to wait to stifle her sobs.

"It is pretty difficult, after losing the three persons closest to you in your life, to have insinuations like these made," said Attorney Peden.

"Are these persons causing the trouble relatives?" Mrs. Ruemenapp was asked.

"No," she said, "just neighbors. They have no claims on the property whatever."

A niece of Mrs. Dyke has been located in Imlay City, Mich., in the person of Miss Minnie Carpenter, whose mother, a sister of Mrs. Dyke, died a number of years ago. Members of the family said that they had not heard from Mrs. Dyke for a number of years.

ROWDY

Small Boys Help in Hunt for Dog Owned by Army Captain in Germany.

Frank Kratzer Jr.

PHOTO BRUNEL

Perhaps "Rowdy" has quit his home at 3837 Lake Park avenue to go to France.

It isn't Rowdy's fault that he is not handsome and his fussy tan fur is mixed with streaks of black. Airedales are just made that way. But he was the favorite of Capt. Oscar J. Dorman, One Hundred and Thirty-second machine gun battalion, who is now spending the winter in Germany, as well as many small boys of the neighborhood.

Miss Abigail Ford, Rowdy's guardian, is hunting for him. "Capt. Dorman thinks more of that dog than anything else," she said. "In every letter he asks 'How is Rowdy and be sure to take good care of him.'"

Frank Kratzer Jr., 3845 Lake Park avenue, who has been Rowdy's boon companion, is helping in the hunt.

Yellow Kid Loses Plea and Must Go to Prison

"Yellow Kid" Weil was denied a writ of supersedeas yesterday by the Appellate court. This means the confidence game operator will have to go to the penitentiary while the higher court is reviewing his appeal from the decision of Judge Guerin in the Criminal court.

John Henry Strosnider, alleged "king of con men," released from the Joliet penitentiary early in January, must come into Judge Guerin's court Monday to defend himself in a case begun in 1913. The charge is the same as that on which Weil was convicted.

HOUSE IS GIVEN BILL TO INSURE WHEAT GUARANTY

Full Powers Awarded to President in Lever Measure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Following receipt of a cablegram from President Wilson urging speedy action, Chairman Lever of the committee on agriculture introduced in the house today the bill providing $1,000,000,000 to uphold the nation's guarantee to the farmers of $2.26 a bushel for wheat of the 1918 and 1919 crops.

The measure, informally approved by the committee, modifies the bill drafted by the food administration by restricting its scope to the wheat guarantee, but it confers practically unlimited powers on the president to regulate and control the domestic market for wheat and wheat products until Dec. 31, 1920.

Under its terms the president will employ the billion dollars as a revolving fund for the purchase of wheat at the guaranteed price of $2.26 a bushel and sell it at the market price, which is expected to be considerably lower, perhaps even $1 lower.

Thus the government will keep faith with the farmers who have planted—and will plant this spring—an enormous wheat acreage, in response to war appeals, and consumers will obtain cheaper flour, while the loss will be borne by the taxpayers.

Discussing the authority conferred on the president, Chairman Lever said:

"We carefully avoided expressing how the refund or disparity in government and actual price is to be paid out; that is up to the president.

"We merely provided the machinery, and it is up to the president to operate the plan. He may use the present grain corporation as a basis, if he desires. The difference between the guaranteed price and the market price probably will be paid out at the big terminal grain elevators.

"I personally believe $1,000,000,000 will not be necessary. The amount probably will range from $500,000,000 to $600,000,000, but that depends on crop conditions."

Controls All Exchanges.

The president is given absolute power to control trading in wheat and wheat products on grain exchanges. It is believed that future trading will not be permitted till after the conclusion of peace. The bill provides:

"That whenever the president shall find that operations, practices, or transactions at, on, in, or under the rules of any exchange, board of trade, or similar institution cause or are likely to cause unjust market manipulations or unfair and misleading market quotations or undue depressions or fluctuation of the prices of or injurious speculation in wheat or wheat flour calculated or likely to enhance unduly the liabilities of the United States he is authorized to prescribe such regulations governing or he may either wholly or partly prohibit operations of any such institution."

It is provided that every organization must keep full records of every transaction. Violation of any provision of the bill may be punished by a fine not exceeding $10,000 or by imprisonment for not more than four years, or both.

License for All Dealers.

The president is empowered to "sell, buy, consign, or contract for the purchase or sale of wheat and flour for cash or on credit at the said guaranteed prices or at such other prices and on such terms or conditions as may be necessary," to make compensation for handling wheat and wheat flour, to control the distribution, to "purchase, lease, and utilize storage facilities and to requisition storage facilities."

Power to license all persons engaged in handling wheat and wheat flour is granted. Discriminatory or deceptive practices by a licensee, including unfair charges, may result in his license being revoked. Operation without a license is punishable by a fine not exceeding $5,000, imprisonment for not more than two years, or both. This section does not apply to farmers.

Another provision says that "Whenever the president shall find it essential and shall make proclamation, it shall be unlawful to import into the United States from any country or to export from the United States into any country named in such proclamation any wheat or wheat flour until otherwise ordered by the president or congress."

Gates Talks of Bill.

"The provisions of the bill are broad enough to admit of handling wheat under the guarantee on any plan which has been suggested," L. F. Gates of the Chicago Board of Trade said tonight. "If the president so desires, he could permit the exchanges to trade in wheat for future delivery as soon as the bill becomes a law, and he would have power under the act to at any time stop trading or support the market by government purchases.

"It does not seem likely that any trading in wheat will be permitted previous to the signing of the peace treaty and not then if foreign buying agencies are continued.

"Those of us who have been hoping for an open market will have to take the matter up later with whatever agency the president may appoint to carry the law into effect."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

In the rotogravure section of this issue is a caption accompanying a picture of Edsel Ford, stating that his salary is $150,000 a year as active head of the Ford Motor company.

A dispatch from Detroit in Friday's TRIBUNE regarding the libel suit of Henry Ford against THE TRIBUNE gave young Ford's salary as $75,000 a year, which appears to be correct. The amount stated in the rotogravure caption has been quoted elsewhere, and was furnished to THE TRIBUNE by the picture agency from which the photograph was procured.

GEMMILL ROUSED BY IMMUNITY HINT ON HIS WARRANT

Judge Threatens Police for Delay on Girl's Charges.

Why is Sanford A. Burnham of 2156 Washington boulevard, reputed to be wealthy and the president of the Burnham Gum Machine company, 400 South Hoyne avenue, apparently immune from arrest on a duly executed warrant signed by Judge William N. Gemmill?

Judge Gemmill, who is sitting in the Court of Domestic Relations, where he issued the warrant, wants to know. In fact, Judge Gemmill is aroused over the failure of the police, in whose hands the warrant has now been since Feb. 1, to arrest Mr. Burnham. The judge declared last night there is some "mysterious influence behind it." And he has warned Capt. Thomas Cronin of the Warren avenue station there will be a police shakeup unless Burnham is delivered into court tomorrow morning.

Girl Makes Charge.

Miss Ann Rogers, 19 years old, 5432 Indiana avenue, is the complainant against Burnham. She makes a serious charge.

"The girl came to me with an attorney on Feb. 1," Judge Gemmill said last night. "She told me a story which included the information that she is to become a mother.

"Miss Rogers said she was introduced to Burnham about six months ago by E. L. Wenzel, owner of the Washington hotel. I shall issue a summons for Mr. Wenzel to come into court also Monday morning, to tell me what he knows of the girl's story.

Warrant Out for Week.

"Burnham must be in court Monday at all costs or I'll know the reason why. The police have had the warrant for a week. I do not understand why Burnham has not been arrested. There is some mysterious influence behind all this."

Investigation last night showed the warrant was given for service to Detective Sergeants Moss and Hanrahan of the Warren avenue station. Lieut. Patrick McWeeney admitted after looking over the station records that such a warrant is in the detectives' hands, but he could give no reason for their failure to arrest Burnham.

TRAIN HITS TEAM; DRIVER SLAIN. Joseph Kovarcki, 1922 West Twentieth street, a driver of an ash wagon owned by Oscar Johnson, teaming contractor for the city, was instantly killed yesterday when a team of horses which he was driving was struck by a westbound passenger train on the Chicago and Alton railroad at Homan avenue and West Thirty-seventh street.

THE GREATEST HEATING PLANT IN THE WORLD

GREAT LAKES NAVAL TRAINING STATION

GREAT LAKES, ILL.

FORTY miles north of Chicago, on the shores of Lake Michigan, and fully exposed to the roaring Nor'easters that sweep unchecked across this inland sea, stands the Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

It is the most imposing and the most important establishment of its kind in the universe, and it has played an intensive part in the work of fitting the nation for war.

It was here that thousands of civilians of untrained muscles and peaceful mind were whipped into resistless human fighting machines and hurried abroad to subdue the Hun.

During the progress of the war more than 150,000 superbly trained sailors were sent to sea duty and to European waters from Great Lakes, and most of the time there were more than 40,000 men in camp.

They came from all directions, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf to Canada—from every variety of civilian occupation—in all conditions of physical fitness and unfitness. There were few in all those thousands who were in shape to withstand vigorous effort or exposure to the elements.

Yet, within a few months all became ideal American sailors, eager and willing for sea service—fully fit to combat the elements and every form of man-made war.

Can you draw a mental picture of the tremendous effort and the unremitting care that were necessary to produce such a result? Can you conceive the thought, the study, the labor required to transform men of peaceful tendencies into trained sailors who longed for battle, and who were in every sense fit to cope with the Hun, who had been drilled in the business of war from infancy?

Imagine, if you can, what a vast corps of able instructors was essential to not only educate these raw civilians in the ways of the navy but to guide their mental processes into entirely new channels, to feed, clothe and care for them properly, with a view to adding to their moral and physical stamina, and to inspire them with that clean patriotism which is the first step toward successful warfare.

The instructors were obliged to watch over these myriads of young men as a mother watches over her children. They had to keep them warm, comfortable, and happy. They had to entertain them to remove the sting of homesickness and prevent monotony and melancholy.

Even the air they breathed, the food they ate and the water they drank had to be kept scientifically pure and free from contamination. Every nerve in their young bodies had to be trained to resist the attacks of unseen and insidious foes.

And to this end the government chose its most eminent naval authorities, sanitary engineers, heating engineers, food experts, physicians, surgeons, and dentists, so that not one solitary detail of the sailors' daily lives was left to chance.

Their schools, mess halls, drill halls, barracks, warehouses and hospitals were fitted with the most approved modern appliances which kept them clear of contagion and as comfortable and cozy as home could be.

And all of this wonderwork was magnificently accomplished.

The Great Lakes Naval Training Station became one of the eight wonders of the world, and of lasting credit to the officers who presided over it from the beginning to the end of hostilities.

Yet, of all the serious problems to be solved—and they were legion—the one that stood head and shoulders over all the others was that of sufficient and sanitary heat.

On the very edge of Lake Michigan, within a few hundred yards of the water, in fact, the naval station stands on an utterly flat shore, 70 feet above the water and entirely exposed to the wintry winds, which are often hurricanes and blizzards. During the bitter weather of December, 1917, and January and February, 1918, great suffering was entirely obviated because the heat problem had been satisfactorily and thoroughly solved.

The many buildings were distributed over approximately 1,200 acres of ground, and the big problem lay not alone in choosing the right type of heating plant but in distributing the heating plants in such a way that one part of Great Lakes would be as warm as another.

The problem was solved in such manner that Great Lakes will go down in history as the best built, the warmest and most comfortable of all the American training camps.

Not a solitary item was left to chance. No influence was great enough to have the slightest effect. The big problem was solved strictly on its merits, and this led the board unerringly to the Kewanee Steel Firebox Boiler, which has served this nation, and the people in it, with signal success for the past thirty years or more.

The station bought and installed, either direct or through contractors, 190 Kewanee Steel Firebox Boilers, and thus, in mechanical equipment, the Great Lakes station became unique in that it has in operation more heating boiler capacity than any other single institution in existence —and thus it is the greatest heating plant in the world.

These 190 boilers were all furnished by the Kewanee Boiler Company of Kewanee, Ill., since July, 1917.

Combined, these boilers have 22,362 horse power, or an average of 117 horse power per boiler.

If placed end to end, these 190 boilers would cover a space of more than half a mile. If set close together, side by side, the battery would have 984 feet frontage, or nearly one-fifth of a mile.

These boilers contain 217,547 feet of boiler tubes and 4,820 square feet of grates. The smokestacks furnished with the boilers, if placed end to end, would make a stack of 6,652 feet, or more than one mile high. That would be the greatest smokestack in the world for a heating plant.

These 190 boilers have a combined capacity of over 2,200,000 square feet of direct radiation, or an average of 11,900 square feet per boiler, or, to put it in other words, four hundred carloads of radiation.

These 190 Kewanee Steel Firebox Boilers are distributed among twenty-two camps at the Great Lakes station. Every heating unit is equipped also with Kewanee hot water storage tanks, and the larger units with Kewanee water heating garbage burners.

Naturally we are proud of the fact that the Kewanee Steel Firebox Boilers have been chosen to create the greatest heating plant in the world. But we are prouder of the results that have been achieved. We feel as though we have "done our bit" in promoting the comfort and health of these thousands of courageous young men who went away to sea. And, perhaps, while you who read this will be apt to accuse us of blowing our own horn, we would like to ask you if you wouldn't blow yours if you had participated in a line of endeavor that helped make capable and happy sailors who went, fully prepared, to the four points of the compass, to fight for our flag?

SOLDIERS SEND CHICAGO APPEAL FOR SWEITZER

Wounded Men at Fort Des Moines Favor County Clerk.

Wounded Chicago soldiers in United States general hospital No. 26 at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, made an appeal yesterday to their comrades in Chicago to vote for Robert M. Sweitzer for mayor. Their appeal, carrying with it a denunciation of Mayor Thompson, reached Mr. Sweitzer just as he received news of the death of his 17 year old nephew, Leon Sweitzer, who died of wounds received while he was fighting with the famous Fifth regiment of marines.

The appeal of the wounded soldiers was forwarded to Mr. Sweitzer by Thomas A. Devens, a wounded former member of Company I, Sixteenth United States infantry, of the First division.

Text of Appeal.

The appeal follows:

"As time rolls on we find ourselves face to face with the question of who is to be our next mayor. No doubt in the city of Chicago there are a great many people who think Mr. Thompson, who is now holding the chair would be the right man for the next term.

"If the people of Chicago who are trying to keep him there could hear what the soldiers of that city have to say (I mean the men who participated in the great battles 'over there' and brought back what this great country of ours wanted, victory) they certainly would not want him there for another term.

Not Like Thompson.

"If the people could only understand how we feel toward the candidate we are indorsing, Mr. Robert M. Sweitzer, a man who will surely carry the majority of votes over the top, they would all vote as we shall do, making him the next mayor. We know that he will give us a hearty handshake on our return with the true American spirit, knowing that he is with us and not like Thompson, who was against us at the start of the war.

"We heard about his pacifist talk while we were shedding our blood 'over there.' A man who could be against the fight we were making for democracy should not be placed in the mayor's chair again.

"Although disabled and still in the hospital, suffering from our wounds, we are with Sweitzer, and before long we expect to be home. We hope that our comrades who have not seen service 'over there' and are now home will vote as we would, who at present are not allowed to vote, thus putting the right man in the right place, Mr. Robert M. Sweitzer.

"Hoping to see Robert M. Sweitzer as our next mayor, we remain, very sincerely,

"SOLDIERS AND SONS OF CHICAGO,
"U. S. Army Hospital No. 26,
"Fort Des Moines, Ia."

Hundreds of similar letters have been received by Mr. Sweitzer from soldiers and sailors and many of them have called at his office to assure him of their support.

$75,000 LIBERTY BOND ROBBERY.

Hutchinson, Kas., Feb. 8.—The safety deposit boxes of the Buhler State bank, at Buhler, near here, were robbed last night of from $50,000 to $75,000 in Liberty bonds and war savings stamps. No cash was taken.

IN THE POLITICAL POT

Evidence that "Big Bill" is slipping is seen by the Olson managers in letters that are being sent out from the Thompson headquarters. The usual charges that the press of the city is unfair and refuses to print the truth about the mayor are contained in these letters, and the information is given that a ten weeks' subscription to the Republican, the Thompson organ, has been bought for the recipient of the letter by the writer.

Mayor Thompson is billed for four Sunday meetings today, as follows: North Side Turner hall, 822 North Clark street, 3 p. m.; Morgan Park Sunday Evening club, 5 p. m.; Fulton Street Methodist Episcopal church, 7:30 p. m.; Women's Forum, 8 p. m.

Returning soldiers and sailors are volunteering their services to Judge Olson in his campaign for mayor. Maj. David W. Shand, who spent three months in France with the Prairie division, and is the youngest major in the army, is among the first to aid the judge.

Syrian women residents of Chicago declared for Capt. Charles E. Merriam at a meeting of foreign born women held yesterday at the Hotel Morrison.

Women voters of the Thirty-third ward, the home of Fred A. Lundin, have organized an Olson club with more than 650 members.

Capt. Merriam speaks today in two churches, in the morning at the Auburn Park Swedish Methodist Episcopal church and in the afternoon at Olivet Baptist church.

OLSON LEADERS ARRANGE CLIMAX FOR CAMPAIGN

Republican harmony leaders who are backing Chief Justice Harry Olson plan to bring his campaign to a climax Tuesday night when a great mass-meeting will be held in Arcadia hall, Broadway, near Wilson avenue.

At this meeting Judge Olson will explain fully his attitude on the traction and gas questions and other problems confronting the city. With him on the stage as speakers will be former Gov. Charles S. Deneen and Attorney General Brundage, leaders of the two Republican factions which have united behind his candidacy.

From now on the efforts of the Olson backers will be devoted in a large measure to uniting all the Republicans opposed to Thomponism on Judge Olson's candidacy. The Olson leaders declare that the Merriam campaign has lost its momentum and the time to bring about a swing from the captain to Judge Olson is at hand.

Judge Olson paved the way for this movement yesterday when he made the declaration that "a vote for Merriam is a vote for Thompson."

"The fight is between Thompson and myself," he said. "It is an assured fact that the Republican party will come into power at the election two years hence. Now is the time to put Chicago in line for her work at the national election. Everywhere the party is united except in Chicago. The only blot on the party is 'Big Bill,' right here in Chicago, and this year we are to bring the real Republicans into power here. Any one voting for Merriam is casting his vote for Thompson.

"The harmony ticket is out to win this city for good government. Our hard hitting campaign has thrown the Thompson crowd into disorder.

"Either one of the organizations supporting me would be able to defeat 'Big Bill' single handed—the two together make his defeat certain."

PUGH DECLARES MERRIAM BEST MAN FOR MAYOR

Candidate Says He Will Not Be Governed by Primary.

James A. Pugh declared for Capt. Charles E. Merriam for mayor yesterday, because "of all the candidates I believe he is the man best fitted to serve Chicago."

Pointing out that the government of the city is a "$100,000,000 business," he said Chicago wants the full time of an upright, able executive. Mayor Thompson, he said, had neglected his job and thinks a half hour a day at the city hall is time enough for its management.

Merriam Attacks Olson.

Capt. Merriam in a statement issued last night charged Judge Olson with agreeing to support Mayor Thompson in the event Thompson should receive the Republican nomination.

"At the recent conferences regarding the joint discussions between mayoralty candidates," he said, "in reply to the question of Senator Ettelson, Mr. Haas, representing Judge Olson, declared that Olson would abide by the decision in the primaries. He has denounced Mayor Thompson as a menace to the city, the Republican party, and the nation. But he intends to support him in case Mayor Thompson wins at the primaries.

Will Not Support Thompson.

"My position upon this point has been made perfectly clear. I place the interests of Chicago above the interests of a faction or a party. . . . I do not have the slightest intention of being a party to another four years of Thompson's administration if there is any alternative.

"Far off in Italy, where the life and death struggle for world democracy was in full swing, I had to hang my head in shame when the city hall news came over the wire. My blood boiled at the un-American utterances of the mayor of Chicago."

RICHBERG SAYS MAYOR MISLEADS PUBLIC ON GAS

Donald R. Richberg, special counsel for the city council in gas litigation matters, issued a statement last night declaring that Mayor Thompson and Corporation Counsel Ettelson were trying to mislead the public on the gas rate controversy matter.

Mr. Richberg said the mayor and the law department, in their statements and campaign arguments, were trying to make it appear that he had not adequately protected the gas consumers' rights in the action of the state public utilities commission in allowing a 27½ per cent increase in rates.

"When the mayor and his gaseous lawyer state that the Supreme court has held that an appeal from the order of the commission in the Sangamon county court is 'the only method to attack such decisions' they state that which is untrue and that which they know to be untrue," Mr. Richberg said.

"Judge Baldwin decided last month that the state's attorney could attack the commission's order in Cook county and could raise the points here which Mr. Ettelson has failed to raise in appealing the elevated fare rate to the Sangamon county court."

THOMPSON HINTS OLSON'S FAMILY IS ON PAY ROLL

Asks Chief Justice Questions About the Courts.

Intimations that Chief Justice Harry Olson has made of the Municipal court a "family circle," putting relatives on the pay roll for a total of more than $2,000 a month, were made yesterday by Mayor Thompson.

"I challenged Judge Olson to meet me on the public platform in joint debate so that we might discuss before the citizens of Chicago the issues involved in this campaign," said the mayor.

"After accepting my challenge and appointing a representative to arrange for the debate, the judge apparently repented, as his representative announced that he would be too busy making speeches to engage in debate.

Raises Some Questions.

"The judge apparently considered it the better part of discretion to avoid a discussion of his connection with public funds. It was not my purpose to show that members of his family are on the pay roll of the Municipal court for a total of over $2,000 per month, but I would like to have him answer these specific questions which deal with his, not his employés', acts:

"1. Is it not a fact that when you, Judge Olson, were a candidate in 1912, you assured the deputy bailiffs and clerks of the Municipal court that in case you should be reëlected those who were qualified would be continued in the service irrespective of their party affiliations?

Deal with Cermak.

"2. Is it not a fact that after you were reëlected chief justice of the Municipal court on Nov. 5, 1912, you made a deal with Anton J. Cermak, who was elected bailiff of the Municipal court in the same election in which you were reëlected as chief justice, by the terms of which deal he was to have your salary increased $2,500 per year by the city council, of which he was then a member, in return for which you consented to the removal from office of the Republican deputy bailiffs and clerks you had promised to protect?

"3. Is it not a fact that in the execution of this deal Cermak caused an ordinance to be introduced in the council two weeks after your reëlection for a term of six years; that such ordinance was later approved by the council increasing your salary from $7,500 per year, the amount fixed by the statute, to $10,000 per year; and that in consideration thereof you consented to the discharge of the Republican deputy bailiffs and clerks, excepting your own relatives?

"4. Is it not a fact that the increase thus voted you was a violation of Section 11 of Article 9 of the constitution of Illinois?

"5. Is it not a fact that during the last six years you have pocketed through that action $15,000 of the city's money to which you were not legally entitled?"

TEACHERS' FEDERATION MEETING.

Officers will be nominated and amendments will be proposed to the bylaws of the Chicago Teachers' federation when it meets next Saturday.

$2,000,000 FIRM FACES QUIZ BY POSTAL AGENTS

It became known yesterday that postoffice inspectors are investigating the operations of the Industrial Securities company, of which Charles R. Cole is president, to see if any violations of the postal laws were committed in the sale of the company's securities.

The securities company is capitalized at $2,000,000 and controls other companies with capital of nearly $20,000,000.

Several months ago the company was under investigation by the military intelligence department regarding literature mailed out by it that may have affected the sale of Liberty bonds.

The department of interior also started an investigation relative to a mine the company was financing in the state of Washington.

The memorial services will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Auditorium.

Dunne; an address on "Roosevelt, the Social Reformer," by Miss Jane Addams; an address on "Roosevelt, the Man," by Gov. Frank O. Lowden, and an address, "Roosevelt the Leader," by Gov. Henry J. Allen, who placed Col. Roosevelt in nomination in the 1912 Republican convention, and was the floor leader of the Roosevelt forces in that body. Resolutions will be offered by Edgar A. Bancroft, which will be seconded by Fred G. Hopp of the Chicago Federation of Labor. The benediction will be said by the Rt. Rev. C. P. Anderson.

There will also be choral music under the direction of George Nelson Holt, with Miss Gertrude Jackson at the organ. This will consist of the singing by the audience of "America" and the hymn, "How Firm a Foundation." The meeting will be absolutely free, no tickets having been issued except to the stage and boxes. Raymond Robins will be chairman.

Eggs Drop 6 Cents More, to 37 1-2 Cents Wholesale

SCORNS ALIMONY FROM ONE TIME HEIR TO FORTUNE

Roland Fischel, disinherited son of a millionaire, was divorced yesterday from Leah Marinoff Fischel, 1133 South Lincoln street, who charged extreme and repeated cruelty. According to the evidence presented before Judge Hopkins in the Superior court Mr. and Mrs. Fischel were married in August, 1916, and lived together until Jan. 31, 1917.

"On a birthday party when we were alone I suggested how he should cut the cake, and he threw the knife at me. Then he choked me," said Mrs. Fischel.

"You will be granted a divorce," said the judge. "Want any alimony?"

"No, he never has any money." And she left the courtroom.

SIXTY FLEE FROM FIRE.

Fire, the origin of which is unknown, was discovered in the basement of a five story building at 166 West Monroe street yesterday and sixty employees of the Eugene E. Dietzgen company left the building. The Dietzgen company manufactures architects' and artists' supplies.

SEEK TO CHECK BOSSES' RULE IN U. S. SENATE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—Proposals to discard the senate seniority committee custom were considered today at a caucus of Republican senators. Definite plans for reorganization of the next senate, in which the Republicans will have a majority of two, were brought before the caucus.

The recently appointed rules revision committee, of which Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin is chairman, had prepared a report for submission to the caucus. The report, Senator Lenroot said, recommends a revision of the rules so as to prohibit a chairman of any of the ten principal committees from serving as chairman of another committee.

A chairman of any one of the ten larger committees, it is recommended, may serve on a minor committee but shall not by seniority of service be named as a conference representative of the minor committee unless so elected by a majority vote of the committee members of his own party.

THE WM. H. BRITIGAN ORGANIZATION
EXCELLENCE IN CHICAGO SUBDIVISIONS

The Great Low Priced "Own-Your-Home" Sale

Beginning Today-Ending Feb. 18TH

Today you have money enough to make a start on the way to ownership of your home and it's up to you to make that start if you want to know the happiness, the satisfaction, the comfortable sense of security that comes from owning the home you live in, whether it be a bungalow, a two-flat, a three-flat or an imposing and expensive dwelling.

A Nationwide "Home" Movement

There are over twenty million investors in America today where there were not a half million in 1916, and over the whole nation there is a movement to convert these investors into "home-owners." More men are making money today than ever before. Thousands of women in Chicago are today making men's wages. These people want to put their money into something permanent, something that no one can steal. something that will get more valuable from year to year. That's why all over the land people are thinking and talking about "homes," about putting their money into the best investment in the world—"homes" in "The Land of the Free."

Britiganwood a Home Property

The greatest medium-priced property on Chicago's North Side is BRITIGANWOOD—a great subdivision that is beautifully shaded, that has wonderful streets, fine improvements and planned to become a graceful wooded home spot for Chicago's population. Thousands of people of refinement will dwell here. Typical North Side bungalows, high grade two and three flats, and imposing apartment houses will help to beautify this great "home" property. Our work has already resulted in an increase in value of this property of over 300%. In a very few years the lots that you can buy today for $23 a front foot should be worth $50.

Smashing 10-Day Drive Before the Big Price Raise

Bungalow Lots—Lots for 2 Flats—Corners for Big Apartments—
HOME Lots—Lots for 3 Flats—Unrestricted Business Lots

Never again will this opportunity be yours. We have no war profits in this property, no additions for increased labor costs, no fictitious profits for ourselves. The same prices that are on our property today were placed there before the war began. You pay more for food and clothes but you don't pay more for BRITIGANWOOD ADDITION lots—until noon February 18th. So you MUST act quickly, TODAY.

Are You a Waster or a Saver?

You can't be both—you must either save and invest your money or spend and waste it. No man ever got rich on what he wasted, no prodigal spender ever built "home" happiness. Your neighbors who are the responsible members of the community are men who own their homes or their flat buildings. Their credit is good everywhere. The community honors them—the people look up to them as substantial citizens. The waster is a drag on human society, suspected by his neighbors, a man with no credit and no financial responsibility. To which class will you belong? To which class do you belong today? Think it over.

$10 a Month Will Start You

You can buy BRITIGANWOOD ADDITION property for as low as $10 a month after your first payment. This means that you can get this great investment by saving just a little every day—so little that you will not miss it. Certainly you can't establish an income account on such a fine basis that will ripen so rapidly into an investment of profit and satisfaction.

The Great Family Investment

The family is the unit of society and the home where mother dwells is the great magnet that holds the unit together. Therefore, the home as an investment in family happiness is the most vitally human and most humanly profitable of any investment in the whole world. A beautiful home lends enchantment to the hours you spend there, the trees and flowers embellish family affection, and refined neighbors make the social life of the family more full and complete and varied. BRITIGANWOOD property is filled with trees which it would take hundreds of thousands of dollars to replace. Its soil is fertile, so that flowers will grow there in abundance. It is so restricted as to attract only people of refinement and education. Its business districts will soon begin their developments, and schools, churches, fine theatres, shops and banks will be established. A home in BRITIGANWOOD or its ADDITION will indeed be a home that will be "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

MATERIAL MEN MOVE TO START BUILDING BOOM

Quote Figures to Show Prices Are Fair; Will Aid Work.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Building material men are anxious that Chicago construction shall start. Representatives of lumber, lime, cement, sand, stone and brick gave a luncheon for that particular purpose yesterday at the University club.

"We have 150,000 cubic yards of sand in our yards and we will sell it for the same price we obtained in 1917," said J. W. Alder, president of the American Sand and Gravel company. "We will produce 1,000,000 more this year and we will sell that at the same price. We want to encourage building. We are doing better than that offer now. In 1917 we received $2.75; we are now offering the same sand at $2.50 and we are selling a little at $2.35. Sand has not jumped from $1.35 to $2.50 in the last year."

Would Restrict Profits.

"You can do anything you want to with the Illinois Brick company, with just one proviso," said William Schlake, president of the corporation. "All I ask is 6 per cent for the stockholders; then you can fix the price. Let the government do it; or let us fix the price and have the government take every cent away from us in taxes over 6 per cent. We only paid 3 per cent last year and we will have nothing for the first half of this year.

"Show me a millionaire brick manufacturer in the entire country. I don't believe there is one. Maybe some one will mention Tom Carey as having money. He did not make it in the brick business. But millions are made in manufacturing other things. I can show you millionaire builders and architects in Chicago. I know a builder who thinks he is a pauper unless he has $1,000,000 balance in the First National bank.

Assails Speculators.

"Yet the speculative builders, bankers, and architects represent themselves as patriots and us as profiteers. I believe brick is selling lower in Chicago than in any other large city in the country. The government fixed the price at $10.50 per 1,000 at the kiln and our price of $12, delivered, is $9.50 at the kiln. The government fixed a price of $19.50 at the kiln in Philadelphia.

"Why not reduce the profits of the builders, architects, and bankers who are parading their patriotism? The material men want to help Chicago and will do anything within reason. We sustained a loss of $378,000 last year in our company. We started the year with a surplus of $387,000 and that was wiped out, except $9,000, and we were not able to carry insurance in order to make even that showing.

"The big cost of brick is labor. Any material reduction in wages now would be a crime. It would bring on bolshevism, and I won't be a party to anything of that character."

Offer to Open Books.

Each representative present had figures from his books showing the part that labor plays in producing materials. Nearly every one offered to open their books to any reputable person to verify his statements. They asserted vigorously and repeatedly that the increased cost of building materials is more than justified by the advance in wages and freight rates. One material will serve as illustrative—cement.

B. F. Affleck, president of the Universal Portland Cement company, predicted that if the government were to fix the price it would be 20 to 30 cents higher per barrel than now asked.

"I notice a builder says that the price in the last year has jumped from $1.35 to $2.25," he stated. "The facts are the price now is $2.25, last year $2.11, and the year before $1.86.

Cites High Freight Rates.

"The price in Chicago today is the lowest base price in the country, with the exception of two or three very small centers. During the first half of 1918 we shipped from the Chicago plant a little less than 2,000,000 barrels at a cost of $796,000. That was an average freight cost of 37 cents per barrel. The last half of the year we shipped 2,087,000 barrels at a cost of $1,190,000, or a freight charge per barrel of 57 cents. The increase in freight cost was 19 cents, or 51 per cent.

"The increases in cost of production in 1918 over 1915 are approximately as follows: Raw material, 20 per cent; fuel, 115 per cent; labor, 127 per cent; mill overhead, 110 per cent; general expense, 49 per cent; packing and loading, 167 per cent, and care of empty sacks, 62 per cent. Common labor in 1915 cost 19.5 cents per hour, in 1916 27.5 cents, in 1917 33 cents, and in 1918 42 cents. That is an increase of 115 per cent. Take now what we call turn men. In 1915 they received $2.30 a day, $3.20 in 1916, $3.85 in 1917, and $5.67 in 1918. That is an increase of 146 per cent."

Other Dealers Figure.

The sand, gravel, lumber, stone, and lime men went into as much detail. Thomas Brisch of the Wisconsin Lime Manufacturers' association asserted that there is no cost whatever to producing lime except labor. He said the fuel was free and no pretense was made to charge for it.

Edward Thornton of Thornton-Claney Lumber company asserted that speculative builders have grossly misrepresented the price of lumber and he produced detailed figures to prove his statements, which will be printed later.

W. A. Smith, secretary of the National Federation of Construction Industries, said he had been attempting for four weeks in Chicago to ascertain if the material men are asking excessive prices.

"I had hoped to unearth something," he said. "I have found instead that they are all losing money.

"But on the larger question let me say that building must go on. Building is the largest industry in the country except agriculture, and the building industry has suffered more by the war than any other.

"The government should encourage building. It should provide public works. That is necessary as a peace measure, and I hope Washington will soon see it."

Gov. Frazier Here to Speak at Labor Party Meeting

Gov. Lynn Frazier, Nonpartisan league executive of North Dakota, arrived here yesterday and was met at the Northwestern station by a group of 100 representatives of local organized labor. Gov. Frazier comes to speak at a Labor party meeting to be held this afternoon at Car Men's hall, Ashland avenue and Van Buren street.

Gov. Frazier and several other representatives of the league and of the local Labor party talked over plans for possible amalgamation in a national movement. The session was executive.

HIGHER FREIGHT RATE ON BUILDING STUFFS BLOCKED

Department of Labor Puts a Check to Rumor.

The attempt to raise freight rates on building material in the Chicago district apparently has failed. Freight is a large item in the cost of these materials, and its increase would boost the cost of road construction, office buildings, flats, and other structures. The department of labor announced yesterday in Washington that it has been assured by the railroad administration that the freight increase on sand, gravel, crushed stone, and slag will not be allowed.

It was uncertain who was attempting to put through the scheme—the railroads or the railroad administration—but the latter has the authority to stop it.

Survey of Conditions.

The public works and construction development division of the department of labor has been conducting a survey of conditions affecting highway and general building operations since THE TRIBUNE told the public what was attempted before a representative of the railroad administration at a meeting in the La Salle hotel.

The division says it has received reports indicating that road construction would be deferred "because of the rumor." The "rumor" was a report of an official hearing of the railroad administration which contemplated increases of less than 10 to more than 100 per cent, or a probable average between 25 and 40 per cent.

Need of Buildings.

The labor department has sent out posters, intended to encourage building. One says: "During the war it was patriotic not to build. Now we can best show our patriotism by building." Another reads: "Own a home for your children's sake."

The building committee of the county board took representatives of various industrial and civic organizations yesterday to Oak Forest to show the need of added buildings.

The council judiciary committee will have a special session tomorrow morning to consider the advisability of an investigation of building at present. Ald. A. O. Anderson presented a resolution asking the inquiry.

OUTLOOK IN ILLINOIS.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 8.—Illinois can build but 50 per cent of the proposed 4,800 mile hard road system for $60,000,000 if the present high prices of road materials and labor continue, officials of the division of highways announced today.

Under the present prices, the officials declare, the system, as outlined in the act passed by the last general assembly, would cost $120,000,000, or twice as much as was originally figured.

Relative to starting work, the division is marking time to learn if the material manufacturers intend reducing their war prices.

HINES DOUBTS ABILITY TO START RAIL WORK HERE

Director General Tells Chicagoans He'll Do 'Best He Can.'

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Pleas for immediate resumption of track elevation work and carrying out of other railroad improvements in Chicago were made to Director General Hines by the delegation of Chicago aldermen and the committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce today.

The Chicago men dwelt not only on the necessity of the improvements but the necessity of providing work for the ever increasing army of the unemployed.

Mr. Hines said that he would instruct Regional Director Aishton to confer with the Chicago officials on the question of getting such work under way, but he also expressed the opinion that the government would be unable to render aid unless congress agrees to the proposed five year extension of federal control of the railroads.

Hines Sees Importance.

"I have been impressed with the important problem you presented," said Mr. Hines to the Chicago men. "I don't think there is anything in this country of greater importance at this time than to resume the improvement work held up by the war. Not only does the public need the improvements, but it is important to give labor employment right now.

"The railroad administration will do everything in its power to coöperate in promoting that policy. It has the interest of general welfare and besides the selfish interest in wanting to see business stimulated so there will be more for railroads to carry.

Much Uncertainty Prevails.

"When it comes to what the railroad administration can do it is confronted with uncertainty. There is an insistent demand that congress ought at once to adopt some legislation about the railroads and turn them back as promptly as possible to private control. If it turns out that that policy is adopted the situation will be that anything the railroad administration plans now for the government could not be carried out. That creates a situation of uncertainty.

"What we can do, and will do, even in the face of uncertainty, is to use whatever moral suasion we have to get the railroad corporations to consent to these improvements and to finance them. But in the face of existing uncertainty the government is not in position to enter upon an extensive program of financing.

"There is another side to this matter. I feel that it is not going to be possible in the immediate future for congress to work out a permanent railway solution. There are so many difficulties in the way that only time will make it possible to work out the solution and put it into effect.

"Therefore I have urged on the senate committee on interstate commerce the importance of giving a definite extension to the federal control, because I believe the chances are nine out of ten that later on they will find they will have to give the extension, anyhow.

"If an extension were given now, so that we could count with reasonable confidence on carrying out a governmental policy in this matter for a substantial period in excess merely of this twenty-one month period, the government would then be in position to take the initiative in the improvement matters.

"What you gentlemen have told me about the Chicago situation is a most striking illustration of the importance of getting action in this congress which will give us something definite to go on and which will be an immense influence in stabilizing this industrial situation and stimulating it, which is what it needs."

SELLS ANY CAR YOU LIKE, STEALS TO FILL ORDER

Selling an automobile by description and then stealing a car to fill the order is the method of a mysterious "Mr. Foley," according to a story told the police yesterday when Samuel H. Human, owner of a garage at Irving Park boulevard and Elston avenue, was arrested.

An automobile stolen from A. G. Harvey, 3331 West Madison street, on Jan. 15 was found in a garage on Michigan avenue. The books at the garage showed it belonged to Mr. Human.

Human declared that Jan. 14, the night before the car was stolen, a man he knew as "Mr. Foley" had sold him the car "by description" for delivery the next day. He said that the man delivered it, got his money, $650, gave a receipt, and went away. Mr. Foley has not been found.

THE one thing a Cadillac owner admires most in his car is its constancy.

He knows that he can depend upon it to do the same things, in the same way, whenever and wherever he calls upon it to do them.

The Cadillac does not, as one owner has aptly said, meet a man with a smile one day and a snarl the next.

It is a stable, steadfast, faithful friend, and he knows it will not fail him.

He knows it will start; he knows it will go, no matter how swift the going; he knows it will respond with a rush when he presses down the accelerator.

If the journey be one of ten miles or ten hundred, he can count upon this same unchanging, uniform performance, from the joyous start to the fresh, fine finish.

Every mile of those ten, or ten hundred, or ten thousand miles, he is serenely sure of the same sense of ease and security.

He drives the Cadillac into the garage at night, knowing it will meet him with the same splendid readiness in the morning.

That is one reason why the average Cadillac owner can see no other car on earth save the Cadillac.

It gives him constancy in performance and he gives it back constancy in friendship.

Except in improved quality of performance, the Cadillac does not change, and therefore the Cadillac owner does not change.

very fact here recorded in relation the problem of malnutrition as it s up with the foreign born newly e among us emphasizes the neces- y of the systematic campaign of cation. We can learn something m the newcomers and, if we are to out of them the best there is in n, we must teach them much.

Teach Small Children.

t is because they do so thoroughly in the policy of "here a little a little" that many of the welfare schools teach cooking to of 5, 6, and 7 years—simple like the preparation of cereals making toast and cocoa. In some schools they begin this instruction with pupils of such a tender age that they take the precaution to use only electric stoves mounted on low tables so that the danger of accident shall be eliminated.

All that contributes to a wider propaganda, for the children take ideas home, and the time comes when the foreign born mother gets the hang of preparing oatmeal so that it is palatable to those who first considered it only a tasteless kind of paste, or an excuse for the sugar they were able to lavish upon it.

The results of systematic training along these lines in the public schools would obviously be incalculable, even though it did not go beyond fundamentals taught to very young children. The social settlement workers get good results out of their domestic science classes for foreign born mothers, but in dealing with these adults they sometimes encounter such weariness of flesh and spirits and such a fatalistic kind of resignation that you frequently hear them say: "It is much less easy to do anything with the parents than with the children."

800 BOYS AND GIRLS COMPETE IN 'TRIBUNE'S' ICE RACES

MAROONS DEFEAT ILLINI, 17-12, FOR FIFTH STRAIGHT

Midway Tossers Excel in a Rough Game with Urbana Five.

BY MAROON.

Chicago met and conquered the Illinois basketball team last night, 17 to 12, making the Maroons' fifth straight victory in this year's conference race. The game, at Bartlett gymnasium, on the Midway, developed into a rough clash, but Chicago had the edge in scoring and guarding.

The Maroons forged ahead in the first fifteen minutes of play, although every point represented much hard struggling over the floor. Illinois failed on numerous shots in this time.

Illini Brace a Bit.

The rest of the first half witnessed a spirited flurry by Illinois, the Orange and Blue coming from behind with 7 points to Chicago's 5, making the score at half time 11 to 7.

The second half was a rough and tumble period, with the Illini forcing the issue and Chicago defending in brilliant fashion. Capt. Hinkle gave a fine exhibition of guarding in this period, and his floor work and that of Big Dutch Gorgas broke up some of the downstaters' sallies.

Fail When Chances Offer.

The sallies were often successful, however, to the point of working the ball to Chicago's goal, but the Illini muffed their chances by missing their shots. Lineup:

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The Minnesota basketball team kept its slate clean by defeating Iowa for the second time this season. The score was 36 to 22. Iowa gave the Gophers a much harder battle than had been anticipated and in the first half the Hawkeyes played Gophers even. The period ended with the Minnesota five on the long end of a 12 to 6 count.

[illegible] was the big star for Minnesota with seven baskets. Capt. Platou also put up a good game at guard, making twelve points. Cotton was Iowa's best bet, caging six baskets. Lineup:

I. A. C. FIVE JARS GRANT, 34 TO 23

Illinois A. C. vented vengeance on Camp Grant soldiers for the basketball defeat which the latter administered to the local club two weeks ago, when they scored a 34 to 23 victory at the Tri-color club last night.

In the 135 pound curtain raiser Lake View Reds won in five minutes' extra time from Hamilton Park Blues, 38 to 30. The Reds went wild in the extra period and caged six ringers, after the score had stood 26 to 26.

Johnny Dixon and Huber were stars of the big game for the I. A. C. Hemsath, Camp Grant's center, played a whale of a game. Lineup:

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS
by RING W. LARDNER

THE MARRIED LIFE OF EDNA AND JESSE.

Chicago, Feb. 6.

Dear Girlie:—

Well, girlie, I know you will think I am horrid and ungrateful for not writeing before to thank you for the beautiful wedding gift you sent us and I suppose you are thinking that now I am an "old married woman" that I am going back on my girl friends and haven't time to think of them. Well, I have been pretty busy for a fact as we just got back last week from our trip and since then I have been busy every minute with housework and writing "thank you" notes and etc. but I didn't want to write you just a cold formal note and so waited till I had time to sit down and write you a real "honest to goodness" letter.

Well, girlie, I just haven't words to describe what a beautiful honeymoon we had and what a wonderful husband I have and I feel like kneeling right down and thanking the Lord that I waited for Jesse instead of accepting one of the others that came before as I know now that I couldn't of ever been happy with anyone but he as he is all that a husband could be and a great deal more and I sometimes feel like I don't deserve such happiness and that it may be "only a dream" after all and then I pinch myself to see am I dreaming or awake.

Well, girlie, we were gone three weeks altogether and spent it in several places, but most of the time we were in Danville where Jesse had some customers to see and everybody was simply lovely to us and Jesse's business friends kept saying how lucky he was to get such a pretty wife, but I suppose they always say that under the circumstances, but even if they didn't mean it they said it like they did and I bet I must of been a "blushing bride" all right as they certainly said things that would make anybody blush.

When are you coming to Chi? When you do you must sure make yourself "at home" with mother and Jesse and I, and you know we haven't much room, but "always room for one more," you know.

Jesse just came and demanded to know whom I am writing to, and I hid what I have written and pretended like I was embarrassed and that it was some man I was writing to, but as luck would have it I had already addressed the envelope and he saw your name, so my little game was spoiled. We are always kidding each other like that, and mother says we are just a "pair of children," but of course it's all in fun though Jesse says I am an awful tease. But I just can't help from acting like a child when I feel so happy, though of course deep down under the surface we are perfectly serious in our feelings towards each other, but as I tell Jesse he has often said I am only just a kid so he must not blame me if I act like one.

Well, girlie, my "husband" is getting jealous of me spending so much time writing to you even though he knows you are just my dearest girl friend and I tell him he must not try to "hog" all my time, but I will close as I just wanted to let you know I had not forgotten you and to thank you for the beautiful little electric toaster and some of the men in Jesse's office sent us one, too, but I tell Jesse that it isn't the cost so much as the person who sent it and I like your little one every bit as much as the one his friends sent.

Jesse says to send his "love," but I tell him I want all that myself, so he says make it "regards."

Yours ever,
EDNA CONKLIN CHARLTON.

MORIN DEFEATS DE ORO, 2 GAMES

Charley Morin won both blocks of his 400 point three cushion match with Alfredo De Oro of New York at Mussey's Monroe street room, and now is leading, 200 to 179. Morin won the afternoon block, 50 to 44, in sixty-five innings, getting high run of 7. De Oro at one stage led, 32 to 16, but Morin counted his last 34 points while the Cuban was making 12. The night game was rather slow, neither player being able to get a good sized run, Morin getting the only 4 made.

Four Chicago players and four from other cities have entered for the national amateur balkline championship match which will start at the Chicago Athletic association Feb. 27. Dave McAndless and Wirt Cochrane are from the Chicago A. A. and Percy Collins, who has been reinstated as an amateur, will represent the Illinois A. C. Robert Lord is the other Chicago entrant.

Benny Leonard Knocks Out Namesake in Fourth Round

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 8.—Benny Leonard, champion lightweight, knocked out "Wildcat" Leonard of this city in the last round of a four round bout here last night.

JESS-JACK BOUT DIVIDES OPINION OF BOXING FANS

Question Whether Willard Can Regain Form Makes a Betting Affair.

BY RAY PEARSON.

When the world's champion Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey hook up in that championship battle in July, there probably will be more betting on the result than in any heavyweight championship clash in years. This battle is a betting proposition—there is no getting away from that because either man will be conceded a chance to cop the victory.

Fans already are beginning to talk of the prospects of Dempsey against the champion. Willard undoubtedly will go into the ring favorite over the man from Salt Lake. He's the champion for one thing and that naturally would give him the call in the betting. Then he has other advantages over Dempsey that cannot be overlooked. He has a big shade in height, reach and weight. He probably will enter the ring outweighing Dempsey by nearly half a hundred pounds.

Speed Rests With Dempsey.

On the other hand Dempsey will have one thing on Willard that will count heavily, a thing that always does count heavily in a heavyweight contest. That is speed. When it comes to speed, Dempsey has it all over the champion. When that speed is coupled with hitting power such as Dempsey possesses, the fellow who wants to bet on Willard had better do a considerable amount of thinking before placing his coin.

Some critics already are coming to bat with predictions. One of these is Jack Skelly of Yonker, N. Y., who many years ago was a pretty classy boxer himself. Skelly is a Willard man and makes no bones about it. There's only one provision that this critic makes and that is that the champion must get into fighting form.

If he does that, Skelly says that he will be invincible against all comers and that of course means Jack Dempsey. He does not believe that the champion can get into the shape he was when he stopped Jack Johnson in twenty-six rounds at Havana, but one is led to believe from his opinion expressed over his signature that Willard can train to the form necessary to trim any of his rivals.

Many Critics Favor Challenger.

There will be a lot of other fellows who can be tabbed as wise birds who won't look at things in the same light. They will point to the fact that in the last four years or since he annexed the title Willard has engaged in just one bout, that with Frank Moran in New York. The champion couldn't stop Moran in ten rounds and Moran by no one is credited with being the fighter that Dempsey is.

Those four years of ring inactivity certainly have done Willard no good. Lack of fighting is about the surest way in the world for a ring man to lose form. Willard has certainly lost form and it will require a lot of hard training if he is to regain it. Many wise people think that he could work his head off without getting in real shape, the kind of shape that will be necessary to defeat a man of Dempsey's caliber.

Look Out, Mr. Champion.

That matter of Willard's condition will be the one big thing that will make the fight a betting proposition. But even were Willard to get into shape, there are many critics, and some of them already have expressed their opinion, who think that the man from Salt Lake will dethrone the titleholder. They figured that no man even one of Willard's size, would be able to stand up under the sledgehammer punches of Dempsey. Jack hits equally as hard with his left hand as he does with his right. He slipped a knockout to Fred Fulton and he's done it to almost every man he has met. Therefore why shouldn't he do it to Willard?

Skelly's views are interesting even if they fail to pan out. This critic believes that Dempsey will fly at Willard in rushing style and plant his powerful wallops on the anatomy of the champion, but won't achieve the results expected. He thinks that Willard will be able to assimilate all the punches that Jack shoots at him without going to the canvass and in return will shoot some knockout wallops himself.

Critic Reserves His Opinion.

The writer is going to wait a little while longer before predicting which man will be returned the winner. One reason is that Willard isn't in the ring yet and it wouldn't be the greatest surprise in the world to see Big Jess change his mind about fighting when it comes time to settle down to the drudgery of training. Even with a chance to pick off the $100,000, he might not go through with the plans that have been made by Tex Rickard.

ROWLAND NOW IS A. A. MAGNATE IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 8.—It was officially announced at 5 o'clock this afternoon that Clarence Rowland, former manager of the White Sox, and Hugh Brennan, Chicago advertising man, had closed the deal for the purchase of a controlling interest in the Milwaukee baseball club.

Deal Pending for Weeks.

The deal has been on the fire since the middle of January, when Rowland obtained an option. Since then he has visited Milwaukee and made a careful investigation of the property and the conditions. Rowland and Brennan came here yesterday and renewed business with A. F. Timme, who has been president of the club. The stock was owned by Mrs. Timme.

"There are no others in the deal except Mr. Brennan and myself," said Rowland after the thing was closed. "I shall be president of the club, as well as manager of the team. Mr. Brennan will move to Milwaukee at once and assume the business management of the organization. I think the two of us can run the ball club and put Milwaukee back in the race for the American association pennant.

Promise Team in Fight.

"In our visits here we have found the people to be greatly interested in baseball and on every hand things have been encouraging. Milwaukee is a good baseball city and we propose to line up a ball team that will be in the fight."

The news that Rowland and Brennan were to own the club was circulated around Chicago yesterday afternoon, but as Rowland was in Milwaukee it was impossible to verify the report. A TRIBUNE correspondent in Milwaukee interviewed Mr. Timme, who declared it untrue and said Mr. Rowland didn't have a chance to buy the club.

KNABE TO RETURN AS CUBS' COACH; SEES FINE YEAR

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

F. Otto Knabe, champion coach and assistant leader of the Cubs, is coming back to help the north siders through another pennant fight. A letter from Otto reachced President Mitchell yesterday, saying he and Kid Gleason had arranged their business affairs so that both of them could devote next summer to baseball. Thus the entire Philadelphia firm of Gleason and Knabe will hold forth in Chicago.

Knabe said he only hoped the Cubs and White Sox would meet for the world's title next fall, so he could line up against his business partner in a diamond struggle.

Indianapolis as Cub Farm.

Mitchell was pleased with the news of the coming of his assistant, for he thinks there is none better in the business. For a time it looked as if Knabe would have to stay at home to run the billiard hall owned by himself and Gleason, in order to permit the latter to manage the White Sox. Last year Gleason stayed at home.

It developed yesterday that one or two Cub players are likely to summer in Indianapolis. Jack Hendricks, who has again assumed the management of the Hoosiers, called at the Cub office and asked for help in building a team. President Mitchell promised to do something for him later on if it is possible. Hendricks wants an infielder and a pitcher or two, and the Cubs have plenty of such varieties.

Hollocher Asks More Coin.

It was learned that Charley Hollocher had returned his contract to the Cub office unsigned and in St. Louis he was quoted as saying the figures didn't satisfy him. President Mitchell admitted the return of the contract and explained that he had given the youngster a substantial increase in pay, also that it would be sent back to him with a letter of explanation and, if that didn't satisfy, he probably would have Charley come up for a conference. Mitchell refused to feel worried over holdouts at this time of year.

"There's plenty of time yet," he said. "If the boys are still holding out when the training trip starts or after the season opens it is quite different."

Mann Reported as Holdout.

Another report was that Les Mann had returned his papers unsigned and had stated at Camp Logan, where he is in the Y. M. C. A. service, that he would quit baseball before he would play for such an amount.

LOCAL SKATERS TO MILWAUKEE

The cream of local skating talent, including Sigurd "Brick" Larsen of the Norwegian-American A. A., winner of THE TRIBUNE's second Silver Skates Derby; Julian Steinmetz, victor in THE TRIBUNE's Junior Silver Skates Derby this year; Fred Buendgen, who finished second to Larsen in the 1918 TRIBUNE classic; Martin Topper, Roy McWhirter, William Steinmetz, David Schultz, Jack Stowell, Harry Kaskey, Paul Quirk, William Geyer, and others, will leave for Milwaukee this morning to compete in the western skating championships to be held at Washington park this afternoon.

The Norwegian-American A. A. band will accompany its delegation of skaters and will furnish music during the championships.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Showing grit and determination, most important essentials in the development of successful athletes, about 800 of the flower of Chicago's youth yesterday competed in the semi finals of THE TRIBUNE's annual playgrounds and public parks skating tourney for the honor to represent their respective grounds in the grand final at Garfield park next Saturday.

Those who had earned the right to race by winning the championship of their respective grounds in the various age groups were rewarded for their patience. Despite the recent thaws which caused the races to be postponed, the boys reported in physical trim and Old Jack Frost rewarded them with good ice.

Sturdy Efforts are Admired.

Honest efforts of the boys to win by putting forth every ounce of physical effort in their makeups was the feature of the races which appealed to the thousands who watched at the seven different playgrounds and parks.

In most cases the races were won on their merits, while in some instances the best skaters were defeated because of racing inexperience. There were any number of close finishes and some boys were eliminated by the narrowest margins.

As some ponds do not permit of as large flooding areas as others too much stock cannot be placed in the time made. Where large courses were laid out, the racing was faster.

Experience Worth While.

Playground boys who have competed in open skating derbies at Humboldt park this winter showed to good advantage indicating that experience is a deciding factor in ice racing as well as in other branches of athletic activity.

Leon Emmert of Swift playground, who has skated to victory in several races at Humboldt park, glided to an easy victory in the 220 yard contest for boys of the Ravenswood district. He won his event handily. When he gained the lead he rode the turns to play the race safe. He also skated on the Swift team which won the one mile grammar school relay.

Harry Kaskey of Corkery playground, who made a strong bid for first place in THE TRIBUNE's Junior Silver Skates Derby, won the 440 yard event in the Lawndale district for 15, 16, and 17 year old boys. Like Emmert, he repeated in the one mile open relay by skating on his playground team. Wallace Fee of Swift, another who has won prizes in open competition, captured his race.

Three in a Bunch.

One of the best races of the day happened at Beutner playground. In the 220 yard race for boys 12, 13, and 14 years of age, with racing skates, Jackson of Fiske, Schneider of Drake and Johnson of Carter hooked up. Not a yard separated the first and third racer at the finish. The instant they crossed the line they fell in a heap. Jackson was given first place.

Several racers lost through lack of experience, the most conspicuous being in the 220 yard event for girls over 16 years of age in the Austin district at Garfield park. Miss Florence Debs of Holstein park went into the lead after the pistol. As she approached the last turn she led by fully twenty yards. Instead of riding or coasting around she attempted to skate and fell. Before she could regain her feet she was hopelessly out of the race. Audubon lost the grammar school relay in the Lake View district because the last skater, well in the lead, fell three times during his relay and was beaten at the finish.

Girls' Events Not Filled.

The girls' races and the event for men over 30 years of age failed to attract as large fields as expected. The directors, however, were pleased with the representation in their first attempt to interest the girls. It was contended that the men get enough competition in the open races held by the clubs.

In yesterday's races the winners of first and second places qualified for the finals, while only the winning relay teams will be permitted to race next Saturday. The contestants who win their respective events in the finals will be proclaimed the champions of Chicago's playgrounds and parks, as this year's tourney was thrown open to all skaters who are attendants of the public skating ponds.

Santa Monica Motor Race, Off During War, March 15

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 8.—The next Santa Monica automobile road race will be held March 15, according to the Los Angeles Motor Car Dealers' association, which will manage it. The distance will be 250 miles over the course used several years at Santa Monica, slightly shortened. This race because of war conditions has not been held since 1916.

RECORD OF :09 3-5 FIRST MADE BY AN OLD TIME PRO

Donovan Set Mark Away Back in 1895 Against Field of Stars.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Crooked as were professional foot racers of old, as a class, there were times when they had to run on the level. It was on such occasions that the fastest man of the year was determined. Of course, there had to be a stake worth while to get the men to run, so Capt. Cook of the Boston Police News and Mickey Finn, a promoter, who is now manager of the San Antonio baseball team of Texas, originated the then famous professional sprinters' sweepstakes.

It was in one of these races that the 100 yards was first stepped in this country in :09 3-5, official timing and measurement. The majority of athletic dopesters believe that Arthur Duffey was the first man to run the century in such time. Duffey made his record in New York, May 31, 1902. This amateur record and several others were taken away when he confessed professionalism.

Piper Donovan Sets Record.

Seven years before Duffey made his mark, the professional sweepstakes was held in Brockton, Mass. Piper Donovan of Natick, Mass., a brother of Pooch Donovan, present Harvard track coach, won the race in :09 3-5.

Cook and Finn conducted their first sweepstakes in 1893. The event was thrown open for bids and finally awarded to Goshen, Ind. The event was won by Tom Morris, California sprinter, in :09 4-5. The promoters made money on the event, which was heralded all over the country as the greatest ever staged in the history of foot racing.

Big Race of 1895.

Business men of Brockton, Mass., became so enthusiastic over it that they made a successful bid for the sweepstakes of 1895, considered by many old timers the greatest footrace ever run in this country.

The well known sprinters who put up forfeit money and toed the mark for the start were Walter Christie and Tom Morris of California, George Copple, Bancroft, Neb.; Piper Donovan, Natick, Mass.; Fred Stewart, Helena, Mont.; and George Brown, the Negro runner from Lynn, Mass. Morris and Donovan were favorites in the books at even money.

The race took place on the mile trotting track, with 100 yards marked off in front of the grandstand. The stretch was rolled to a hard surface, so the long spikes would take the necessary hold and at the same time not retard the speed of the runners.

Crowd of 50,000 Sees Race.

Although there were many counter attractions in and around Brockton on the day of the race, fully 50,000 persons jammed into the grandstand, stood in the inclosure, and lined the track the entire length of the stretch to see the race, the first between performers of known merit running on the level ever held in the New England states.

Sparrow Robertson, well known starter, who recently returned from France, where he was engaged in athletic work for the soldiers, was starter. When the sprinters were called to the mark fans were surprised to see Donovan warm up from a crouching start. Runners previously had always started from upright positions. Donovan did not put both hands to the ground. Instead he placed his right hand down with his left pulled back to his side and his arm crooked. He had practiced this start and realized he could get going quicker by bringing the left arm forward with a jerk when the gun was fired.

Donovan Short and Stout.

Donovan was not a big man. He was short and chunky, with big legs—an example of the men who make the best sprinters. It is a matter of athletic history that either short runners or tall ones, 6 feet or over, make the best sprinters. He gathered quickly and by swinging his legs to the sides took exceptionally long strides for a man of his build.

The sprinters were sent away to a perfect start. Piper and Morris forged to the front at the fifty yard mark. Donovan had a slight advantage, which he held to the finish. Morris was a yard back, with Brown in third position. Five timers, among them Fred Stone, held watches, and all but one gave Piper's time at :09 3-5.

WILD TURKEY FACTS.

We sure put our foot in it the other day in one of our bird notes when we quoted some one to the effect that the wild turkey is a minor leaguer from the sporting standpoint. Turkey hunters and ex-turkey hunters from all over this man's country have written telling us that we were wrong. What pleases us most is that every one of 'em told us in such a friendly sort of way that we slandered the grandest of all game birds.

W. M. Garlington, an ex-Floridian living in Chicago, covers the subject in a most interesting way. Bunch, meet Mr. Garlington:

"No hunter has to shoot turkeys on the roost. They possess two good wings, and will use them if given the chance, and when the hunter does shoot turkeys from the roost he does it from choice, and his choice may be prompted by one of two things—a desire to get a turkey by all means, whether fair or foul, or the desire to get a bird or two the last morning in camp so as to have them fresh when he arrives home.

"There are various methods of hunting turkeys, and I have had experience in the following: Yelping them up and shooting them from concealment—a la moose; concealing myself near a burn and shooting them when they came out to feed; stalking them as they fed along on a burn; just plain turkey hunting through the woods where they were known to range, and, horror of horrors! shooting them off the roost.

"Yelping a turkey within range requires the service of one who knows his business, unless the hunter be an expert, for a single false note is liable to send the turkey off in the opposite direction and the long wait will prove fruitless.

"Stalking turkeys as they feed along a large burn; ah, but that is where the real sport comes in! It is not so bad if the cover is heavy up to the edge of the burn, but where the burns are on the open prairie country your work is cut out for you. There will be much wriggling along, Indian fashion, until the birds are within range, and when the chosen shooting point is reached the hunter will find that his heart is beating like a triphammer from his exertions and the excitement of the stalk. Just try this on a dozen foxy, keen eyed gobblers feeding along a ten acre burn!

"Shooting turkeys from the roost. Prime reason, in my case, exceedingly warm weather, which causes the turkeys to sour very quickly. For two hours before sundown the afternoon before breaking camp to return home, two of us lay in the heavy palmetto and watched eight fine gobblers feed about on a burn. At times they fed within fifty yards of us, but we did not molest them. We let them get settled in a big cypress head and when dusk was falling we sneaked out of the cover as quietly as possible and went back to camp.

"Before daybreak the next morning we left camp and made our way to the cypress head, some three-quarters of a mile distant. Arriving at the head we entered and waded toward where we judged the turkeys to be. The water was from knee deep to waist deep; there were numerous cypress knees to bark our shins on as we progressed, and many vines and limbs to contend with, not to mention an alligator hole or two. Finally, just about the crack of day we were at what we thought was the proper place, so we stopped and awaited daylight.

"It finally became light enough to see and we commenced to scan the cypress trees for the turkeys. Now, locating roosting turkeys high up in a cypress tree filled with Spanish moss and air plants is no easy job, and many a northern hunter has filled an orchid full of 7½ chilled instead of the turkey he thought it was.

"Finally I located a young gobbler in a tree about thirty yards away, and when he became alarmed at our moving about he craned his neck in an effort to see us. This was what I wanted, and I tumbled him. One more was secured in the same manner a few minutes later and I had two turkeys to take home with me which would not sour on the way.

"You see, shooting turkeys from the roost is not like going into the henhouse and tumbling a Plymouth rock from the perch. The wild turkey is a great game bird. If you do not think so just pack your duffel and betake yourself to Fort Myers, Fla. Then secure the services of either Tom Hand, Rhett Green, Sam Thompson, or Bill Brown and tell them that you want to go turkey hunting across the Cypress, by way of Rocky Spring crossing, or below the Corkscrew."

S. Hendricksen, national amateur ski champion, and Nils Ruud, members of the Norge Ski club of Chicago, left Friday to take part in the international tourney at Revelstoke, B. C., on Feb. 12. Hendricksen and Ruud were invited by the Revelstoke Ski club and are the first Chicagoans to be asked to attend an international tourney at the expense of the home club.

Motions of Pitchers on Slab Often Cause Their Failure

BY I. E. SANBORN.

In no sphere of human endeavor is the importance of every little thing greater than in baseball. Missing one hit and run sign may lose a ball game and the loss of one game may mean the difference between first and second place at the finish.

Cy Morgan never knew why the Athletics kept batting him off the slab in every game he pitched against them until Connie Mack bought his release from the Red Sox. Then he found out.

The sharp eyes and keen brain of Chief Bender had discovered that Morgan rubbed his fingers on the ball a longer time when he made a bluff at throwing a spitball than he did when he actually moistened the cover preparatory to delivering the spitter. He had merely been overdoing the bluff and if the Athletics had peddled their discovery Morgan might have been batted out of the league without knowing why.

Frank Smith, former White Sox slabman, never could hold baserunners on first base with any consistency. If Billy Sullivan's reputation as a catcher had depended on his ability to nip runners at second when receiving Smith's delivery, Sully never would have got out of class D. But he was working for a clubowner who knew the ins and outs of baseball and who could see that the opponents were getting a running start on Sullivan every time they stole a base off Smith.

One of the reasons why Smith was let go was because he could not hold up the runners and he always had an alibi ready in the belief that it was his catcher's fault. Once when he was on the carpet in Comiskey's private office for failing to keep the runners closer to their bases, Smith hinted that some of the fault might be Sullivan's.

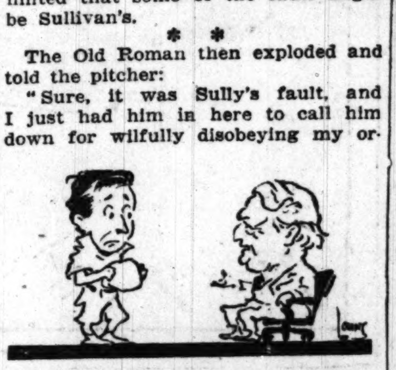
The Old Roman then exploded and told the pitcher:

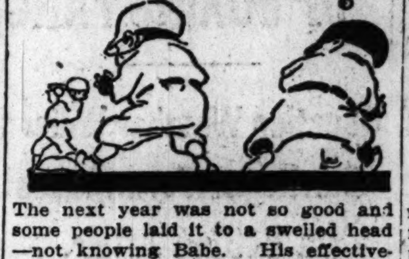
"Sure, it was Sully's fault, and I just had him in here to call him down for wilfully disobeying my orders. Some time ago I told him that the next time he was catching you and a runner started from first base I would fine him if he tried to get him at second base. I ordered him to throw to third to get the man because the runner would be on top of second by the time you let go of the ball."



Some time after Smith was released from the south side team one of the players on another club explained why they could run bases so freely when he was pitching. Somebody spotted the fact that when Smith intended to throw the ball to first base to drive back a runner he did not look in that direction before throwing, but he always looked toward first base when he intended to pitch to the batsman.

That information gradually spread through the American league, consequently the runners learned that the only time there was any danger of getting caught off first base was when Smith did not glance in that direction before starting his "motion." Any time he did look towards first they could take a long lead and start with his arm with absolute fearlessness as to the consequences.

Babe Adams blossomed into a hero his first year in the major leagues and was a wonder in the world's series of 1909 between Pittsburgh and Detroit.



The next year was not so good and some people laid it to a swelled head—not knowing Babe. His effectiveness decreased until Barney Dreyfuss finally lost hope and Adams drifted back to the minors.

Then the secret came out. Adams used a slightly different motion in pitching his curve ball than he did in delivering his fast one. Gradually this difference became known to the National league's batsmen as players were traded from one team to another and told what they knew to their new pals.

Last year Adams staged a comeback which was widely commented on at the time. Some of his success may have been due to the weakening of the batting strength of the teams because of the inroads of the war, but most of it was due to the fact Adams had learned to "cover up" and to pitch his curve and fast ball with exactly the same motion of body and arm.

If any baseball fan is puzzled by the great importance attached to these little things it may be explained that, if the average batsman always knew just what kind of a ball the pitcher was delivering there would be nothing but .600 hitters in the majors and the games would last longer than cricket matches.

Athletes of Oak Park Capture Dual Event

Oak Park won an unsatisfactory monopoly of honors in the track and field contests scheduled between Suburban league teams in Oak Park yesterday. Riverside High did not appear at all, turning a scheduled triangular meet into a dual affair, and La Grange High was unable to muster a senior team. Oak Park won the dual junior meet from La Grange, 41 to 27, the timers forgetting to clock the events. Summaries:

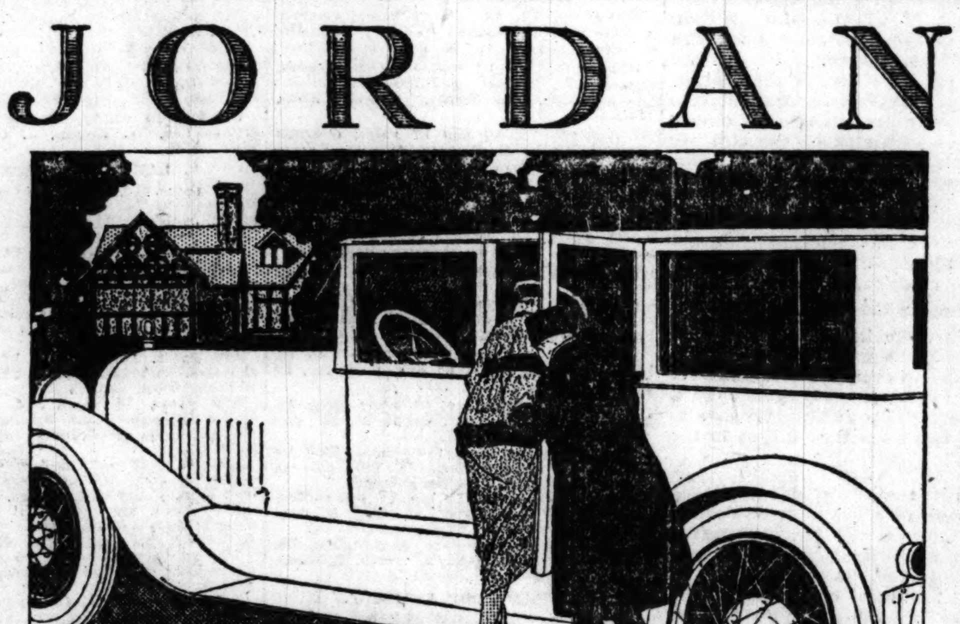
JORDAN



Fashionably Modern

Here is the newest Jordan—the Town Sedan.

Fashionably modern, it is the embodiment of the latter-day, four-door, straight-line, complete-vision type.

It is all-aluminum—exquisitely wrought. The graceful roof and belt line are slender. Windows, even in the rear, are broad and square cornered. So are the doors. And the glass is of that peculiarly thick, transparent kind that adds such richness.

The body of aluminum is lighter than any of its type. Comfortable, full-width, full-depth front seat. Two disappearing auxiliary seats. Rear seat of rare comfort, depth and repose.

Upholstery is new in design, soft in texture, durable in quality, neutral in color.

There are vertical outside door handles and Mount Vernon platinum fittings embellished with our individual design.

Doors are inset. There are Perfection window lifts. Yale locking device. Silk roller curtains. Braided cord detachable robe strap.

And the delicate intimacy of such an interior is further enhanced by Circassian walnut tastefully used for door and window mouldings. The optional colors, Liberty blue and Venetian green faithfully carry out, in the exterior finish, all the dignity and charm of body lines and interior appointments.

New in Beauty, Old in Virtues, This Maxwell Has Stirred America

MEN buying cars today are giving this present day Maxwell searching consideration. For where, this moment, can you get a car, like a Maxwell, the chassis of which has had a 300,000 manufacturing run and the beauty of which has been improved to an astonishing degree?

They're weighing the soundness of the 300,000-all-alike-for-five-years logic and they translate that into reliability supreme.

They know in their own business what changes in plan, in program, mean—how serious the losses in good will and profits—the dissatisfied customers.

Many of them have been "burned" by "new models" in days gone by, and have joined the "never again" club.

So this present day Maxwell has a deep appeal to them; and thousands since January 1 have reached for their check books as soon as they laid eyes on this new Maxwell.

Perhaps it is unfair to say "new" because the chassis is five years old in design. When we say "new" we mean its vastly improved appearance.

There are twenty-four things done to the Maxwell to make it better looking. Sharp angles have been removed; lines straightened; certain corners eliminated; bonnet vents increased in number; three more coats of paint added; fenders lowered; seats thickened three inches; a circassian dash installed; gas tank put in the rear, etc.

See the latest Maxwell, and you'll want one, too.

PURPLE BEATEN IN EXTRA TIME TILT WITH OWLS

Whiting Tossers Cage Winner After Rough Basket Battle.

Whiting, Ind., Feb. 8.—Nothing that could be thought of to make a basketball game thrilling was missing from the strenuous extra time tussle in which the Whiting Owls won tonight from Northwestern university, 36 to 34. The game was forced into two extra periods of five minutes, each being marked by swoops up and down the floor, with the players crashing into each other, and 2,500 onlookers yelling their lungs out.

The regular playing period ended with a 30 to 30 tie, because Northwestern in the midst of a furious onslaught had upset Whiting's lead of 21 to 13 at half time. In the first extra period, Wilcox and Marquardt annexed field goals through the hoop, but Feeney tied the count, 34 to 34, in the last thirty seconds, with the most spectacular play of the game. Knocked on his back, he completed the field goal he was attempting for the tying points.

The second extra period was won by Griesel's shot in the final minute, after the players had charged and slammed each other all over the court trying for openings. Many basketball rooters were turned away from the hall after it became jammed before the start of play. Lineup:

EVANSTON'S HEAVIES CRUSH SCHURZ FIVE; 130 LB. TEAM BEATEN

BY PREP.

After a 9 to 9 tie in the first half, Evanston heavyweights ran away from the previously unbeaten Schurz team, the final score being 33 to 13, at Evanston Y. M. C. A. yesterday. Schurz won the 130 pound game in a close fight, 19 to 18. Running Guard Noyes of Evanston was easily the heavyweight game star, holding Weigel, one of Schurz's scoring aces, to a lone basket, and caging five himself.

Schurz started with a rush, counting two field goals and two free throws before Evanston could interfere with its long passing game. In the second half Evanston showed fine team play, and with Brandt getting the jump on Christiansen of Schurz, worked the ball right down the floor and into the basket with little opposition.

The lightweight game was as close all the way as the major game in the first half, and Schomorod, a Schurz substitute, scored the winning basket just before the whistle blew. Flood made sixteen of Evanston's eighteen points. Lineups:

Tales of a Tee Box Tourist

BY JOE DAVIS.

ALTHOUGH he retired some years ago from active army service, Col. G. Watson French of Rock Island is a commanding figure on the golf course. He is well known around the Chicago district and competed several times with his son, G. Decker French, in the Pater-Filius tournament at the Midlothian club.

The western amateur championship in 1908 was held at the Rock Island Arsenal Golf club, Mason E. Phelps, defeating Harry W. Allen of St. Louis in the final. The tournament was remarkable for the early defeats of some of the stars, Donald Edwards defeating Albert Seckel and Kenneth Edwards defeating Chick Evans in the first round.

In the second round Donald Edwards, Warren K. Wood, Harry Legg of Minneapolis, and H. Chandler Egan, then living at Louisville, and R. E. Hunter were eliminated.

Preceding the tournament Col. French and John D. Cady of Rock Island, Warren Wood, Kenneth Edwards, H. Chandler Egan, and Robert E. Hunter engaged in a three a side match.

The colonel, who was the dean of the sixsome, was unable to help his side until the fifteenth hole was played. His second shot was on the green, seventy-five feet from the flag. He groomed himself for the long putt and the ball went straight for the hole, stopping momentarily on the edge.

Just then a big fly lit on the ball and apparently started to walk down the side of the ball away from the hole. The colonel, who had followed his putt, shouted excitedly, "The other way, you fool," and the fly started in the other direction just as the ball fell into the cup, giving the colonel a three. The other players got fours.

Mr. Cady, who tells this story, says he can produce ten witnesses.

West secured eleven tricks.

At first glance it seemed preposterous for east to raise a bid with such a hideous collection of cards. But the certainty that west was short of hearts made it probable that east and west could separate their trumps.

North and south could have made a grand slam at hearts and, of course, would have been wiser to bid six hearts. But the double seemed to promise a big penalty and could hardly be called bad play. The play of the declarer was perfect, as was also the manner of play. There was no hesitation at tricks three or five.

North, a good player, could hardly be criticized for not giving up the ace of trumps earlier. There was a chance that south might have the singleton king of spades, and at trick five the eight of clubs did not look like a winner.

South might have led the ace of diamonds at trick two, but did not like to lead away from ace-queen.

After trick five the play was easy for west.

Miss Shepard Wins Golf Event at Belleair Heights

Belleair Heights, Fla., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Miss Harriet Shepard of Hartford won the women's annual putting contest today when she made the eighteen hole course in 34 strokes, two under par. Miss Shepard won this same event last year after a tie with Mrs. W. W. Morrison of Toledo and was forced today to make the last two holes in one stroke each to defeat this same player. There was a field of over sixty players, but only a half dozen were able to make the course in less than forty. Mrs. F. W. Barker of Chicago took third place with 36, Mrs. George A. Baird, Chicago, 37; Mrs. C. E. Schell of Cincinnati, 38; Mrs. Daniel Simond, Fitchburg, Mass., 39; Mrs. James H. Barnard, Chicago, 39.

ECKHART IMPS ON TOP.

The Imps basket team of Eckhart park, with Simunich running the floor and feeding the ball to Sharpshooters Bennett and Cochrane, defeated Pulaski park, 37 to 12, at Eckhart park.

HUMBOLDT PARK CLASS A EVENTS TO W. STEINMETZ

Franklin Skaters Roll Up Highest Point Total; Carnival Follows.

Led by William Steinmetz, winner of both races for class A skaters, the Franklin Skating and A. Fred Groth, Philip McGrath, and David McCarl placed Delano playground in second place with 7 points. Northwest Sportsmen's club was third with 6.

Steinmetz showed he is in shape for the western skating championships to be held at Milwaukee today when he took the class A quarter mile from a fast field and then repeated in the mile and one-half race. He won both races handily.

Boys in Close Test.

Leon Emmert of Swift playground lost a hard fought event to George Thomson of Avondale in the contest for boys under 16 years. The pair raced stroke for stroke until the stretch, when Emmert weakened and Thomson won by a small margin.

After the races an ice carnival was held with the skaters in fancy costumes. The pond was perfectly lighted for the occasion.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

REAL ESTATE

A Safe Investment

The Paige costs more than some six cylinder cars and less than many others. But it is worth every penny of its price. That is the really important point.

Ours is not a "cheap" product—and never will be. Its price tag is governed entirely by the cost of high grade manufacturing materials and skilled labor. We are not interested in any form of "saving" that necessitates a compromise in our quality standards.

And this, perhaps, is the main reason why a Paige is so universally regarded as a safe and profitable investment.

HERE'S STORY OF GALLANT RECORD OF 'OLD SECOND'

Col. Davis Writes a Plain but Graphic Letter on Chicagoans.

"The Tribune" has been enabled in recent issues to give to its readers a comprehensive story concerning the actions of the various Chicago regiments up to the time of the signing of the armistice. Through the courtesy of B. A. Eckhart of Chicago, it presents herewith a detailed account of the actions of the One Hundred and Thirty-second infantry, the old Chicago Second infantry, I. N. G., written by the colonel of the regiment, Abel Davis of Chicago:

"IN FRANCE, Dec. 15.—Col. Bernard A. Eckhart, Eckhart Milling company, Chicago, Ill. My Dear Colonel:

"I understand from Harrison B. Riley that you have expressed satisfaction and pride in the work of your old regiment. As a friendly neighbor who has had occasion to observe the life of "your" regiment, I may assure you that you have just cause for being proud. The regiment has done splendidly and has covered itself with glory.

"As you know, Mr. Riley has adopted our regiment and has expressed his gratification over our accomplishments. There has been a friendly rivalry between your regiment and Mr. Riley's. They are both in the same brigade, and have done practically all of the fighting of the division.

Tells of Old Second's Record.

"Mr. Riley will undoubtedly claim his regiment to have been the best regiment in the Prairie division, which claim you might be inclined to contest in favor of your regiment. As an ex-member of your regiment and as one who has no interest in the outcome of any such possible controversy, I want to place certain information before you, which Mr. Riley will unquestionably use as a basis for his claim.

"Mr. Riley's regiment landed in France on May 24. In June detachments of the regiment were seeing service in the front lines in front of Corbie. On July 4 500 men fought with the Australians in front of Hamel and drew this commendation from the brigade commander of the brigade to which they were attached:

"'The Americans attached to us deserve special mention for their part in the operation. They behaved magnificently, but were rather anxious to get too close to our barrage. There is not the slightest doubt that they possess all the qualifications to make first rate fighting troops.'

Takes Over Dead Man's Hill.

"In the middle of July we began to take over parts of active fronts by battalions. Early in August the regiment as a whole took over the sector in front of Albert, and there rendered splendid service in holding the line and in patrol work. Patrols of Mr. Riley's regiment were the first soldiers to reach the city of Albert. The British division commander, under whom the regiment was operating, marveled at the trench discipline displayed and the exceptional courage and bravery shown by the patrols.

"In the middle of August the regiment left the Albert sector and became attached to an Australian division and held the line near the city of Harbonniers, a very active front.

"On Sept. 5, the regiment got the distinction of taking over the Mort Homme sector in front of Verdun, relieving the famous Four Hundred and Eighth French infantry regiment. The line was held until Sept. 26, when the great offensive started. It was from this sector, that the regiment got over the top, capturing Forges Woods and the town of Forges, and drove the boche across the River Meuse.

Regiment Distinguished Itself.

"After holding the line for a short time on the west bank of the Meuse, the regiment crossed the river and attacking the enemy on the east bank of the Meuse captured the town of Consenvoye. Bois Consenvoye and Bois de Chaume.

"One of the battalions of the regiment distinguished itself by heroic service in the fight at Bois de Foret, which took place on the tenth of October. While the fighting of this battalion was going on on the west bank of the River Meuse the other two battalions were fighting on the east side.

On Oct. 20 the regiment as a whole took over another active sector on the west side of the Meuse near Dannovoux, where it was relieved a week later by a French regiment.

Austrians Easy Pickings.

"On Oct. 26 we were put into the line known as the Troyon sector, where the regiment distinguished itself for magnificent patrol work. In this sector it was faced by Austrians, who were easy pickings for the fellows. On the day, when the Austrians withdrew from the conflict, an Austrian deserter brought the information, that orders were out to relieve all the Austrians in the front lines and replace them by Germans.

"The corps commander was very anxious for identification of the German regiments. The patrols, which we sent out on that night, were told, that prisoners must be brought in dead or alive, and were informed of the possibility of running into Germans in place of the Austrians. The patrol left at 6 o'clock in the evening and returned at 3 in the morning with sixteen German prisoners in their hands and a few dead ones left behind.

"Before 8 o'clock that morning the corps commander had the information desired. Our patrols had brought in the Germans with the insignia of their regiments on their uniforms.

In the Lines to the Finish.

"The regiment was in the lines and fighting until the very last moment. The last shot was fired about an hour before the cessation of hostilities. We stopped about twenty-five miles this side of Metz, where the regiment is located at the present time.

"Every task assigned to the regiment was performed on schedule time and with the results expected. The personal courage and bravery displayed by the officers and men was marvelous.

"When the regiment was attacking east of the River Meuse and north of Consenvoye the right flank was held up by terrific machine gun fire coming from the woods. A lieutenant and fifteen men were detailed to skirt the woods and take care of the machine gun nests. The lieutenant appreciated his mission. The attack had to go on. There were no survivors of his detail left to tell the story, but he unquestionably, by maneuvering to the right and to the rear, drew the fire toward himself and away from the right flank of the attacking battalion. The attack progressed, but on the edge of the woods later in the day were found the bodies of the lieutenant and every one of his men, who had fought desperately with the machine gunners, who, while engaged by the lieutenant and his detachment, allowed the attacking wave to go by.

Attitude of Men Magnificent.

"Many instances of bravery and courage displayed by the men of the regiment can be recited. Although they are individual acts, they represent the spirit of the regiment. The attitude of the officers and men was most magnificent. Never tired, never worn out, never discouraged, never a murmur, always ready, to do what was expected of them.

"Having told you briefly my opinion of Mr. Riley's regiment, I wan to tell you that I am proud, indeed, for having been the officer in command of the regiment. I have not forgotten my twenty years of service in the old regiment, but I now have a child of my own, of which I am so proud that, without trying to make any comparison, I have reached the conclusion that I have had the honor of commanding one of the best fighting regiments in France. I want my friends to be proud with me of the manner in which the officers and men of my regiment have made their contributions to the cause. There is always the sad feature of casualties. We have had about 300 men killed and 1,500 wounded and gassed. Fortunately, most of the wounded are returning in good condition. The dead have not died in vain.

"I hope, colonel, that you will forgive me for not having written to you heretofore. I know that Mr. Riley has kept you advised every time he has heard from me. Let me wish you and yours a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Sincerely yours,

"ABEL DAVIS."

RURAL TEACHER SHORTAGE SENDS WAGES SKYWARD

What has become of the old fashioned country "schoolmarm"?

County Superintendent of Schools Edward J. Tobin wants to know.

According to Mr. Tobin there are few applicants for positions teaching school in the country and the young women resign after the first payday. The salaries of country teachers have increased from $60 a month to $80 and $85 and in two cases to $100 a month.

"Despite the increases in salaries we cannot find teachers who will go into the country," said Mr. Tobin. "They take the job and hold it for a month—until the first pay day. Then they hurry into town with a resignation. In two districts we are paying $100 a month—the highest wage ever paid to a country teacher in the United States.

"I have an opening for a teacher in a school about twenty-five miles south and west of Chicago. A year ago this position paid $60 a month. Now we are willing to pay an efficient teacher $70 or even $75, but it seems impossible to secure one."

Mr. Tobin said the modern girl disliked country life.

"They have to light the fire in the morning and keep it going all day. Teacher is janitor and has to wash the curtains if there are any. It's a clean, healthful country life—but the girls of today would rather take dictation from some man in a comfortable office."

HOGS CLUTTER YARDS, PACKERS FACE PROBLEM

Delay in Shipments to Europe Threatens Drop in Prices.

With pork products bringing high prices Chicago packers are so nearly overwhelmed with the amount of hog meat on hand they have been forced to use every available inch of storage space. They have had such a heavy run of hogs during the last two months that all previous records for receipts have been broken. The government had to come to their rescue, and the railroad administration ordered its employés not to deliver more hogs than the packers can handle.

The price of $17.50 for each hundred pounds is resulting in bringing vast quantities of hogs to market.

Packers have several hundred million pounds of product on hand, of which 50 per cent has been sold, and within a week 225,000,000 pounds of lard and meats have been sold for export and a large fleet is at the seaboard to be loaded.

Big Sums Are Paid.

Chicago packers paid the farmers fully $45,000,000 for hogs during January alone.

G. F. Swift, vice president of Swift & Co., gave the following summary of conditions:

"The situation in which the packer finds himself with reference to the supply of live hogs, their price, and the available room in the curing cellars to store the product tends to emphasize the opposite nature of the interests of the live stock producer and the consumer of meat. What pleases one displeases the other.

"On the one hand, the producer wants a high price for hogs, which has been granted, so far as possible, on the basis of $17.50 per hundredweight. On the other end of the teeter-totter is the consumer wanting cheaper pork chops, hams, and bacon.

"The packer, being in the middle, occupies an unenviable position, with the impossible task of ever meeting the demands from both sides.

Hogs Heavier, Too.

"Last month 1,123,268 hogs were received, compared with 729,003 during January, 1917, an increase of 394,265. The average weight last month was 228 pounds and during January, 1917, it was 216 pounds, a gain of twelve pounds for each animal.

"Receipts for December and January just past are the largest in the history of the yards."

Stocks of cut meat in storage in Chicago and at other points of the middle west amounted to 409,956,340 pounds on Jan. 31, compared with 346,644,460 the year before.

The minimum price is set month by month and the farmers do not know how long it will be kept up, hence their anxiety to make shipments. As the hogs are pretty well marketed, it is thought the peak of the situation has been passed.

SHRAPNEL

Two full divisions of homeward bound fighting men, a total of 51,256 men, have been served with food, cigarets, and chocolate in Chicago by women of the Red Cross canteen service in the last thirty days.

In addition to the welcome at the train given every fighter reaching the city, 7,140 soldiers and sailors have been served hot meals in the Grant park canteen, according to records compiled yesterday by Mrs. George McKinlock, chief of the service.

The United States coast guard service is open for a limited number of surfmen, seamen, cooks, and acting ship's writers. Twenty-five surfmen are needed for immediate service in Chicago. Candidates may apply at the medical examiner's office, room 303 Crilly building.

CHILD

Four million women and children are dying of famine in Armenia and Syria today.

They are hungry as you never were or will be.

Seventeen cents a day will keep a famine-stricken boy from the door of death.

The price of your single meal will keep a little girl alive more than twenty-four hours.

Four hundred thousand boys and girls in western Asia are left without a relative on earth through Turkish cruelty.

Save them as you would be saved.

Will you not do for them what you would have done for the child dear to you if you were taken away?

Seventeen cents a day, five dollars a month, sixty dollars a year, will keep a soul alive.

Every death tells the triumph of Turkish fiendishness. The price of one meal from you means final victory.

Chicago is asked for $1,265,000—less than our daily food bill.

A little deprivation here—one meal only—saves the greatest deprivation there.

Serving Producer and Consumer

The Livestock Producer Wants
—The highest prices his cattle will bring.
—An assured market 12 months in the year.
—Selling outlets that cover the entire world.

The Meat Consumer Wants
—Meat at the lowest prices it can be bought.
—A stabilized supply, winter and summer alike.
—Distribution that brings the meat fresh, sweet and in prime condition.

These things Armour and Company are able to provide, because the Armour organization has kept pace with international needs.

When Armour began turning waste parts into saleable by-products, the farmer profited because it became possible to pay him on a basis for the whole animal, instead of for just the meat, hide and tallow. And as by-products provide for a large part of the production cost, the consumer pays less for his meat.

When Armour and Company started building refrigerator cars on a large scale, fresh beef, pork and mutton became at once available at all seasons and in all consuming centers. And with Armour branch houses to hold enough to make them independent of railroad uncertainties, and to distribute according to retailers' requirements, stock-growers have the encouragement of sure markets and consumers are assured a steady always-dependable supply.

There is nothing to prevent any packing concerns from building and operating their own refrigerator cars. Nor are they barred from conducting their own branch distributing houses.

The big point is that Armour and Company, realizing that a national business could not be conducted except on a national scale, have built these cars and provided necessary marketing facilities. The system is the outgrowth of necessity, and to render the service which is expected of it, must operate as a whole. It cannot be efficient piece-meal, or under scattered management. The very nature of the business is against that.

Time, and the utmost in co-ordination and efficiency, are first essentials in the successful handling of food-products. There can be only one way to realize the greatest efficiency under such circumstances, and that is to do it as Armour and Company are doing it—with preparation and shipping facilities under one comprehensive management.

AYS SPEEDWAY BRIBERY CHARGE WAS A 'FRAMEUP'

W. G. Clark Alleges Conspiracy Against His Accusers.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Wallace G. Clark directly contradicted Edward Hines, Jacob Newman, and Conrad Poppenhusen in his testimony today before the senate committee investigating the Hines speedway hospital.

He declared that the effort to connect J. Milton Trainer and himself with the alleged demand for a bribe of $100,000 for helping to put that project through the war department was a "frame-up."

"I never had five words of conversation with Newman, Poppenhusen, or Foster, and I never met Hines or Erskine in my life. The first I knew of the charge was when I arrived here three weeks ago. That was the first knowledge I had of this 'frame-up.'"

Calls It a "Frame-Up."

On cross-examination by William S. Bennet, counsel for Hines, he was asked:

"Then you say that when Mr. Newman and Mr. Poppenhusen testified that you were in his office between June 27 and July 2, it is a mistake?"

"It is not a mistake, it is absolutely false. I want to use the best word I can to describe it," replied Clark. "They stated things they knew to be untrue, and when I state this to be a 'frame-up' I'd swear it to my God and maker."

Bennet asked Clark why E. D. Adcock, attorney for Trainer had called up Alfred Austrian in Chicago from the Shoreham hotel a week ago last Sunday. Clark said that Adcock probably was trying to get Austrian to come here.

"Do you know what he said about Maj. Stotesbury in that conversation?" asked Bennet.

Clark replied that he knew nothing about it and Bennet dropped the subject.

Chicago Women Appear.

Mrs. Mary D. Fisher, Mrs. George A. Savey, and Mrs. William Severin, representing a woman's war hospital committee of Chicago, came before the committee at their own request to protest against housing wounded soldiers in the buildings at Fort Sheridan.

They told the committee they had been "hounded" by a man giving his name as Raymond, 216 East Ohio street, who said he represented the war department. This alleged agent of the war department, according to the witnesses, was trying to connect their activities with Edward Hines.

The three women testified they did not know Mr. Hines, nor had their campaign against the Fort Sheridan hospital been influenced or financed by the owners of the speedway. They said they were not advocating the Hines hospital.

Tells Committee's Purpose.

In making suggestions to counsel on both sides of the speedway case today, Senator Hardwick, chairman of the committee, said that "the sole question for this committee to decide is whether there is a moral responsibility on the part of the government to recompense the owners of the speedway for the money they have already expended."

Object to Using Part of Wilson Ave. as Playground

Property owners near Wilson avenue and the lake are in favor of a playground there, but they don't want part of Wilson avenue used for it. Several protests were made to the department of public works yesterday against the city fencing off part of the south side of Wilson avenue from Clarendon avenue to the lake. The city has acquired adjacent property for playground uses.

HIGH PRICES AND MORE WAGES ADD TO STATE COSTS

Budget for Two Years to Show an Advance of $6,000,000.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Wartime prices and conditions with respect to labor and the demobilization of the army have boosted the running expenses of Illinois for the next two years over $6,000,000. This is the estimate made by the department of finance as the increase over the biennial appropriations for 1917-1918.

The total asked for in the first budget that has been prepared under the terms of the new administrative code, payable out of the general property tax fund, is $40,268,361. The increases are generalized in these three heads:

Salaries and wages—$2,284,075.

Operating supplies for state institutions—$1,155,144.

New buildings—$2,145,767.

When it is borne in mind that these figures submitted in the budget have passed through several degrees of pruning and reduction since the individual wants of the state institutions were made known, the recommendation of the budget is expected to carry particular weight with the appropriations committees and with the legislature as a whole.

Gov. Lowden and Director Wright have been invited to appear before the general assembly to discuss the general propositions of policy that are set forth in the budget. This is to occur when senate and house will meet in joint session on Feb. 18.

Chief Garrity Sends 86 Police to New Stations

In a general police order issued last night by Chief of Police Garrity four sergeants, twenty-four detective sergeants, and fifty-eight patrolmen were sent to the south and west side stations. Chief Garrity said the men were shifted on recommendations made by captains of police or because men wanted to be near their homes. Detective Sergeant William Dillon, who was transferred last week to the Desplaines street station, was returned to the detective bureau.

Attention of Corporations Seeking Additional Capital, or Desiring to Float Their Securities

I am thoroughly experienced in selling stocks, bonds and other high-grade securities. I have an excellent suite of offices in one of the most prominent buildings in the loop, with a corps of thirty thoroughly trained and efficient salesmen who know how to approach and interest investors. I am just now closing up the odds and ends of a stock issue and am in a position to assist any sound corporation in the acquisition of new capital or the flotation of its securities. To interest me such a concern must be on a thoroughly stable foundation, showing satisfactory profit, and, in fact, conform in all respects to such demands as will be made by competent investors. I prefer to do business with corporations located within Chicago or within two or three hundred miles of Chicago, although I might consider an arrangement elsewhere. Here is an unusual opportunity for the right concern to solve the problem of additional capital promptly, efficiently and in accord with the dignity of its general standing. If you think it is possible that my organization could be of service to you, please write me as fully as possible, with the distinct understanding that the matter will be treated in the most inviolable confidence, and if you so request I will immediately acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and I agree to return all your correspondence to you upon demand. I assume, of course, that any concern doing business with me will insist upon every opportunity for the most searching information of my standing, ability and general qualifications to perform everything I undertake, and I in turn will expect you to freely grant me similar opportunity with regard to your business.

Who Is Stratton?

STRATTON stands for top notch motor truck values and service, and believes that a promise should be weighed before it is made.

If there is a man in the world whose heart and soul are in his business—Stratton is that man.

He brought G-B trucks to Chicago to stay. He knows motor truck construction as affecting truck needs from a "good business" investment standpoint.

Stratton knows that this business would meet with failure if we sold any but the best motor truck values to you hard-headed business men—you who demand the utmost value—in truck service—for every dollar you spend.

He is a man who is building a motor truck selling and service institution, second to none in Chicago—who knows that Stratton-Gramm-Bernstein must stand or fall upon motor truck values and service—that motor trucks are more easily sold when every sale opens the way for another sale.

Stratton's experience, judgment, ability, and financial responsibility stand squarely behind every G-B truck we sell.

If there are better truck values and service than are to be found right here at 2436-38 Michigan Avenue, we don't know it.

Sales Manager

SELLING G-B motor trucks is not a hard job for us—they are real trucks backed by dependable service.

We know trucks from actual experience. We know how trucks must perform to please truck owners.

Stratton does everything possible to help us sell trucks. He gives us the best truck values to sell and backs every truck sale with a real service organization.

And we frankly state that G-B truck quality and Stratton Service make a combination which we can whole-heartedly offer the keenest buyer.

When we meet truck buyers face to face—those who have real hauling problems to solve—who want the best truck value that money can buy—when we show them why G-B trucks are superior trucks per rated H. P., and how Stratton Service follows every G-B truck sale, they usually accept our word. Later, G-B trucks and Stratton Service prove our claims.

Let any one of us talk trucks to you. We'll show haulage and service records that will sell you as they sold us.

Here are our signatures simply to record our convictions.

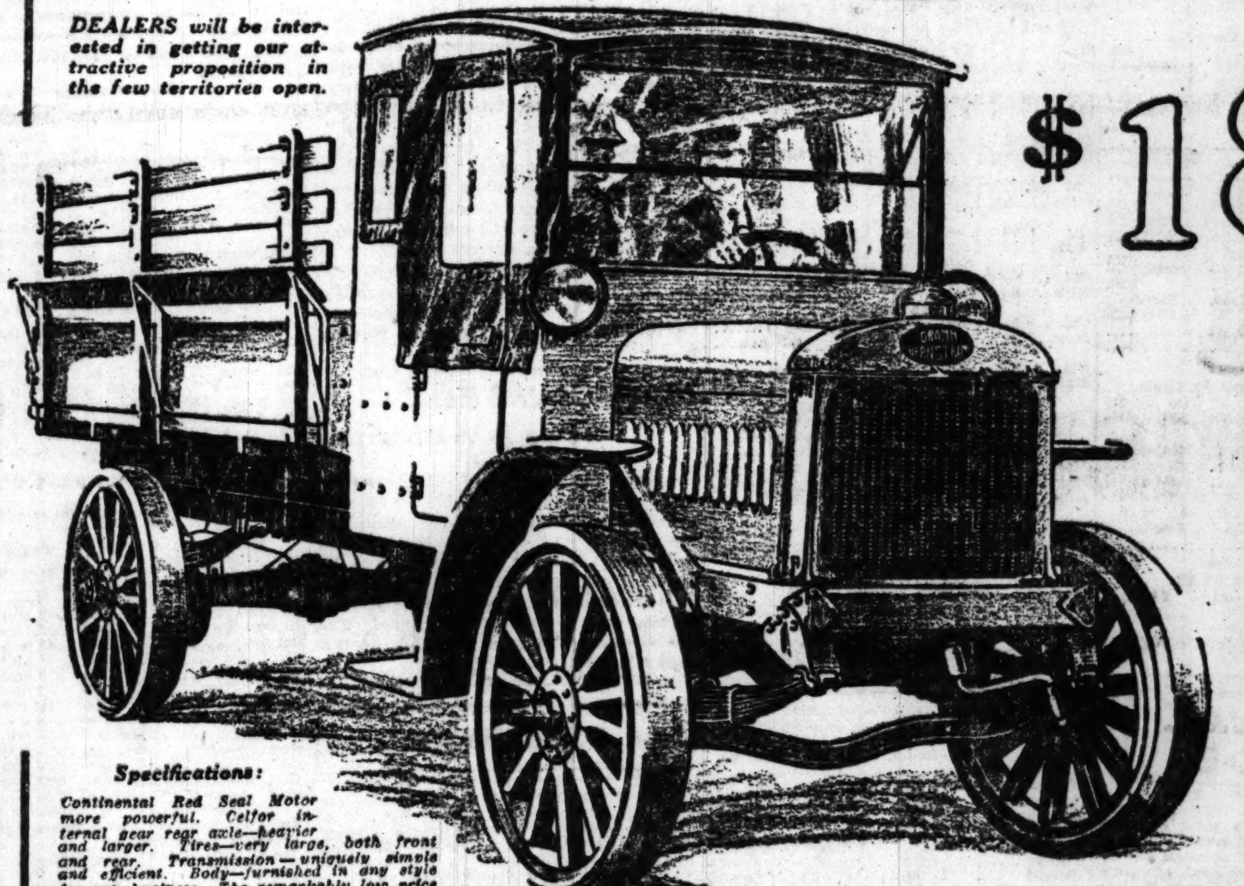
The new 1½ ton all-purpose Truck

DEALERS will be interested in getting our attractive proposition in the few territories open.



$1895.

THE picture to the left shows our new 1½ ton all-purpose truck, which added to our 2½, 3½, 5, and 6 ton sizes, completes the strongest line we know. Our heavy duty trucks are powergiants — over smooth or rough roads with a real capacity load, and "on time." Any size G-B truck you buy will give you efficient, every-hour-of-the-day-or-night service, at lowest possible cost per ton mile.

Specifications:

Continental Red Seal Motor more powerful. Celfor internal gear rear axle—heavier and larger. Tires—very large, both front and rear. Transmission—uniquely simple and efficient. Body—furnished in any style for any business. The remarkably low price of $1895 does not include cab top or windshield, which will be furnished for $55.00 extra.

Now—Let Me Talk About STRATTON SERVICE

I CAN'T write much or talk in an ad, but I do know truck service and the only kind of service that will satisfy Gramm-Bernstein owners and Mr. Stratton.

In the first place—you can't give service unless you have the right floor space and layout, the right mechanics, and machinery and parts right at hand when you need them.

We have this. Come and see for yourself and talk to my men. They'll stack up against the best mechanics in this or any other section of the country.

We don't have to lose time waiting for parts when we need them because we have the biggest stock of parts that I know about, for a distributor, and we carry every part for every G-B model.

This doesn't mean that G-B trucks are always in the shop for repairs, but it does mean that we see every G-B truck as often as possible because a short inspection and a few minor adjustments every so often is a heap sight better than not giving the truck any attention until it just quits from neglect.

Time means nothing to us, as all of us at the Service Station know that a truck out of commission is a mighty expensive proposition for a truck owner, so we work any old time and any old day. In other words, we use the clock to tell us when to eat, but not when to quit work.

Then, when we say a job will be ready at 4 o'clock on a certain day, this means 4 o'clock, even if we have to work overtime or with a sandwich in our hand, to have the job ready.

We have motorcycle mounted mechanics to shoot on a call in a jiffy and a fully equipped service truck that up to date has not been used very much.

Just one more thing. Every part of every G-B truck is fully interchangeable per truck size. This certainly cuts labor charges and keeps our men in good humor because they haven't got to drill here and bore there and put this or that part on the emery wheel before they can put it where it belongs.

I am always glad to have any truck driver or owner or any man that is thinking about buying a truck come in and look our service outfit over, because my end of the proposition—the service end—is right and will prove up.

EARLY BULGE IN GRAIN SMASHED BY BEARS' DRIVE

Break in Cash Market Is Cause of General Decline.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Bulges in grain failed to hold early and liquidation and bear pressure with a more vigorous class of selling than of buying carried prices for corn and oats futures down sharply.

The break in the cash market, however, led to the decline at the last. Closing sales, although slightly above the inside prices, showed losses of ½c on the distant futures of corn, while February was off 1⅝c and March 1¼c. Oats lost ½@⅞c in Chicago. Corn in St. Louis was ⅛c to 1⅜c lower and Kansas City ⅝c to 1⅜c lower, except July, which gained ⅛c. Oats in the southwestern markets were ⅛c to ⅝c lower. Oats in Minneapolis lost ⅝c and in Winnipeg ⅛c to ¼c, although receipts in the latter market were only 51 cars.

Provisions had a stronger undertone and closed about the outside, with pork up 95c, lard 37½c to 50c, and short ribs 50c for the day.

Closing trades, compared with a week ago, reported losses of 4⅛c to 5⅛c on corn and ½c to 1¼c on oats, distant futures leading in both grains. Pork closed with a gain of 25c, lard 50c, and short ribs 55c.

Corn in Easy Close.

Efforts on the part of some of the local professionals who have heretofore been bearish to bull corn met with poor success. At the top prices were up ¾@1¼c over the previous day's finish, which was followed by a break of 1⅝@5¼c, the latter on February, and the close was within ½@⅝c of the bottom. February finished at $1.20½, March at $1.18½, May at $1.12, and July at $1.08¼.

Houses which usually act for the leading New York bears were conspicuous sellers. Thomson & McKinnon and Lamson were active on the bear side, and while there was a fair run of commission house buying orders early through Jackson Bros. and others, toward the last some of the early buyers started to sell, and prices dropped rapidly. The depressing influence was a break of 6@9c in cash corn values in the sample market, where the demand was slow.

Country offerings were reported as slightly larger from scattered points, and one house bought No. 4 yellow at 4c under February to arrive. Domestic shipping sales were limited, and there was some grain carried over unsold here and at Peoria and Kansas City. Receipts, 145 cars. For the week receipts were 687,000 bu, and shipments 662,000 bu. Last year receipts were 1,156,000 bu and shipments 503,000 bu. Weekly forecast was for rather unsettled weather, with nearly normal temperatures.

Little Interest in Oats.

Outside interest in oats was small, and there was an absence of the short covering so noticeable Friday. Sentiment was bearish and the local element pressed the selling side from the start, with the result that prices dropped ⅝@1¼c, only to rally ⅛@½c from the bottom on week end evening up on the part of shorts. February was 55½c at the last, March 55¾, May 55⅝, and July 53¾c.

Prospects are for a fair decrease in the visible supply statement Monday at western points. Local arrivals for the week of 863,000 bu were 450,000 bu less than the shipments. Last year receipts were 1,055,000 bu and shipments 754,000 bu. For the day arrivals were 66 cars, with sample values ¼@2c lower, with shipping sales of 20,000 bu. No. 3 whites sold at [illegible] over the standards at 1c over February.

Exporters After Rye.

Requests for offers of rye for export were made yesterday, but no sales reported. There has been some business the last week from outside markets. Sample values were unchanged to 2c lower, with No. 2 at $1.28@1.30. Receipts 42 cars. Milwaukee was 2c lower, Omaha 4@5c lower, and Minneapolis 1c lower.

Barley sold fairly, with elevator interests the best buyers, on expectations of a liberal export business in the near future. Sample values were unchanged to 1c lower, with sales at 80@95c. Receipts 29 cars. Milwaukee 2@5c lower and Minneapolis 1c lower.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, [illegible]@10.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo 7½c higher; March, [illegible]4.57½ per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed weak. Country lots, $25.00@[illegible] per 100 lbs. Toledo 5c lower; February, $22.65; March, $22.40 per bu of 60 lbs.

Provisions Close Around Top.

Decidedly better feeling existed in the provision market with a larger trade, particularly in lard and ribs. Eastern and local shorts who sold early in the week were active in covering, while the buyers of a few days ago who at the time were supposed to be operating for packers took profits. Cash lard is in active demand [illegible] to buy and 75c was bid at one time, with the close 70c bid over May. The market generally was believed to be oversold, and with a large outward movement of product prices responded readily and closed around the top of the day. An allotment of 50,000,000 lbs is expected to be placed at once for export and there are eleven steamers reported at the seaboard waiting for loading. Shipments of lard and meats the week, while lighter than the previous week, were over 33,000,000 lbs, compared with 22,000,000 lbs last year. Hog prices have held the recent advance. WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Slowness in the cash corn trade here and in all markets encouraged a great deal of short selling, as well as liquidation by longs late yesterday. Owing to the fact it was Saturday and that receivers were not disposed to carry over their consignments until Monday, fearing larger receipts and lower price, there was an increased desire to sell samples in the last 15 minutes. With the Corn Products Co. out of the market during that period prices broke 8c from the early high point with No. 4 grade of corn down to $1.17. Omaha reported purchases of No. 3 yellow, shipment in 5 days, at 10c under Friday's prices. The fact that all the outside corn markets were weak and the demand in the southwest slow created a more bearish feeling among the local traders, who were mainly disposed to the selling side, while the buying support became poor.

Pressure was put on February corn at the last, reflecting the break in the cash market, and it dropped from 11¼c over May early to 8½c at the close. The trade is looking for larger receipts Monday, although the run is not expected to be heavy, but it has been extremely light and the arrivals of 687,000 bu here for the week were the smallest at this time in over four years. Shipments were only 25,000 bu less than the receipts.

Traders had it that Washington news was very bearish on grains, but there was nothing of a reliable character. The way in which it was handled, however, by a few people created a degree of mystery which scared a few traders into selling. It was said to be a reiteration of reports regarding the recent wheat meeting. Eastern commercial and financial news is pessimistic and the trade there is not disposed to buy grains or anything else unless it is sold first.

Bartlett-Frazier say it will require an immediate betterment in the cash demand over the entire corn belt to prevent further price losses. The situation in oats generally suggests that if corn works lower oats will follow. It is well to remember, howevr, that the outstanding short interest in May is of large proportion.

The big selling of May oats by a commission house with country connections was said to be partly for industrial interests. It was claimed that the demand for the manufactured product has fallen off. The break in corn was also a factor.

"With cattle, hogs, and hog products selling at much higher prices and continuation of export demand of fats of all kinds," says Hulburd, Warren & Chandler, "caution should be exercised after a decline of 30c in corn within a few weeks, as it has left the market in a heavily oversold condition, quite the reverse of that existing when corn was 30c higher. Government report on farm reserves March 1 is awaited with interest. Many well informed people are of the opinion that the present minimum price of hogs will be maintained through the month of March. With all regard for the foregoing, they say that the prospects for increased receipts of corn, as well as the limited demand at terminals, more than offsets the bullish factors in the situation at the moment."

At Minneapolis No. 3 white oats sold at May price to ½c over. Corn was reported unsalable. There was an export inquiry for barley, but for the domestic demand prices were unchanged.

A Board of Trade membership sold yesterday at $7,375 net to the buyer. This is the second sale at that price in the last two days. It was within $600 of the record level. Applications for membership yesterday were J. H. Curtain, F. M. Herr, H. Ladish, N. J. Morris. For transfer, F. L. Hough, E. A. Bowles, and estates of Joy C. Bournique and Henry W. Paret.

Primary receipts of wheat for the season to date aggregate 381,464,000 bu, corn 66,580,000 bu, and oats 194,840,000 bu. Last year wheat receipts were 146,709,000 bu, corn 65,326,000 bu, and oats 192,877,000 bu.

A Peoria cash grain firm sent a man to Missouri points last week to try and sell some corn to feeders. He returned yesterday without booking a car, and said the demand would be slow until there was a return of real cold weather.

In discussing the coarse grain situation a Minnesota shipper in a letter said that farmers in his section were going to hold on to their corn, oats, and barley, and would seed as much spring wheat as possible in preference to other grains.

Late reports from Illinois points indicated that the country had started to sell corn and that offerings this week would be much larger.

J. F. Jackson, who has heretofore been very bearish on corn, said that while he had not changed his position as to the ultimate outcome of prices, he regarded the technical position of the market as strong, and that May corn was being sold away below the cash article, and also the feeding value level, with on stock of No. 3, and the farmer holding on to his grain. Pre-war prices cannot be obtained in a day.

An Omaha elevator man in a message to E. W. Wagner said he had 152,000 bu wheat in an elevator that had been ordered loaded out for export. Nothing ordered shipped for milling purposes.

Argentine corn was not quoted at the seaboard yesterday. Owing to the strike, lockout, and ocean freight situation it is not expected that business can be done for some time at least. Buenos Aires corn closed yesterday 1¼@1¾c lower, at 57½c March, and 62½c May. Oats unchanged at 38½c for May.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

All sales of winter and spring wheat at Chicago yesterday were at the basic figures. At St. Louis red winter sold readily at $2.42@2.42½ for No. 1 and $2.40@2.40½ for No. 2. Local receipts, 39 cars.

Demand for cash corn was slow throughout the day. First sales were unchanged from Friday's low point, but the market developed marked weakness later, and prices declined and closed at the bottom, with final trades showing losses of 6@9c as compared with Friday's sales. The best bid on No. 3 white at the last was $1.20. Chicago, Peoria, and Kansas City reported a number of cars carried over unsold. White at St. Louis was 1@2c higher and yellow unchanged to 2c lower, Kansas City unchanged to 1c lower, Omaha 1@3c lower, Peoria 1@2c lower, and Milwaukee 4c higher.

Cash oats were ½@2c lower at Chicago in sympathy with futures. St. Louis was off ½@1c, Omaha 1@1½c, Peoria ½@¾c, Milwaukee 2@3c, while Kansas City was unchanged to 1c lower. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

RESERVE BOARD READY FOR GOLD EXCHANGE FUND

Would Avoid the Actual Shipment of Metal by Nations.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—Willingness to undertake development of an international gold exchange fund to facilitate financial transactions between nations without actual shipment of gold was expressed today by the federal reserve board in its report for 1918. This arrangement would be similar to that now maintained by the board to settle balances between banks within the United States.

The fund might be developed among the entente nations and a few leading neutrals, "but it is conceivable that all civilized countries may eventually be participants," said the board. The gold would be deposited in trust in some government bank or banks to guarantee exchange obligations, and it was proposed that the fund should be limited to current commercial and exchange transactions.

On Trade Balances.

Referring to the settlement of trade balances in this country through the federal reserve clearing channels, the report said:

"The successful operation of the gold settlement fund has suggested the possibility of avoiding shipments of gold from one country to another in settlement of balances arising out of ordinary commercial transactions, and the board is ready, if authorized to do so, to undertake negotiations looking to the establishment of an international gold exchange fund or to assist in any way in its power in negotiations which may be begun by a government department looking to that end. The board believes that definite plans cannot perhaps be worked out until stable peace has been assured.

"The saving of loss and expense incident to abrasion and transportation charges and interest on gold transferred will be enormous and the advantage to the commerce of the world will be incalculable."

Reveals War Secrets.

The report disclosed for the first time extensive operations of the federal reserve board's system of regulating foreign exchange transactions of the last year to prevent dealings on enemy account. Agents were maintained at all cable offices, and these worked in close coöperation with other government agencies to detect enemy transactions. Total purchases and sales of demand and cable exchanges between dealers in the United States from Feb. 20, 1918, when the regulation became effective, to Dec. 31 were $5,158,000,000, of which $3,737,000,000, or 72 per cent, were for exchange on Great Britain.

Owing to war exigencies, said the report, "the federal reserve board felt it to be its duty to assist in making effective the policies determined upon by the secretary of the treasury, however inconsistent some of the steps necessary to be taken might be with principles which usually govern in normal times." It added: "Within a few months the country's war financing will have been completed, and the board can then deal with the problems incident to bringing our credit structure and our banking operations back to a normal basis."

The board predicted that banking credits now concentrated in this country soon would be extended through the world with the development of foreign trade.

Illinois Central Bond Issue Is Authorized

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 8.—Authority to issue bonds in the sum of $26,000,000 was granted the Illinois Central Railroad company by the Illinois public utilities commission today. The money is to be used, it was announced, to reimburse expenditures of the road for equipment throughout the lines of the system. The authorization fee paid the state of Illinois was $26,500.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—An early decline carried the cotton market into new low ground for the movement during today's trading, but was followed by rallies with the close steady net 5 points lower to 20 points higher. May contracts broke from 20.80c to 20.03c, and closed at 20.47c, compared with 20.50c at the close last night.

The market opened firm at an advance of 65 points on November and of 19 to 46 points on the more active months. There was considerable buying by houses with Liverpool and Wall street connections, believed to be mostly in the way of covering shorts, but the demand was quickly supplied by southern and local selling. The latter was encouraged by the failure of week-end reviews to show any improvement in industrial or trade conditions, while the appearance of southern selling orders also made a bearish impression on sentiment.

For a time the market was weak and unsettled, and prices broke rapidly with March selling off from 21.70c to 21.04c, and July from 20.25c to 19.50c, making net declines of 35 to 47 points on old crop months. October sold off to 18.50c, or 26 points net lower. The market steadied at this level on covering, and some scattered buying for reaction was reported on the rally later in the morning, with the close showing recoveries of about 35 to 45 points from the lowest.

CATTLE RECEIPTS FOR TWO WEEKS SHOW BIG SLUMP

Decrease in Supplies Boosts Prices to High Record.

Chicago's cattle receipts the last two weeks at 111,400 were the two smallest succeeding weeks' receipts since last August, standing 100,000 smaller than combined arrivals the two closing weeks of last November.

This big decrease in supplies was instrumental in forcing the general average price of good beef steers practically $1.00 above the previous week to the highest point on record, at $16.45.

Unless arrivals of cattle increase very materially the coming week, the trade will be greatly disappointed, and undoubtedly values will score a still greater gain, especially on the better offerings.

While steers advanced $1.00@1.50 over the close of the previous week, good cows and heifers showed relatively more advance, standing $1.50@1.75 above previous week. Canning cows sold slowly and little changed for the week. Calves and stockers and feeders advanced sharply.

Hog Supply Is Short.

Features in the hog trade last week were the sharply decreased receipts, the largest shipments since last April, and general narrowing of the spread in prices between underweights and best heavy butchers. Week's receipts were 172,000.

According to all reports, hog supplies tributary to markets east of Chicago will continue comparatively small for some time to come, which means that eastern orders will have to be filled in the west.

As a natural consequence from present date on for an indefinite period the tendency of hog values will undoubtedly be toward a higher range, as local packers have to have a goodly number for the general fresh meat trade.

Hogs sold unevenly higher Saturday, most sales being 5@10c above general selling of previous day. Trade was active and closing prices strong. Best clearance in many weeks was made. The top was $18.00, but general run of prices stood the highest since Jan. 9. Receipts were only 13,000, being below expectations.

The average price of hogs at Chicago Saturday was $17.71, against $17.65 Friday, $17.50 previous Saturday, $16.46 a year ago, $12.73 two years ago, and $8.25 three years ago.

Hogs Gain in Weight.

Estimated average weight of hogs at Chicago last week was 234 lbs, heaviest since October, against 231 lbs previous week, 229 lbs a year ago, and 203 lbs two and three years ago.

Closing day of the week eleven markets received 41,000 hogs, against 52,000 a week ago and 99,000 a year ago. For the week combined arrivals at the eleven points totaled 626,000, against 777,000 previous week, 828,000 a year ago, and 696,000 two years ago.

While sheep and lamb receipts were larger than the previous week, the demand was increased enough to cause a 60@75c advance. Aged and yearling lots were scarce and in many cases showed relatively most gain for the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 26,000 cattle, 47,000 hogs, and 24,000 sheep, against 15,297 cattle, 54,894 hogs, and 23,508 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 70,000 cattle, 210,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep.

Investors Treated Shabbily.

As the compiling of results of the first year's operation of the railroads by the government approaches completion the inequity which has been meted out to security owners assumes startling proportions. The first care of the railway administration was to raise the wages of employés for the sound reason that the increased cost of living necessitated it. A big advance in freight and passenger rates was ordered to meet this higher expense. Then more increases in wages were made till the additional revenue was exhausted and a deficit was incurred. Including an advance in trainmen's pay which is expected to take effect soon the total increase in wages is more than 50 per cent. It amounts to almost $1,000,000,000 a year.

The high cost of living affects stockholders just as it does employés, and there are at least five times as many of them. Millions of stockholders are small investors dependent on their modest incomes to meet living expenses. Did the railway administration say anything about an increase in stockholders' compensation? It did not. It promised them a return which was slightly below the average of the last decade and has been struggling ever since to pare a little from that. The total compensation to stockholders will figure out at not far from $9,250,000, which is less than the increase given to the employés.

Why are the needs of 10,000,000 stockholders ignored in order to favor less than 2,000,000 employés? Merely because the latter are organized and the former are not?

Middle West Utilities.

J. H. N.—The Middle West Utilities company issues annual reports only. In the year ended April 30 last it showed a small increase in net earnings. The preferred dividend was covered about one and one-half times and 3¼ per cent was earned on common stock. Since then dividends have stopped. In stopping the preferred dividend the company stated that it was still being earned. The money was needed for capital expenditures and the dividend would be paid in scrip, but as scrip dividends were liable to the income tax, it was deemed better for stockholders not to pay them now. As the cost of copper, coal, and various other supplies used by utility companies is now tending downward, it may be assumed that the severest part of the crisis is past and that net earnings will improve. Of course, the present position of the stock is speculative and the course of the market cannot be predicted.

Brief Answers.

L. V. S.—Chicago Great Western 4s are secured by first mortgage on a road that never has earned much more than its fixed charges and last year did not do that. As the mortgage is open and future financing can be done under it there is little prospect that the position of the bonds will improve in the near future. They cannot be classed as a really conservative investment.

A. G. D., La Crosse, Wis.—St. Paul stock at 36½ is a speculation, not an investment. We cannot predict its future.

Home Insurance Co. Shows Gain Despite 'Flu'

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The fifty-ninth annual report of the Home Life Insurance company shows over $4,000,000 paid to policy holders in 1918, of which over $700,000 is in dividends. The influenza-pneumonia epidemic caused an abnormal mortality, greater than any experienced in the company's history, but notwithstanding this the assets show an increase of more than 4 per cent, and are now over $36,000,000.

The total insurance in force was increased during the year 8.6 per cent, and is now nearly $159,000,000.

American Banks to Loan $50,000,000 to Belgium

New York, Feb. 8.—Arrangements have been concluded for a loan of $50,000,000 to Belgium by an American syndicate including J. P. Morgan & Co., it was learned here today. No announcement was made as to the rate of interest, but it was reported to be 7 per cent. Leading banks in Belgium will draw bills which will be accepted by the financial interests participating in the loan and the proceeds will be used to purchase American cotton, leather, and other raw materials needed for reconstructing Belgium.

A $2,500 Investment in Organized Horticulture

We offer to you an opportunity based on volume production, an investment relying for its value and returns on the application of the principle of big volume organization to an agricultural product.

Big volume production is an American idea that is today accepted as a practical idea. By purchasing in large volume a saving is effected. By manufacturing in large volume overhead charges are reduced. By selling in large volume prices may be reduced. An automobile manufacturer who turns out 1,200 cars a year must get a higher price for his car than the manufacturer who turns out 12,000. Why? Because the big volume manufacturer can effect economies that will allow him to manufacture and therefore to market his product at less money than the small volume manufacturer.

We have selected an agricultural product (grapefruit) to which we are applying the same principles of big volume organization that we have already applied to the building of a large and prosperous manufacturing enterprise. James L. Waterbury has been a successful manufacturer. He has built a big business on the big-volume principle, and it is today a wonderful success. Now he is applying these same principles to agriculture, with the certainty of even a greater degree of success, for the units are greater in number and the effected economies greater in volume.

Grapefruit is peculiarly susceptible to the application of the big volume principle. It requires no great initial outlay of money. Its growth is restricted to certain localities (there are but few places in the United States where grapefruit can be grown), thus eliminating the element of competitive markets. The public demand is growing annually and the supply will never equal it.

Our organization is planting, cultivating and expanding on a big volume plan by which overhead costs are reduced to a minimum. On the initial cost we save you exactly 100% on every acre you buy from us, yet we make money. We handle your product on a big volume plan by which you get super-prices. We create a demand for a super-product, which we produce for you on a big-volume plan. We can, by our systems, make you a greater net profit from operation than you could possibly make operating individually, and we can create an investment for you that ranks as one of the highest in yield and safety.

We invite your investigation of this great, big-volume opportunity.

Instead of handling 10 acres we handle 10,000. Our employment of labor is, therefore, pro-rated in such a way that the labor charge PER ACRE is 1,000% less than it would be on a single tract of 10 acres. Our planting charge is the same. We harvest a crop on a basis of expense that is so astoundingly small as to shock even those familiar with big-volume costs. The selling expense is almost nothing. In other words, we have scientifically erected an agricultural "plant" in which COSTS are the paramount item and we give you the benefit of low COST PER UNIT on your particular investment, while at the same time we make your product a superior one, which we market at the highest price. This means that your profits are high—"plus-profits" in the sense that they are normal profits plus profits that come from production and selling economies.

Our endowment plan will provide you and your children with a yearly annuity greater and more certain than any that can be purchased with a like amount of money.

CHICAGO RESERVE BANK'S REPORT IS SIGNIFICANT

Falling Off in the Demand for Individual Loans Is Seen.

The weekly statement of the federal reserve bank of Chicago revealed a temporary halt in the liquidation which the figures have previously represented. Instead of a further decrease in bills discounted there was a small gain. Bills bought increased about $1,000,000.

Federal reserve notes were up $2,600,000 from the previous week. The total at $406,665,360 compares with $433,774,926 on Dec. 27, a decrease of about $26,000,000 in that period. Federal reserve bank notes remain steady.

It appears a reasonable inference that the statement reflects more in the small changes than superficially appears. The banks have been buying treasury certificates, and the fact that they could absorb these without materially increasing their obligation at the reserve bank indicates the falling off in the demand by individual borrowers of the member institutions.

The New York bank statement made an unfavorable exhibit, with a decrease of over $77,800,000 in deposits and a loss in cash of $40,170,000. The government withdrew $118,000,000 from its account, leaving that item at $269,517,000.

Excess Reserve Falls.

The loss in cash resulted in the decrease of $29,815,670 in the excess reserve, so that item now stands at $37,401,720.

There was a considerable contraction in credit, the decrease being $53,087,000. The figures as a whole left room for a suggestion, sentimentally at least, for a little closer money. The figures follow:

There was an unusually heavy volume of sales in the 4¼ per cent fourth Liberty loan bonds and a new low record was established at 93.98. The previous low quotation was made last December, when sales were credited to a desire to establish losses for federal income tax purposes. It is possible the present selling results from anticipation of the manner in which the next issue will be received.

SHIPPING ISSUES' FALL UNSETTLES GENERAL MARKET

Cut in Rates Leads to the Withdrawal of Coast Vessels.

The New York Times.

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The sharp marking down of Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies stock in today's market aided in unsettling the entire list, with professional traders active among the industrial shares. Business was light and the bulk of transactions seemed to have their origin in the street.

International Mercantile Marine preferred lost ground at the same time that the other shipping issue was being offered down, and fresh attention was drawn to the ocean transportation situation by the withdrawal of ships from certain coastwise routes by a subsidiary of the Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies company.

Coast Rates Not Affected.

Rates on freight sent from one coast point to another have not been materially affected by the cuts made so far by the trans-oceanic concerns, but the cessation of sailings entirely because of high costs has a more drastic result than reduction in carrying charges. The decline of 8 points which occurred in United Fruit stock equaled the net recession of the Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies shares.

Sentiment in the street as the week drew to a close was favorable to operations of bear traders. In view of strike news from Seattle and evidences of important changes to come in prices for numerous lines of goods, with their natural effect on wages, the stock market following evidently thought it would be well to be in a protected position over the week end and disposed of part of its speculative holdings.

Labor Question Important.

The labor outlook promises to come more and more strongly to the fore abroad as well as at home until industry has set its wheels to revolving in satisfactory fashion again.

There are many questions to be answered in respect to the distribution of goods before the time may be said to be at hand for manufacturing on a great scale, and meantime government agencies are likely to be busy in the effort to stabilize prices and stimulate employment. Secretary of Commerce Redfield started a movement to this end on Friday, whose progress will be watched with interest by economists who stand conservatively by the natural law of supply and demand as it had application before prices were regulated through artificial means as a war measure.

TALK OF THE STREET

American Steel Foundries was again rather heavily sold in a weak market and the shares closed at the low price of the day, 68. They are now down to around the level that obtained at the beginning of the war period. There was apparently no support from inside interests and the basis for selling continued to be the figures of the annual report. It is explained that the poor showing for the last three months of 1918 was due to charging off prospective losses on unfinished war contracts.

The commission houses that are inclined to be bearish on Steel common are getting around to their old prediction of 85 to 80 for the stock. The market as a whole, however, was under the influence of unfavorable labor news.

Week end trade reports on the steel and iron situation as well as in the cloth markets continued to denote an absence of much new business being booked and further curtailment of construction. These unfavorable factors were taken to suggest a further continuance of a dragging market to be improved occasionally by moderate rallies at the expense of the short interest.

American Hide and Leather preferred was the firmest stock in the general list. The latest announcement is that the reorganization plan calls for the creation of a new concern to be known as the American Hide and Leather corporation, with $25,000,000 preferred and 400,000 shares of common, the latter of no par value. The present preferred shares, it is reported, will be offered share for share for the new preferred. For the accumulated dividends on the preferred it is said new common stock will be given.

May contracts eased off to 13.95c and December to 13.10c, with the market closing at a net decline of 6 to 15 points. No change was reported in the cost and freight situation. The official cables reported a decline of 100 reis in the Santos spot market. The early cable was unchanged to 25 reis higher for Santos futures, but later cables reported a decline of 25 to 100 reis. The Rio spot market was not quoted. CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Chicago stocks were rather dull and inclined to be lower. This applied to nearly everything in the list except Pneumatic Tool, which was fractionally better.

The packing house shares are inclined to be steady while awaiting a possible change in the minimum price of $17.50 which must be paid for hogs during the month of February.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Leaders in financial circles said yesterday that the pending establishment of a credit of $50,000,000 for Belgium was an excellent indication that reconstruction plans are being worked out on a sound foundation. The money is to be used for buying material needed to start Belgium's industries. The purchase of foreign securities is urged in order that normal exchange conditions with foreign countries may be restored.

A foreign and domestic trade service has been established by the Central Trust company. A trade department was opened and is in charge of George W. Doonan, formerly at the head of the Chicago office of the United States bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. His work will be in conjunction with the foreign exchange department of the bank. Information regarding credits of foreign dealers and opportunities will be supplied.

Announcement was made yesterday that freight rates to France had been reduced $5.00 below the former week's figures. As the rate is still high it is expected there will be further reductions when cargo space becomes plentiful.

Hide and Leather reorganization plans are reported to call for the formation of a new corporation with the name American Hide and Leather corporation. It is said there will be $25,000,000 preferred stock and 400,000 shares of common without par value.

Following a strike of some of the operators at Woonsocket, R. I., yesterday, the mills of the Falls Yarn company, the Woonsocket Spinning company, the Alsace Worsted company, and the Guerin Spinning company were closed.

The annual report of the trustees of the employés' savings and profit sharing plan of the Harris Trust and Savings bank shows the bank contributed $30,373 to the fund and the employes $13,091. The bank pays 5 per cent of its net earnings into the fund every year. The plan has been in operation three years. Employés who have put in $100 a year during that time have $1,389 to their credit.

The January, 1919, issue of the "Hand Book of Securities," compiled by the publishers of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, has been received. The book contains 226 pages and gives full information concerning the various railroads and leading industrials whose securities are dealt in on the principal exchanges. 700 ALMOND TREES in California working for you on your own 10 Acres—a liberal annua income without effort on your part—a big increase in value each year

Come to California Next Saturday

under our Money-Back Agreement or have some one who is going investigate for you. Read below the reports from those who have just returned from our last Pleasure-Investigation Trip to Paso Robles

PROOF

Read for Yourself. Special Reports from Those Who Personally Investigated our Property

EVERY PURCHASER who went on our January 15th Pleasure-Investigation Trip is more than satisfied—NOT ONE has asked for a cancellation of their purchase.

As announced in this newspaper last Sunday, we reproduce here some of the Special Reports from those who visited our Almond Orchards at Paso Robles last week. Upon request we will send you reproductions of the telegrams, with names and addresses. Any one interested is urged to call at our office, read the ORIGINAL TELEGRAMS and get free our Booklet, "Inside Information," also full details of our next Pleasure-Investigation Trip to California, leaving Chicago next Saturday, Feb. 15.

This Telegram Is Signed Jointly by Six Members of the Party

(Dated) Paso Robles, Cal., Feb. 3, 1919.

"For the benefit of those who were unable to participate in our trip to California to inspect the lands of the Associated Almond Growers, and who have requested that some of our party give them the results of our investigation, we beg to say we have gone over the property of the Associated Almond Growers in company with Mr. C. C. Staunton, the County Horticulturist, and Mr. G. A. Nehrhood, the Association's Managing Director. We were given every facility to make a thorough examination and complete information was given us in reply to the numerous questions asked by the members of our party. We have also seen many other Almond Groves in the vicinity planted by Mr. Nehrhood and others. We have seen Almond Trees in this district ranging in age from 1 to 35 years, and the size and productivity of trees but a few years old is remarkable. We find that Mr. Nehrhood stands very high in this community and is looked upon as an authority on Almond Culture. The groves planted by him show the wonderful results that can be obtained by thorough care and cultivation. We find that the Association has been very conservative in all their statements and we believe that the results obtained will be better than their estimates. We feel sure that the property of the investor living at a distance will be taken care of just as well or better than if he were on the ground giving it his personal attention. Mr. Staunton told us that he considered the soil ideal and the drainage and moisture conditions of the very best, and that the trees now being planted are of the very highest grade. We quite agree with Doctor George P. Clements, Agricultural Adviser of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, who was here last week inspecting the property, that Paso Robles is situated in the midst of a splendid natural park. Any of us will be glad to give any further information desired."

This Night Letter Signed by Six Members.

"You Underestimated Instead of Overestimated"

(Dated) Paso Robles, Cal., Jan. 31, 1919.

"The County Horticulturist accompanied our party over your property today. Every acre of land you have for sale is of the highest class in soil, location, elevation, moisture and drainage. You underestimated instead of overestimated. I am highly pleased with my investment and I wish I could take more. Careful inquiry here shows Mr. Nehrhood to be recognized as the authority on Almond Culture, and the orchards under his care are decidedly better than others even several years older. This expresses the opinion of our entire party."

Call and ask to see this Original Telegram.

"I Have Purchased 20 Acres"

(Dated) Paso Robles, Cal., Feb. 2, 1919.

"In my opinion one of the biggest compliments that could be paid your organization is the fact that every member of the investigation party, after looking over the land and becoming acquainted with Mr. Nehrhood and his work, placed in his hands the selection of their tracts. Your statements as to your property and organization are really too conservative. My best recommendation is that I have purchased twenty acres after a most thorough investigation."

This telegram is in our office for your inspection.

Money Back Agreement

If you join our Pleasure-Investigation Trip leaving Chicago on February 15 and do not find this investment to be exactly as presented in our booklet, "Inside Information"—and you will have thirty days in which to make your investigation—we agree to refund your Railroad and Pullman Fares, also any initial payments you may have made. If you select some one to represent you and this person does not find this investment to be as represented in our Booklet, we will refund any initial payment or payments you may have made.

Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles

Could Anyone Ask for Anything More Convincing?

There are some who read this announcement who will be able to go on our next personally conducted Pleasure-Investigation Trip to our property at Paso Robles, California, leaving Chicago February 15th.

There are a larger number, however, who cannot spare the time—who have read our literature—who have attended our Free Illustrated Lectures on California—and who before finally deciding to purchase one of our Almond Orchards have been waiting for these Special Reports.

If you have been planning to go and make your own personal investigation on the ground—these Special Reports will convince you that YOU SHOULD GO.

If you are not fortunate enough to make a trip to Sunny California at this season of the year—these Special Reports will convince you that you should PURCHASE YOUR ALMOND ORCHARD AT ONCE.

It is only human nature that the investor will discount any statements made by those offering the investment—and yet every one who visits our property invariably states that we have UNDERESTIMATED instead of overestimated our proposition.

But the Special Reports you have just read are not made BY US—they come from men and women just like you—in your exact position—and they are STRONGER STATEMENTS than we make to you in our booklet, "Inside Information." You cannot possibly discount or doubt these statements, because they are made by men and women who are in no way connected with our organization and cannot possibly profit in any way except by the incomes they will receive as a result of investing in our Almond Orchards—just the same as you can do.

The Cream of All Almond Land and the Best Horticulturist

Once in a while you meet a man who puts his ambition, his life's work and his professional reputation above the mere making of money. Such a man is our Active Field Manager, Mr. G. A. Nehrhood. He is a big, broad minded man who enjoys his life amid the sunshine and flowers of this "Garden Spot of North America."

Fourteen years ago he moved to California—he has been in the nursery business—he has planted over 800,000 different variety trees—he has made a specialty of Almond Land and Almond Culture—he has planted over one thousand six hundred acres of Almond Orchards near Paso Robles. He knows every part of California as you know your own front yard—and he selected our Almond Orchard land near Paso Robles as "The Cream of ALL Almond Land."

Mr. Nehrhood is the acknowledged leader in Almond Culture in this district—he is the man who will select the Almond Trees which will be planted in your orchard—he is the man who will directly supervise the planting, the cultivating and the entire care of your Almond Orchard for four years—his services are yours, and yet no individual, no matter how wealthy he may be, could hire Mr. Nehrhood on a salary, but he does this work gladly because he is a part owner in the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles.

Here Are the Facts You Are Looking For

The Paper Shell Almond, such as we grow at Paso Robles, brings the highest market price—they are scarce and will be for years to come.

You are not investing in a "Land Opportunity"—you are getting 10, 20, 30, 50, 70 or 100 acres of the best Almond Growing Land, each acre planted with 70 one year old trees of selected stock, with roots which are two years old—and which will produce a crop from the third year after planting.

Each year after the third year your Almond Orchard will earn for you an ever increasing income—and in this section there has not been a single Almond crop failure during the last 35 years.

In taking one of our 10 acre tracts you will not only own 700 Almond Trees, but you will actually own the ten acres on which they are planted—and during the four years in which Mr. Nehrhood cares for them, if any trees should die or not thrive, they will be replaced without any cost to you.

After the sixth year your net profits from your 700 Almond Trees should be from $2,500 to $3,000 annually.

You will not be charged with any "Extras." All taxes will be paid by the Association during the four years.

Your initial payment can be as low as $100—the balance on easy payments.

You will never be called upon to pay more than one-half the total purchase price—the other one-half will be paid out of the profits from the crops of Almonds.

Almonds are not perishable—they can be stored indefinitely—you pay no freight charges—the entire crop last year was sold in less than one hour.

Call at Our Office—Free Illustrated Lectures

One evening each week we have an Illustrated Lecture on California and Paso Robles. Free Admission Tickets may be had by calling at our offices—also a copy of our Booklet, "Inside Information."

Our object is to give you ALL the facts—so we extend you a cordial invitation to call at our office—go into our proposition from any angle you wish, without putting you under the slightest obligation. You will be shown the ORIGINAL TELEGRAMS quoted in this announcement with names and addresses and other Special Reports from those who have visited our property—also enlarged photographs in actual colors of our Almond orchards of various ages, picturesque and historic scenes in and around Paso Robles. We are open Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings until 9 o'clock.

FUNERAL SERVICE FOR THE "HEROES OF THE REVOLUTION"—Germany's battles were not over with the signing of the armistice. When revolution came Berlin saw its streets become No Man's Land over night. The city boiled with plots, spies and cocked pistols and hundreds lost their lives in street fighting. The photograph shows the immense throng attending funeral services for the revolution's victims on Tempelhofer field, on what was termed "Death Sunday."

FLOWERS FOR VICTIMS OF THE GERMAN REVOLUTION—This photograph shows the funeral procession for revolution victims passing down Unter den Linden, Berlin. It is indicative of the desire on the part of the people to pay tribute to those who gave their lives in aiding to throw off the rulers and militaristic chiefs who plunged the empire into disaster.

DECORATED FOR "CONSPICUOUS SERVICE"—Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord is commanding general of the service of supplies (left); Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes is the A. E. F.'s general purchasing agent (right). Gen. Harbord has been given credit for having been, next to Gen Pershing, probably the chief factor in American successes. Of Brig. Gen. Dawes of Chicago the citation says: "His rare ability, sound judgment, and aggressive energy were invaluable in securing needed supplies for the American armies in Europe."

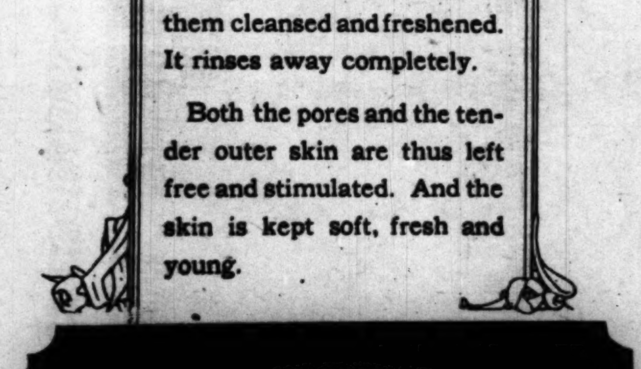
Facts about Skin-pores and Youthful Skin

A SOAP for the youthful care of the skin must not only be pure. It must do more than cleanse the mere surface or "outer skin". It must also take care of the pores. That is, it must gently reach into the pores and gently cleanse them.

For the pores are the "workshop" of skin beauty. And unless they are kept free and active the skin cannot be kept fresh and young.

Fairy Soap creams up into a velvety, soothing lather. This lather does not remain in pores to clog them and diminish the activity and beauty of the skin. It leaves them cleansed and freshened. It rinses away completely.

Both the pores and the tender outer skin are thus left free and stimulated. And the skin is kept soft, fresh and young.



For a Skin where Youth Lingers

YOU know that a pure soap which will keep your own skin clear and soft in youthful loveliness, is a soap you would not hesitate to use every day in the year—to preserve all the delicate beauty of your skin, and the soft, velvety "feel" of it.

Fairy Soap is wonderfully "mellowed together" of the purest materials which can go into a soap at any price. It is made to take particular care of skins—the pores as well as the smooth "outer skin."

That is why Fairy Soap does so much more than cleanse the mere surface.

Fairy creams cleansingly into the tiny pores. But it does not remain in them. And after it has soothingly creamed out of the delicate pores, it does not cling to the tender outer skin. Fairy Soap is a remarkable soap for rinsing off—easily—completely.

That is why Fairy Soap deals so very gently with tender complexions.

With these soap-qualities in mind, you will do well to buy several cakes of Fairy Soap. Then use it consistently. In no other way can you prove its pure benefits to "a skin where youth lingers."

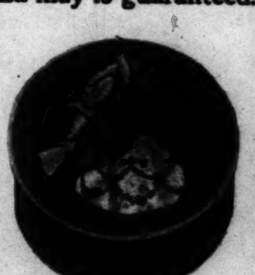
If the American girl should become a queen she would be the first of her countrywomen to have that distinction. Miss Stewart is the step-daughter of the late James Henry ("Silent") Smith, New York and Chicago millionaire. La=may Face Powder Stays On Better Than Any Other

Now you can use a pure face powder that beautifies your complexion wonderfully and is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder (Poudre de Riz) to make it stick. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and unsightly complexions. Five thousand dollars is offered any chemist who analyzes it and finds it contains any white lead or rice powder. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses a medicinal ingredient that doctors use to heal the skin. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores and irritations. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. Because it is pure and because it stays on so well this La-may powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is now used by over a million American women. And it is sold by prominent dealers everywhere. The large size is only fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. Remember, La-may is guaranteed. If you do not find La-may much better than any you have ever used, your dealer is authorized to return your money without question. Refuse substitutes. Your common sense will tell you that when you are offered a substitute it is sure to be a demonstrator trying to sell an inferior powder that pays a big commission. When you use this absolutely pure La-may and see how splendidly it beautifies your complexion, you will understand why it so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in New York.



Over One Million American Women Are Now Using La-may Face Powder

BUILDING THE WORLD'S GREATEST WARSHIP FOR UNCLE SAM—At the shipyards at Newport News 2,000 men are working daily on this powerful superdreadnaught, the U. S. S. Maryland. It will burn oil fuel and be electrically driven, and her sixteen inch guns will be the equal if not the superior of any guns in any navy afloat. Her crew will consist of 1,200 officers and men.

Blackheads are a confession

BLACKHEADS are a confession that you are using the wrong method of cleansing for your type of skin.

Try the following special treatment for skins liable to this disfiguring trouble and see how easily you can keep your skin free from it.

Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully.

Make this treatment a daily habit, and it will give you the clear, attractive skin that the regular use of Woodbury's brings.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Treatments for all the commoner troubles of the skin are given in the booklet wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

You will find a 25c cake sufficient for a month or six weeks of any Woodbury treatment and for general cleansing use. Woodbury's is on sale at drug stores and toilet goods counters throughout the United States and Canada.

Write today for a week's size cake

Send 6c for a trial size cake (enough for a week or ten days of any Woodbury facial treatment) together with the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch." Or for 12c we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap and Facial Powder. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., 26 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Addrew Jergens Co., Limited, 26 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

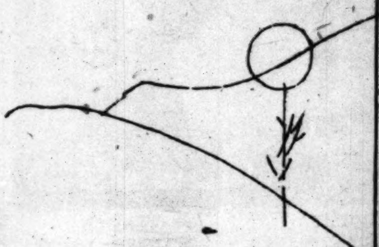
FRANCES STARR says: "I love the way Pond's Vanishing Cream makes my skin look—so soft and clear, yet not the least bit shiny."



"Nothing so freshens my skin as my bedtime massage with Pond's Cold Cream."

Frances Starr

Posed especially for the Pond's Extract Company by Frances Starr

In winter your skin needs added protection-

Do you know why it is that in winter your skin is often so rough, dry and "tight"?

The reason, as Dr. William Allen Pusey points out, is that "the skin because of the unnatural dryness loses its power of resistance." It cracks and breaks, becomes painfully rough and red. Dr. Pusey goes on to say that the secret of preventing and curing chapped skin is to use outward applications to make up for the oil which the skin is failing to supply for itself.

The invisible protection your skin needs

Just before you go out, apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream. It provides just the protection your skin needs to keep it soft, fine-textured and lovely the winter through.

Use it on your hands and face. Instantly it is absorbed by the skin, leaving not the slightest trace of shine. Notice the soft, velvety texture—the transparent, natural coloring it gives the skin.

Use it every day. Do not be afraid to apply it while dressing. It disappears immediately and will not leave a trace on your veil or gloves.

Whenever you want your skin to look its best

Before going out in the evening, or whenever you want your skin to look particularly well, apply a little Pond's Vanishing Cream. It seems actually to smooth out all the tired lines. Your face feels and looks wonderfully refreshed. You will be astonished to see that your skin has gained the transparency and softness everyone so much admires.

Beautiful women of the stage who realize the necessity of keeping their skin always smooth, lovely, free from chapping, use Pond's Vanishing Cream regularly. Among the many famous actresses who use it are Billie Burke, Elsie Ferguson, Norma Talmadge, Hazel Dawn, Martha Hedman, Frances Starr, Mabel Taliaferro, Marion Davies, Marjorie Rambeau and others.

Your skin must also be thoroughly cleansed at night

But to keep your skin clear and fresh-looking it must also be thoroughly cleansed at night.

For your bedtime cleansing and massage tonight, try Pond's Cold Cream. This cream is an OIL cream and is intended just for cleansing and massage. It has the creamy, "workable" consistency demanded by professional masseurs.

Neither Pond's Cold Cream nor Pond's Vanishing Cream will grow hair or down. You can secure these creams at drug and department stores everywhere.

Send for free sample tubes

We shall be glad to send you a free sample tube of each cream to try. Or for 10c we will send you a tube of each cream, large enough to last two weeks.

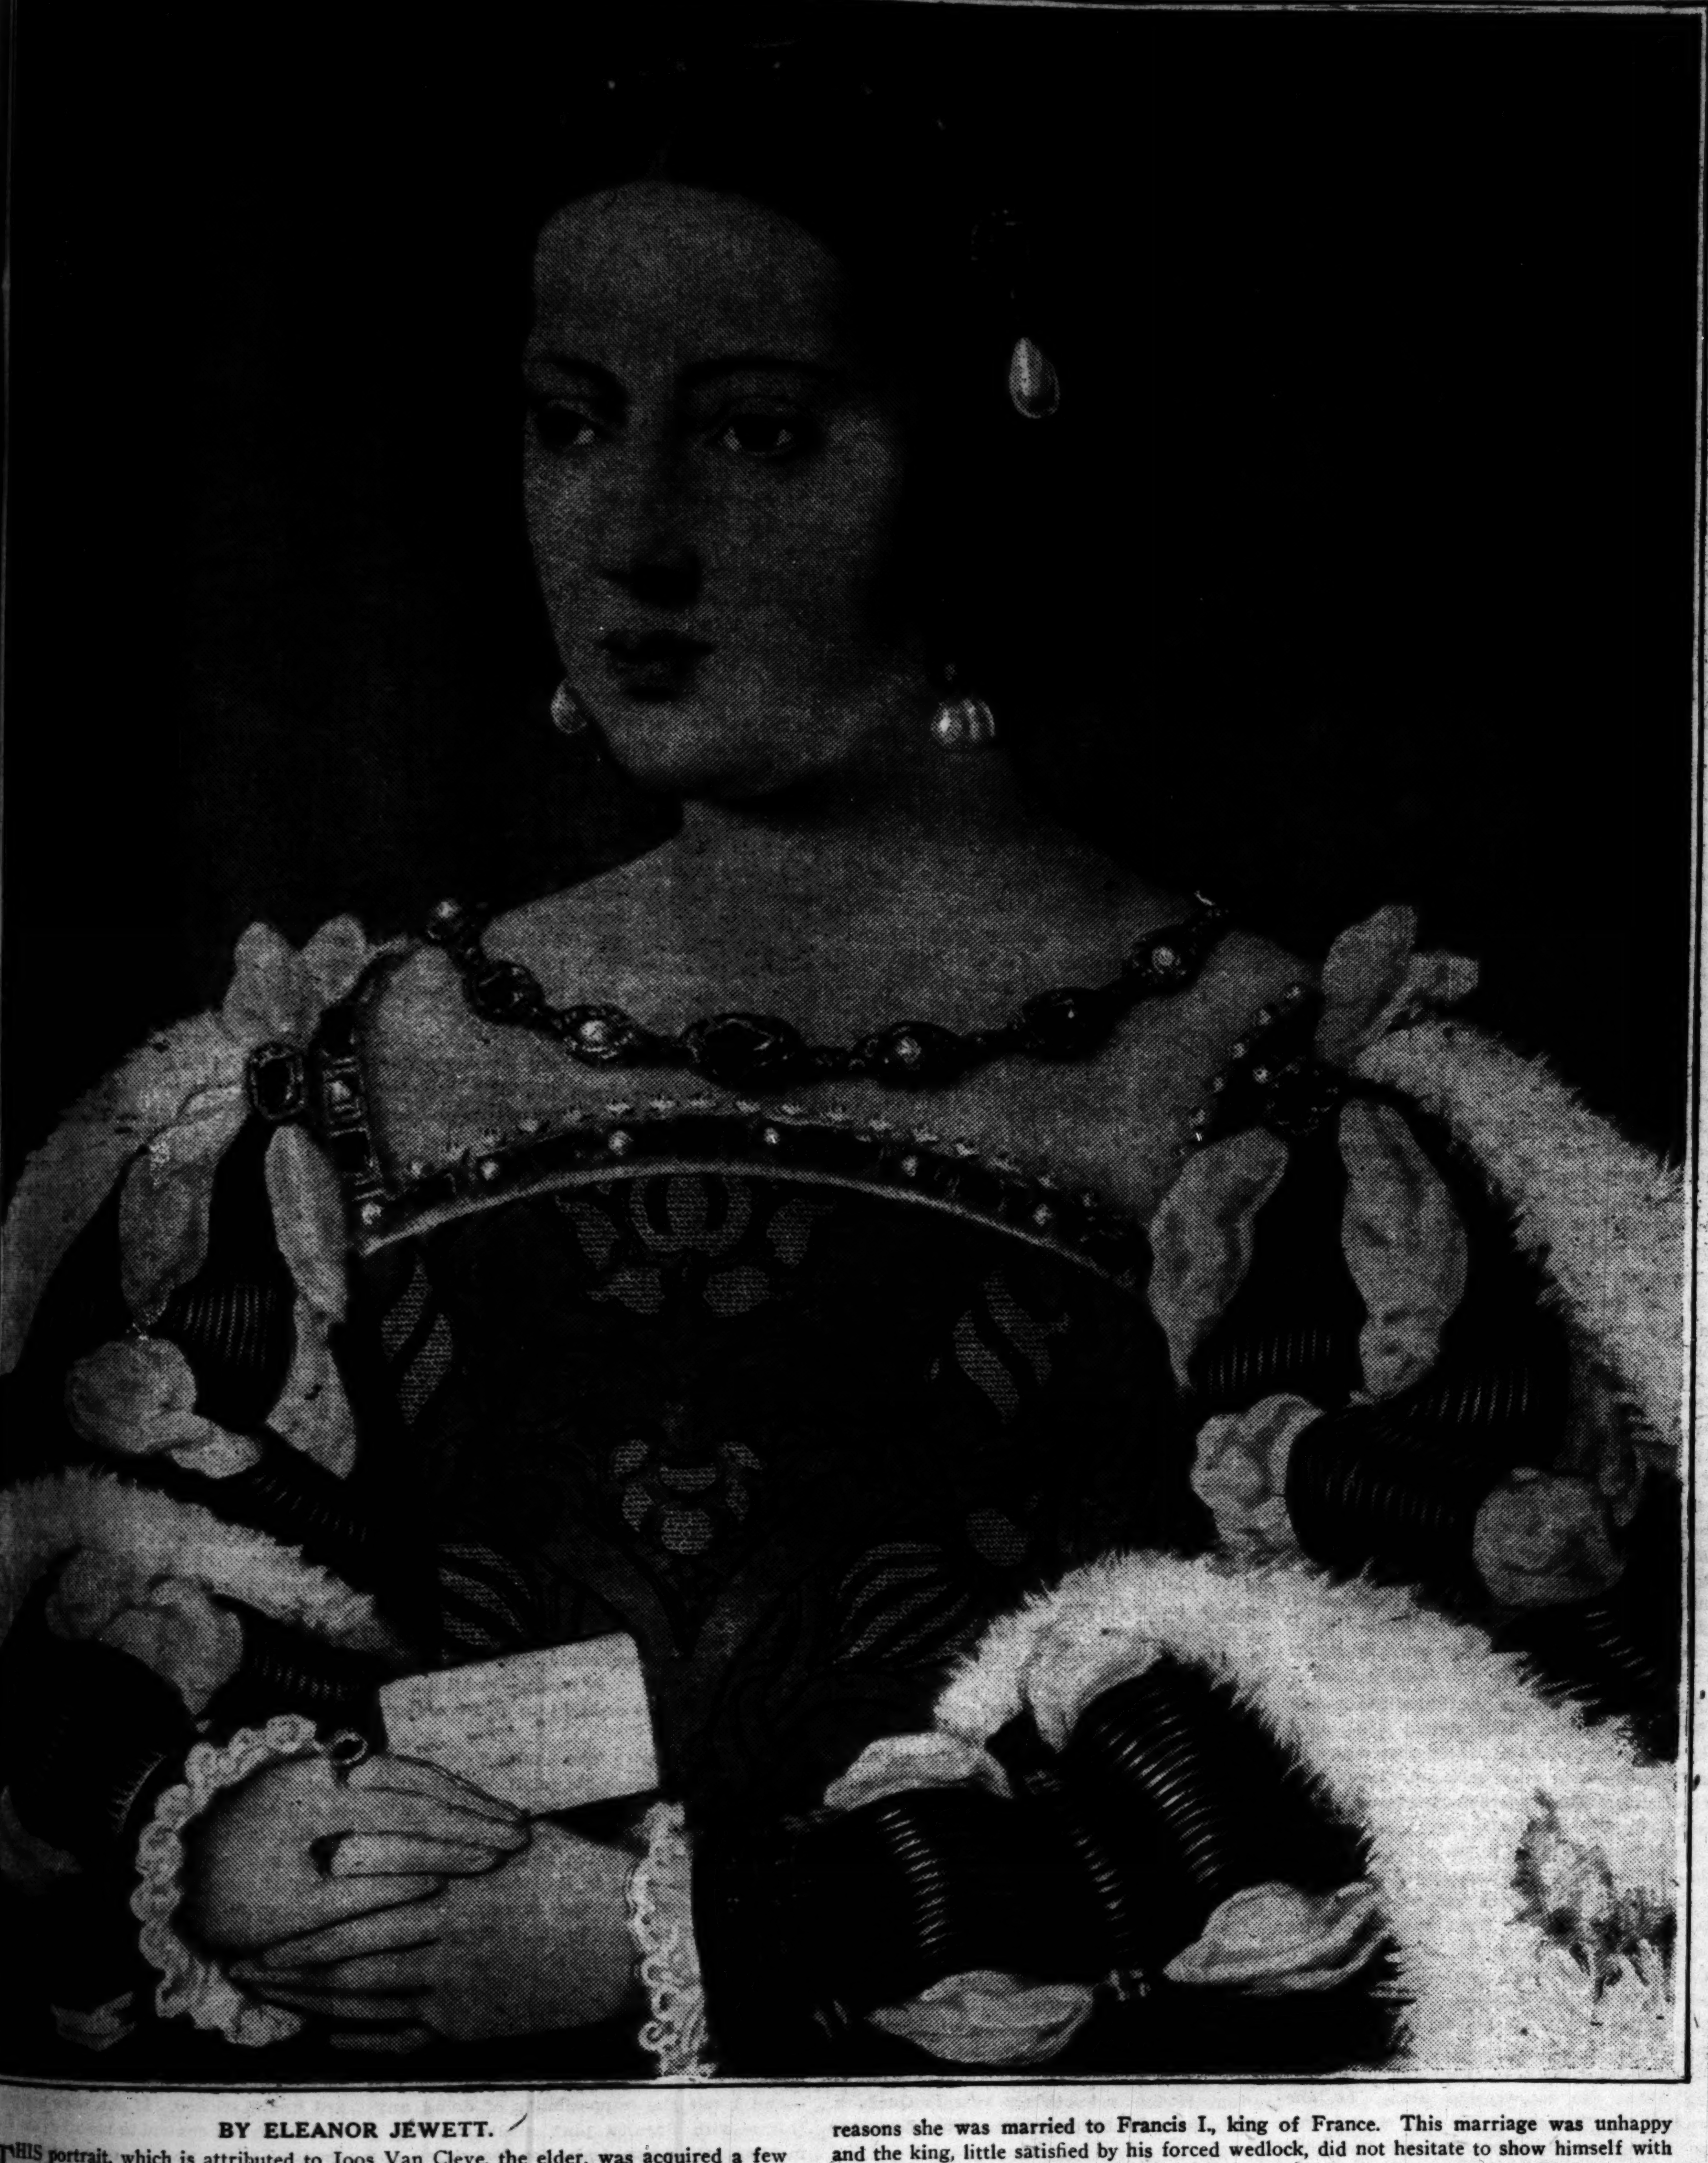
Portrait of Queen Eleanore of France



BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

THIS portrait, which is attributed to Joos Van Cleve, the elder, was acquired a few years ago by the Imperial gallery of Vienna and is among the most excellent examples that we have of the early Flemish school. The queen is shown in the rich costume of the French court of the sixteenth century. Gold brocade and ermine, pearls and other precious stones give fit setting to this first lady of France.

The lower lip, strongly modelled and prominent, a feature common to the Hapsburgs and one which, according to Brantome, Eleonore herself said (but without great reason) went back to Mary de Bourgogne, the first wife of Maximilian, and to her ancestors, reveals a princess of the house of Austria. Eleonore was the oldest daughter of the king, Philippe le Beau and sister of Charles V.

She first married King Emmanuel of Portugal and after his death, for political reasons she was married to Francis I., king of France. This marriage was unhappy and the king, little satisfied by his forced wedlock, did not hesitate to show himself with his mistress, the duchess d'Etampes, after the entry of the queen into Paris.

The portrait, reproduced above, was painted at the time of the second marriage. Proof lies in the costume of the fashion of France, and in the letter which the queen holds in her hand and which is addressed to the "very Christian and very powerful queen," terms which could be applied to none but the queen of France. The painting is attributed by various experts to the brush of the same artist who has given us the "Mort de Marie." He, it is thought, was the Flemish painter Joos Van Cleve, the elder. It is known beyond a doubt that Van Cleve was summoned to the court of France by Francis I., and that while there he painted many of the royal family—among them Queen Eleonore.

SYNOPSIS.

The Brownings, Richard and Hope, are entertaining in their own charming manner on Christmas eve. Hope leaves the room for a moment, and reenters with terrible bruises on her throat, announcing a masked man discovered at her jewel case struck her cruelly. Richard and Philip Kline search the grounds. The servants are questioned, and Richard decides they must all be discharged, and plans to take Hope south. Sarah Parr, who lives in the village, and has known Hope always, appears to know more than she cares to tell about the happening. Philip and Dr. Arthur spend the night at the Parrs', returning to Quatuck the next morning. Sarah tells them about Esther Browning, Richard's mother, of her love for children and all young, tender things.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

IN FEBRUARY

RICHARD and Hope went south a few days after Christmas. Richard acted with determination and finality. The servants were released, some caretakers were brought in, and Richard took Hope away. Dr. Arthur Arthur and I saw them in the city the night before their going. They had closed up the house, except for the caretakers' quarters, and they wanted Arthur and me to join them in town for dinner.

Richard was a man of the most genial enthusiasms. His fancy had been taken for tarpon fishing, and in the afternoon he had been about town getting equipment and information. At dinner he talked a good deal of this fishing, with an eagerness of expectation which was enviable, and I did envy him. He seemed to have the secret of a delightful perpetuity of youth, an ingratiating cordiality of manners, springing from an amiability of temperament constantly heightened by an enthusiasm for what he found himself about to do and what, at the moment, he wanted most to do.

It was extraordinary that Richard constantly found himself about to do what at that moment he most wanted to do. I never knew whether it was because he was an unconscious tyrant of the hours and always followed his own inclinations to the top of his bent, or whether it was because of a marvelous ability to adjust himself with enthusiasm to conditions he was about to meet and to do with all his heart what he was about to do.

Hope, as we always found her, was a beautiful serenity. Richard's enthusiasms kindled a responsive interest in her. She was a reflection of his mood, with her own graciousness added, always adding her charm to what interested him.

They had our best wishes and our regret was real that they were withdrawing from our winter the zest and charm which they could give it by their friendship. Hope's lip, I noticed, was still a little swollen and a cloth collar covered her neck.

Occasional letters later came from them, letters of placid friendship from Hope and of ecstatic enthusiasm from Richard. He was fishing for tarpon and sharks. Experience with the sea was new to him, and delightful. He was both childlike and shrewd in his impressions, fascinated both by the natural and the social phenomena suggested by the roll and sweep of the waters, by what sailed on them, and by what could be taken from them.

"A highway and an inexhaustible source of food," he wrote. "Wonderful to consider the sea as the means by which people give to each other what they lack and need, and which itself gives to them the most bounteous supplies of food."

Then came a letter in the most depressed tone. They were returning north. This was in late February. They would be home by the middle of March. Hope had had an experience which spoiled the south for them. She had been strolling in the pines and had been attacked by a Negro. He had seized her by the throat and had struck her in the mouth.

Richard had cautioned her against wandering about the countryside alone, as she wanted to. The place they had chosen was not a frequented resort. Richard had been afraid that Hope allowed herself too much liberty in going about. She did not always accompany him when he fished, but went by herself into the pine woods, which fascinated her as the sea fascinated him.

What had unstrung both of them, even more than Hope's experience, was what had happened to the Negro suspected of having made the attack. He was hanged by the men of the community. Hope had not been asked to identify him. She had been so broken down nervously by her experience that they did not want to inflict this ordeal upon her, and the circumstances sufficiently revealed the Negro who had done it.

Richard wrote that he thought the system of punishment was not particular as to the identity of a Negro. What was sought was the maintenance of a condition of order and security, which was to be maintained by the punishment, by the execution, of a Negro, or several Negroes, every time a crime was committed by any Negro. It was best, but not necessary, to get the guilty one. It was important to get one. That maintained the morale of the community. It impressed the Negro sentiment, and the whites, if they properly impressed the sentiment, however violently and with whatever disregard of the precise justice, attained their object, which was the stability of community order.

Hope, however, learning that a Negro had been hanged for the attack upon her, had collapsed utterly, and could not remain longer in the south. She was in a very bad state of health and they were coming home. Richard said she needed chiefly to get away from the scene, which now had such terrible associations for her. He knew that the excruciating memory would be effaced at Quatuck.

Later he wrote again, saying that he had given Hope's requirements more consideration, and in consequence he would take her to New York for a month. This letter he wrote from Asheville. They had come north into the Blue Ridge.

Richard said that because our early spring was cold and inclement he was certain that Quatuck would not be the place for Hope, probably not until May, and, moreover, he thought that Hope's mind might be rid the quicker of its unpleasant ideas and impressions with such distractions as he could provide for her there.

I went with Arthur Arthur to Quatuck a number of times in the late winter and early spring to spend a day and night with Simon and Sarah, to sit in the red curtained kitchen in a rocking chair by the geraniums, to eat Sarah's buckwheat cakes and sausages. These days were always delightful—some of snow, some of rain, some of close gray skies, some dazzling in the most brilliant of sunlight—that of February.

I was at Quatuck at sugaring time, when Simon tapped the sugar maples and when Arthur and I carried the great copper boiling kettle out of the woodshed for Sarah and set it up in the maple grove back of the barn.

We built the fire under it in the snow, carried wood and kept the pot boiling the days that Sarah sugared the sap in the snow. Downy and hairy woodpeckers, chickadees, and nuthatches were all about, and I remember having a genuine esthetic thrill to see a cardinal in a patch of witch hazel, poplar saplings, and viburnum, when a new fall of snow was glistening as the perfect setting for his exotic beauty.

Hard and unsympathetic as Sarah's moral and material universe was, and ineffectual as Simon was as an expression of benignancy, neither the failure of the latter as a positive force nor the success of the former as a negative one could even diminish the essential and robust joviality of all this human good.

Sarah might be dour, hard, and stern, unbending, uncomprehending, unsympathetic, unrelenting—have all or any of the qualities which make a person indurated to the suggestions of benevolence—but at her wood range, whether with cakes in the skillet or with cabbage and salt pork in a pot, or with a fowl in the oven, she had to be, by the successful insistence of her surroundings, a part of and a performer in the success of this rural drama of content.

In late March we dug wintered parsnips out of the frozen ground with mattocks, and when Sarah had fried these sweet roots we knew that nothing else the earth produced could have such succulence. Sarah's potato soup alone was worth the ride to Quatuck. Her mince meat was worth a trip across the continent.

Every evening Simon went to the cellar—the cellar door was at the far end of the kitchen—you raised the door out of the floor, hooked it against the wall, and descended the stairs carefully, lighting your way with a lamp—and got an apple from a barrel. He baked the apple on the back of the range and read while it baked. It was his own little ceremony. He never asked us to join him and never expected Sarah to bake his apple for him.

Several afternoons I spent in the store with Simon, watching him lose his spectacles by pushing them up on his forehead, listening to the arguments about the stove and enjoying all the eccentricities of his proprietorship.

One afternoon, when there was a close gray sky and when the brown earth contained intimations but not signs of spring, I sat in Sarah's kitchen reading, but surreptitiously—at times openly—watching her as she, heavy on her feet but adept with her hands, drew, cleaned, and stuffed a fat goose, made mince pies, kneaded bread, filled a pan with bread rolls, and served the cheerful ministry of the kitchen range.

Out of the window she had a view up the road, the willow lined country road along which the few houses of the village were lined. She glanced out of this window from time to time as she passed it and, finally in doing so, stopped and made a little sound, ejaculatory in significance, but not in tone or volume, made by suddenly sucking in her cheeks.

Up the road she had seen a horse and buggy approaching.

"The minister," she said, "and he's coming here. Drat the luck."

There was always a fire laid in the wood burning heater in the parlor and the parlor never was opened unless the minister called.

"Drat the luck," said Sarah, and went, waddling as rapidly as she could, opening the door into that chamber of sepulchral chill called the parlor, the only room in the house in which Sarah would have received the minister. Unhappy minister, I thought, condemned to parlors, such as Sarah's, seeing his human folk in their slippery, chill, haircloth upholstering when he would like to sit for a moment with them by the wood range and the geraniums in the red curtained kitchen with the cellar door at the far side suggesting apples, jellies, and damson preserves, and the whole odor of the room one of comfortable, competent life. His room, unhappy minister, was the room in which Sarah in exasperation and unhappiness was trying to light the first fire it had known for three months.

"You, Philip," she called. "Come here and light this fire for me and when the minister rings the bell you open the door and let him in and set here in the parlor with him. I'll get dressed."

I lighted the fire. I received the minister, an earnest young man whose face, I thought, indicated relief as well as astonishment when he saw me at the door instead of Sarah. His duties, geographically, were large if he performed them scrupulously, as I thought this young man would.

Quatuck was too insignificant a village to support a church, but its collection of souls had to be important to the minister, however distant, whose charge they were, and to the Rev. Mr. Dinsmore a charge was a charge, and his congregational visiting brought him from Wheeling, six miles away, to Quatuck, which was in his charge.

I wished I might take this earnest young man and do something human with him—take him out while I split some logs or fed the chickens—being a son of Anak, I should have loved to give him a drink—to sit down with him where we could talk cold turkey if he knew what that meant—had him out to dig up parsnips or had him in the red curtained kitchen.

I had to sit with him stiffly in the chill parlor, an unbelievable chill chamber of gloom with Sarah's haircloth furniture defying us to sit on it, and the crayon portraits of Sarah's ancestors, on the walls, daring us to.

The kindled wood in the wood heater did snap and crackle, but that merely suggested heat and did not supply it. I thought that Sarah must die if she sat in this room and received a pastoral visit, and that the church would be burying a minister and calling another within the next few days.

The young man could be nothing but serious—received, roomed and seated as he was—and I felt the impossibility of doing anything—with Sarah's pink shells making a mockery of human desire for decoration, the hard cloth sofa making a mockery of comfort, the crayon portraits making a mockery of remembrance, and the utter chill and desolation of the room making the kitchen seem as if it were the inspired achievement of another breed of humans.

I recall that even in these dismal, cold, and forbidding conditions the young Mr. Dinsmore did say that he had on his conscience a matter of inattention to the big house of Quatuck. He had heard that Mrs. Browning was not well and that some strange occurrences had tapped her strength badly—I wondered how he had that information—how widely it might be spread and where it originated—and he wondered frequently if some pastoral consolation and encouragement might not be necessary.

"The difficulty," he said, with a look of discouragement in the face of obstacles perceived but not understood, "is that I do not know the persuasion of Mr. and Mrs. Browning. They never have been to the church in Wheeling and I hesitate to offer them the help of a Methodist minister unless they are ready to receive it."

Sarah entered at that moment, majestically and solemnly, decorated as for a religious rite, in a white lace edged stomacher and in a white lace cap, in a black satin dress, heavy of feet, large of abdomen, heavy jowled but with her teeth in place, prepared to endure this young whippersnapper of a minister, but to destroy him if he suggested that she ought to believe the Baptists could be Christians.

I bowed to Mr. Dinsmore and left him to Sarah. I went back to the glow and warmth and cordiality of the kitchen and contemplated the fundamentals of human good as appreciated by simple folk, and as typified by a goose Sarah had in the oven. I was to baste it from time to time.

The pastoral visit was brief—not more than ten minutes. The Rev. Mr. Dinsmore took his departure and was on his way to another communicant, to be received in another parlor, by another lady, old or young, in the best dress she could put on while she kept him waiting.

Sarah fairly bristled as she came out again into the kitchen. She had first to see to her goose, and then to take off her black satin and lace.

"The minister said something about the Brownings," I suggested as she opened the oven to see how well or badly I might have been taking care of the rich, fat bird.

"Drat the minister," said Sarah. "I don't hold with him at all. He's soft. He hasn't any religion. He's all for forgiveness of our enemies and love of everybody and [illegible]ance of evil done us. A young whippersnapper coming around here to tell me what o'clock and how to tell spinach—well, you watch that goose while I get out of this dress."

"I said he mentioned the Brownings," I reiterated as Sarah closed the oven door.

"I reckon he did," said Sarah. "You mind that fire and that goose while I get into something comfortable again. Arthur and Simon are coming home with an appetite for that goose because they knew we were going to have it, and nothing gives a man an appetite like knowing he's going to have something he wants. I'm going to get out of this dress."

When Sarah came back again she was as I usually had seen her.

"If Arthur had married Hope, as he ought to have," said Sarah, "there wouldn't be any young whippersnapper asking about the Brownings, because there wouldn't be any Brownings to ask about."

"But Arthur never wanted to marry Hope," I said.

"O, didn't he!" said Sarah.

There was a stamping on the little porch and Simon opened the door, entering followed by Arthur.

"I stopped for him at the store," said Arthur, "and it's a good thing I did. He was in a checker game which would have lasted another hour if I had not broken it up."

"It will last three or four weeks as the result of your breaking it up," said Simon.

Arthur said he had to go to New York, telling us when we were full of the goose and Sarah's dressing and mashed potatoes. He did leave the next day.

He came back in two weeks. He had seen Richard and Hope. Hope, he thought, had looked tired, but otherwise seemed to have no ill effects from the experience which Richard had described. If she were nervous she had too much control to reveal it, but Arthur thought there was an occasional revelation of pain or horror in her eyes. These revelations were not related to immediate circumstances or events, were not attributable to things said or to be seen at the time.

As an instance, he said, they were dining in a very pleasant restaurant and every circumstance was agreeable. Richard was in high spirits, chatty, laughing, interested in his surroundings—had been keen to order a particularly well chosen dinner—as he knew how to do—and was at his amiable best.

His attentiveness to Hope was a delicacy

… amiability and enthusiasm—something pleasant to do. "Yes, Richard," Hope said, "I think that would be wonderful." That was all."

[illegible]

"What do you think of it, Sarah?" he asked.

"I think Simon ought to eat his apple and I know he is going to bed," said Sarah.

which revealed his affection and consideration. Hope was smiling and happy. Now, the only thing that happened that could be related in any fashion—that could be distorted into a significance or a distressing import to Hope's recollection or imagination, Arthur said, was the entrance of two Japanese.

They passed near by—two scrupulously attired Japanese gentlemen—and Arthur was certain that they could not have suggested even an unpleasantness in experience to Hope. Arthur thought it was beyond comprehension that they should have revived the recollection of the Negro who had attacked her and who had been lynched in the south. Certainly the hue and physiognomy of a Japanese would not start a recollection of such a nature. Arthur knew that the experience had shocked Hope profoundly. Richard had told him the circumstances the day he met him in New York and had asked him to try to avoid all suggestions which might revivify the pain for Hope.

Richard had said that it was very difficult to avoid this because so many unsuggestive lines had the power to start Hope's mind in this unfortunate direction. Her wonderful consideration for others, her control of herself, for the sake of others, her denial of herself, submergence of her emotions, of pains when she had them, of sadness if it came to her, kept her from displaying, except involuntarily and for an instant, any spiritual distress which her experience might have left.

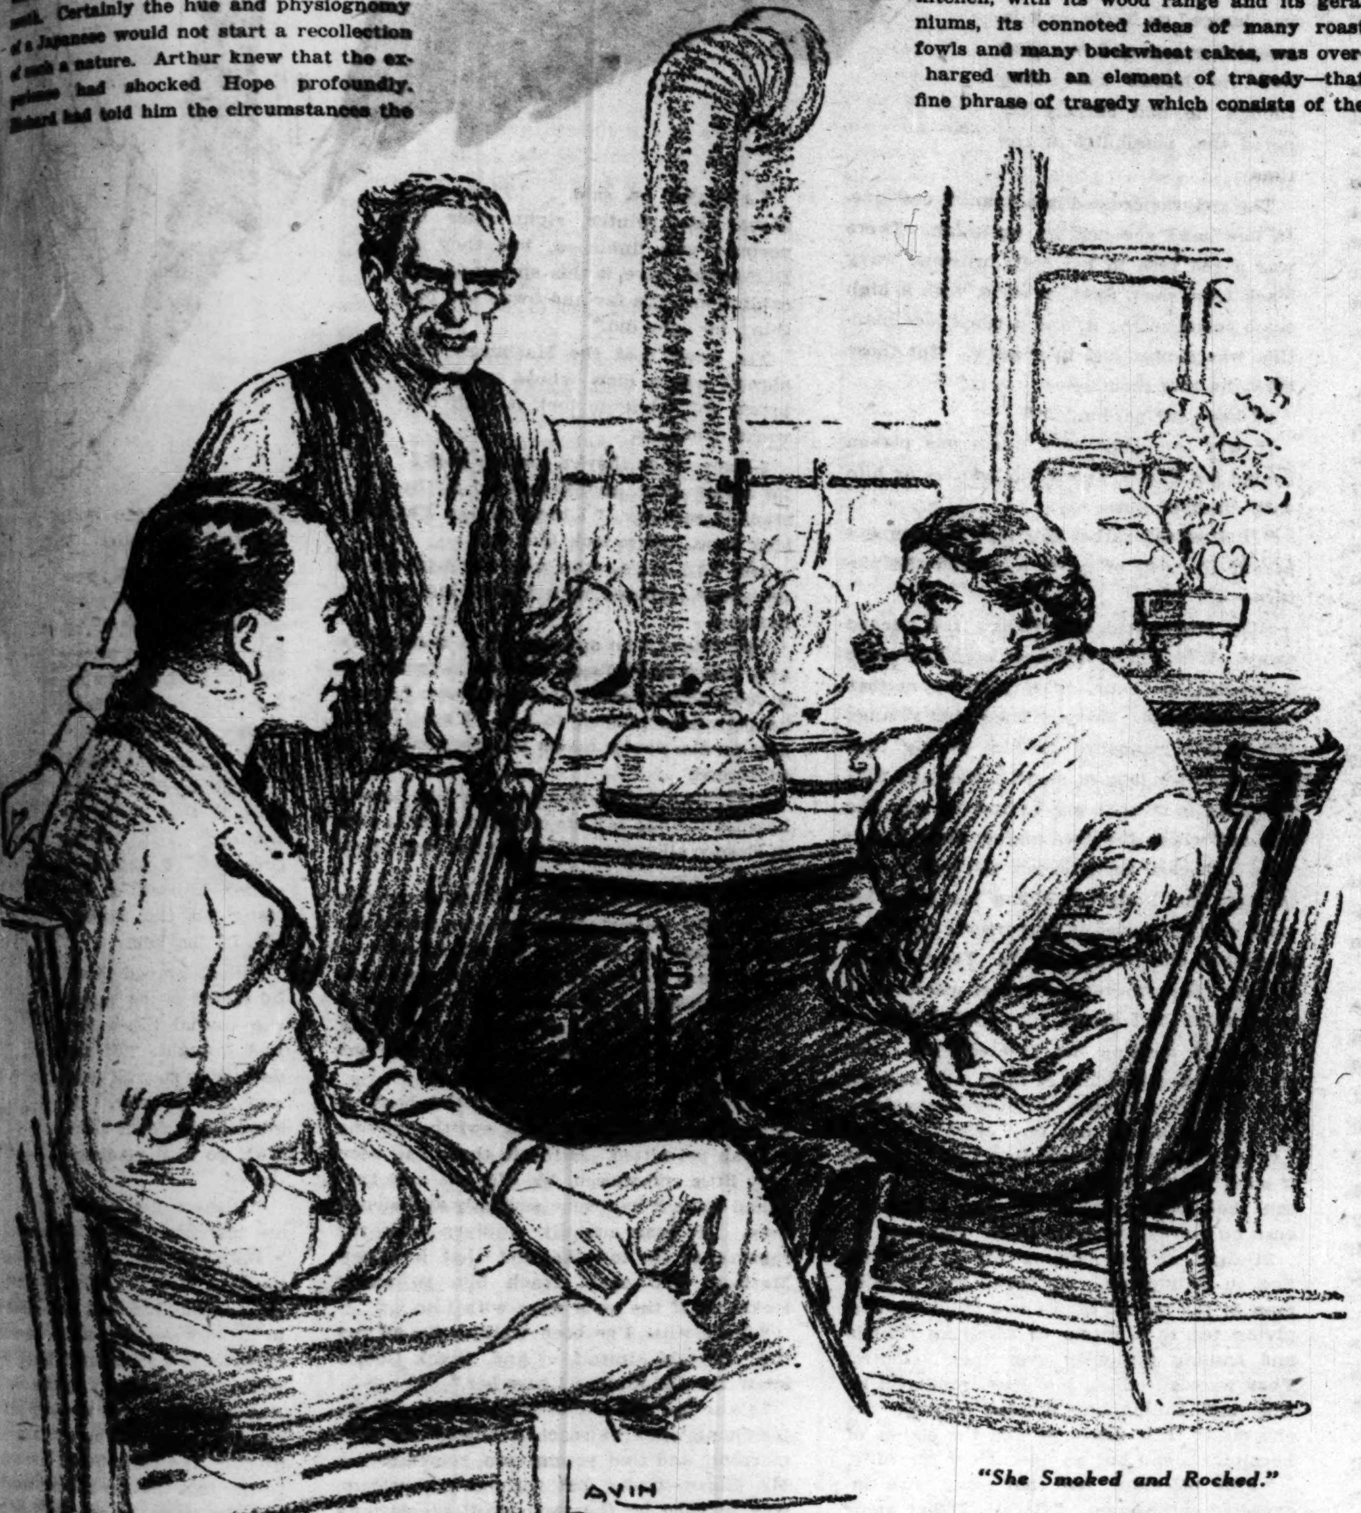
Richard had told Arthur that he knew the distress was there and that it asked their kindest consideration. He had said that Hope, he knew, easily might have survived the experience as it related merely to her. It was the lynching of the Negro that had nearly destroyed.

With all these things considered, it was to Arthur inexplicable that, as they sat in the pleasant restaurant, anything could have happened which in-itself could have produced the phenomenon giving him a startled glance into the terrified soul of Hope.

It could not have been related to the Japanese. Arthur said that he thought that at times, some of them very awkward times for Hope—even as this must have been an awkward time—her success in controlling both her mind and her actions broke down—merely for an instant. For that instant she became a sensitized photographic plate and a picture was revealed—just for a second, and that the picture came out of indelible experience, so horrifying, that the recollection could not be erased.

It was extraordinarily mysterious and unhappy, he said.

We were sitting with Simon and Sarah in the Parr kitchen as he, on his return from New York, told us of this. Simon's apple was baking on the range, or frying in its little pan. Sarah's teeth were in a tumbler of water on the red clothed kitchen table by the side of her rocking chair.



"She Smoked and Rocked."

She smoked and rocked. The cat lay in her lap. The one consideration I ever knew Sarah to accord the sensitiveness of any living thing was shown to the cat. She deliberately blew the smoke from her pipe so it would not drop into the cat's nose. That was the one concession of Sarah Parr—so far as I ever had been able to observe—to the amenities of life.

She had listened to all Arthur had been saying—and without a comment. She looked very grim and perspicacious—a suggestion of the unutterable wisdom and understanding of a dozing cat. The suggestion of infinite knowledge given out by the cat on her knees radiated from Sarah. She rocked gently—so gently and easily as not even to annoy the cat—and smoked, taking a long pull, and then several little quick ones—that was her only evidence of real animation.

I began to feel a sense of awe of Sarah, getting an idea of her quite unsympathetic comprehension of something beyond our grasp. She, I thought, had listened to Arthur as a physician might listen to the awkward description of symptoms by a patient, knowing exactly what they indicated, but patiently listening on to the distressed words of the perplexed sufferer, who knew only that something, which might be anything, had happened to him.

Thus Arthur himself, I imagined, in his field of knowledge, had listened to many such an old woman as Sarah. The difference was this—that Arthur, having been attentive and patient, had a word of encouragement, of explanation and direction. Sarah, out of the knowledge which I began to feel she had, would put the cat off her lap, slowly and heavily arise, knock the heel tap out of her pipe, put the pipe on the top of the chest of drawers, and say a sharp word to Simon about eating his apple and going to bed.

I had begun to feel that the red curtained kitchen, with its wood range and its geraniums, its connoted ideas of many roast fowls and many buckwheat cakes, was overcharged with an element of tragedy—that fine phrase of tragedy which consists of the knowledge of an act or condition, suppressed for reasons sufficiently good.

Sarah thus became portentous to the fancy—although only a fat, heavy, wrinkled old woman.

There was a heavy dashing rain outside, which beat against the windows and made shelter—a roof, walls, and inner warmth and comfort—appreciable, directly sensible.

"Well," said Simon, "after all you've said, Arthur, what was it all about? I've heard that you had your dinner and that two Japs came in—New York must be a queer place—but what's it all about? You've got us expecting something, but, by Godfrey, I don't know what. I think you're lighted, son, but I don't think you're going to explode."

"It isn't much," said Arthur. "It isn't anything. It was only the look of utter horror that suddenly came in Hope's eyes. She was listening to something Richard was saying and I was looking at her. Suddenly her eyes opened wide. You saw the horror in them—just a flash, but of terrible anguish—of the mind or soul—something dreadful. Then she closed her eyes, swayed almost imperceptibly, and instantly was herself again, smiling, beautiful, and serene. Richard had been planning something, in his ingratiating amiability and enthusiasm—something pleasant to do. 'Yes, Richard,' Hope said, 'I think that would be wonderful.' That was all."

"I knew you had lighted a squib," said Simon.

I watched Sarah. She did precisely what I had thought she would do. She arose. She knocked the heel tap out of her pipe.

"You eat your apple and go to bed," she said to Simon.

Simon arose and went to the corner where the broom stood. He picked a stout broom straw from it, rejecting several before he found one which satisfied him as to its fiber and stoutness. Simon had a comfortable slouch as he walked. When he went about the kitchen in his slippers he suggested motion on its easiest terms. He had eliminated every act in motion which might be exacting. If it was comfortable to droop at the shoulders and drag his feet he drooped at the shoulders and dragged his feet.

With his straw he came back to the range and plumbed the depths of the apple which simmered in its own juices in its little pan.

"It ain't done yet," he said, when he had stuck in the broom straw and had withdrawn it several times. "It's fifteen minutes from being done."

"I never knew one to take so long to cook," said Sarah.

"You can't always tell about apples," said Simon. "There's a difference in the fire. We don't always have the same heat and they don't always do as fast as other times. Then there is a difference in apples. Some bake better than others."

It was amusing to see Simon's stratagem. Until he had cooked his apple he was a free soul. When once it was done he was given a mere respite. The time he could take in eating it was circumscribed. Then he was the prey of Sarah. A woman, no matter how tyrannous, always recognizes the paramount claim of a man's appetite. It is upon the fact that she at her kitchen range satisfies his appetite that she bases her whole empire of dominion over him.

When Simon established the habit of roasting or frying an apple after supper he established claim upon an hour of freedom which he might never have obtained otherwise. Sarah, a feministic tyrant, had to recognize the assertions of Simon's stomach. Simon was a good provider. There always was enough in the house in fact and prospect.

There was in Sarah's conception of life one great duty which a woman owed to a man who saw that the larder was full. That was to see that his stomach was full when he wanted to fill it.

The complete relations of the sexes, their obligations to each other in life, were thus revealed—that the man should keep the wood box and the pantry full, the smokehouse and the roothouse full, the roof entire and rain proof, and that the woman should keep the man's stomach full.

Therefore, when Simon stuck his broom straw into the apple and announced that it was not baked to his satisfaction he had the only assertion of his independence which he could have made successfully. Sarah had to recognize it.

She sat down again and Simon, with a sly grin at Arthur Arthur and me, took his chair.

"What did you think, Arthur," he asked, "made Hope have the bad time she had in that restaurant?"

"I know it had nothing to do with what she could have seen;" said Arthur, "and nothing to do with anything which was suggested by what was around her. She simply must have had an inexplicable revival of an unpleasant recollection, the stirring of something in her mind which disdressed her and made her show it physically. The fact that the two Japs came along had nothing to do with it, I am sure. That was merely a coincidence."

Simon took a dishcloth and, taking the pan off the stove, put his apple in a dish. Then he sat down and began to eat it, slowly, with a mind for mischievous delay.

Arthur looked at Sarah and I thought he had the same idea which gained a place in my mind. He looked at Sarah as if he were looking at a key with which he might unlock a door behind, which was an explanation of a puzzle which it would be important to solve.

"What do you think of it, Sarah?" he asked.

"I think Simon ought to eat his apple and I know he is going to bed," said Sarah.

HIS DOLORES

She Stepped Out of Her Gold Frame and Into Billy's Life

THOUGH it was a private exhibition held in a modest studio on an unfashionable side street, the growing fame of the young artist whose portraits were being shown for the first time had drawn an unexpected large attendance.

His sitters were there, with happy bands of friends; the critics were much in evidence; and moving slowly from canvas to canvas were several silent men of strong Hebraic features, whose presence, if he had but known it, stamped Dillingham, the artist, as not only arriving but arrived. They were astute dealers with eyes ever on the lookout for the new men, and the growing interest the greatest of them betrayed as he went from picture to picture was the greatest commercial tribute the artist had yet received.

Billy Carew, lured there despite his protests, because Ned Dillingham was his chum, backed into a corner and regarded with reproachful eyes the throng that ruthlessly trod upon his toes as it surged around him. Billy, as he freely assured any one who would listen, didn't know a Rembrandt from a lithograph; and in this moment of discomfort he told himself that if the acquiring of such knowledge involved another experience like that of today he'd never possess it. His usual attitude toward Dillingham's art was one of easy tolerance. They had been at New Haven together, and Dillingham had not only been his classmate and roommate but on his football team. Gazing at Dillingham's bulging muscles, Billy forgave him his pictures, though he never ceased to wonder privately why Ned cared to produce them.

Much of the interest of today's visitors, he observed, centered on a canvas that faced him from the opposite wall. So large and so constant was the crowd around it that for some time he had only occasional glimpses of it as the groups broke and filled in again. In one of these he saw it was a portrait of a lady; in another that the lady was young, indeed very young—a mere girl; in a third that it was a portrait of an exceedingly pretty girl.

With this discovery Billy's drooping spirits revived. He liked to look at pretty girls, in frames or outside of them; he would have a look at this pretty girl, he decided, and then, pleasant thought, he would be able to tell Dillingham that he had seen one of his pictures, anyway, which was rather more than Ned would expect of him.

Resolutely he pushed through the crowd toward the picture and for a time hung on the outer rim of the wide circle before it, getting an excellent view of the nape of one stout lady's neck and of another's back hair, while the fiercely upstanding quill in the hat of a girl in front of him violently menaced his eyes. But, little by little, he was able to work his way to the canvas, until at last he stood directly in front of it and met the warm glance of a pair of painted eyes that seemed to look straight into his.

As he stared back Billy caught his breath. He appreciated none of the remarkable effects of light and shade which made the painting unique; he was blind to the charm of composition and color; but from the instant he cast his first glance at it the extraordinary vitality of the portrait caught and held him. He made no effort to analyze its effect. He only knew that he was looking at a wonderfully beautiful girl, so vivid, so alive against the neutral background of the canvas that for a wild second he almost expected to see her painted lips part in a smile of greeting.

Stunned by the wonder of her, he stood before her oblivious of time, or place, or surroundings. Then, jostled rudely by a fat old gentleman who desired to see her, too, he reluctantly yielded an inch of space and drew a deep breath. By Jove, if this was art, art was worth while. Mentally he took off his hat to Dillingham. He remembered how freely he had jumped on Ned's neck in practice games and was glad now he hadn't hurt him, though he had blithely ignored that possibility at the time.

The girl was dressed in a Spanish costume. In one hand she held an open fan. There was a red rose in her soft, lustrous, wavy black hair, worn Spanish style, with a high comb surmounting it, and a black lace mantilla was almost lost in shadow. But those eyes and that mouth——

"I beg your pardon, sir."

It was the voice of a ponderous person behind Mr. Carew, and it was addressing him with dignified authority.

"If, after this rather long interval, you will permit the rest of us to approach the picture——"

Billy stammered an apology and backed away. Whether he had been standing there a minute, an hour, or a year he neither knew nor cared. He only knew that strange things had happened to him during that time, however long or short it was, and that the thing to do next was to find out who she was and where she lived and all about her.

As he backed away he saw the crowd close in upon her hungrily, hiding her from his view, and he gloried in this tribute to her as if already she were his own. They all felt it, then, that mysterious thing, whatever it was, which had drawn him to her forever after once meeting her painted eyes. But then he heard snatches of their talk, and his lips curled in contempt. They were speaking of "composition" and of "color" and of "values," poor blind fools that they were, as if such things had anything to do with the soul that, looking out of her eyes, had awakened an eternal response in his own soul!

Straight as the homing pigeon flies he flew to Dillingham. He found that gentleman in the second of his two studio rooms, giving tea to a group of admiring friends and smiling fatuously over their tributes. They were all telling him how wonderful he was, and Dillingham, divided between the charms of their discourse and the claims of hospitality, had but an absent ear for Billy.

"Fine, old man!" said that youth with unexpected enthusiasm. "Great! Didn't know you could do it. And, say, who's the dark girl with the rose?"

The question, so put, seemed almost sacrilegious as he uttered it, but there was reverence in his heart as he hung upon Dillingham's answer. Dillingham's mind, however, was torn by the problem of whether Miss Allen had asked for one lump of sugar or two.

"Thanks, Billy," he said perfunctorily. And then to the lady who was "pouring" for him: "Ah, two, I think!"

Before Billy could repeat his inquiry it was answered by Peter Van Dorn, old beau and man about town, of whom it was said that in fifty years he had never missed an exhibition and had never bought a picture.

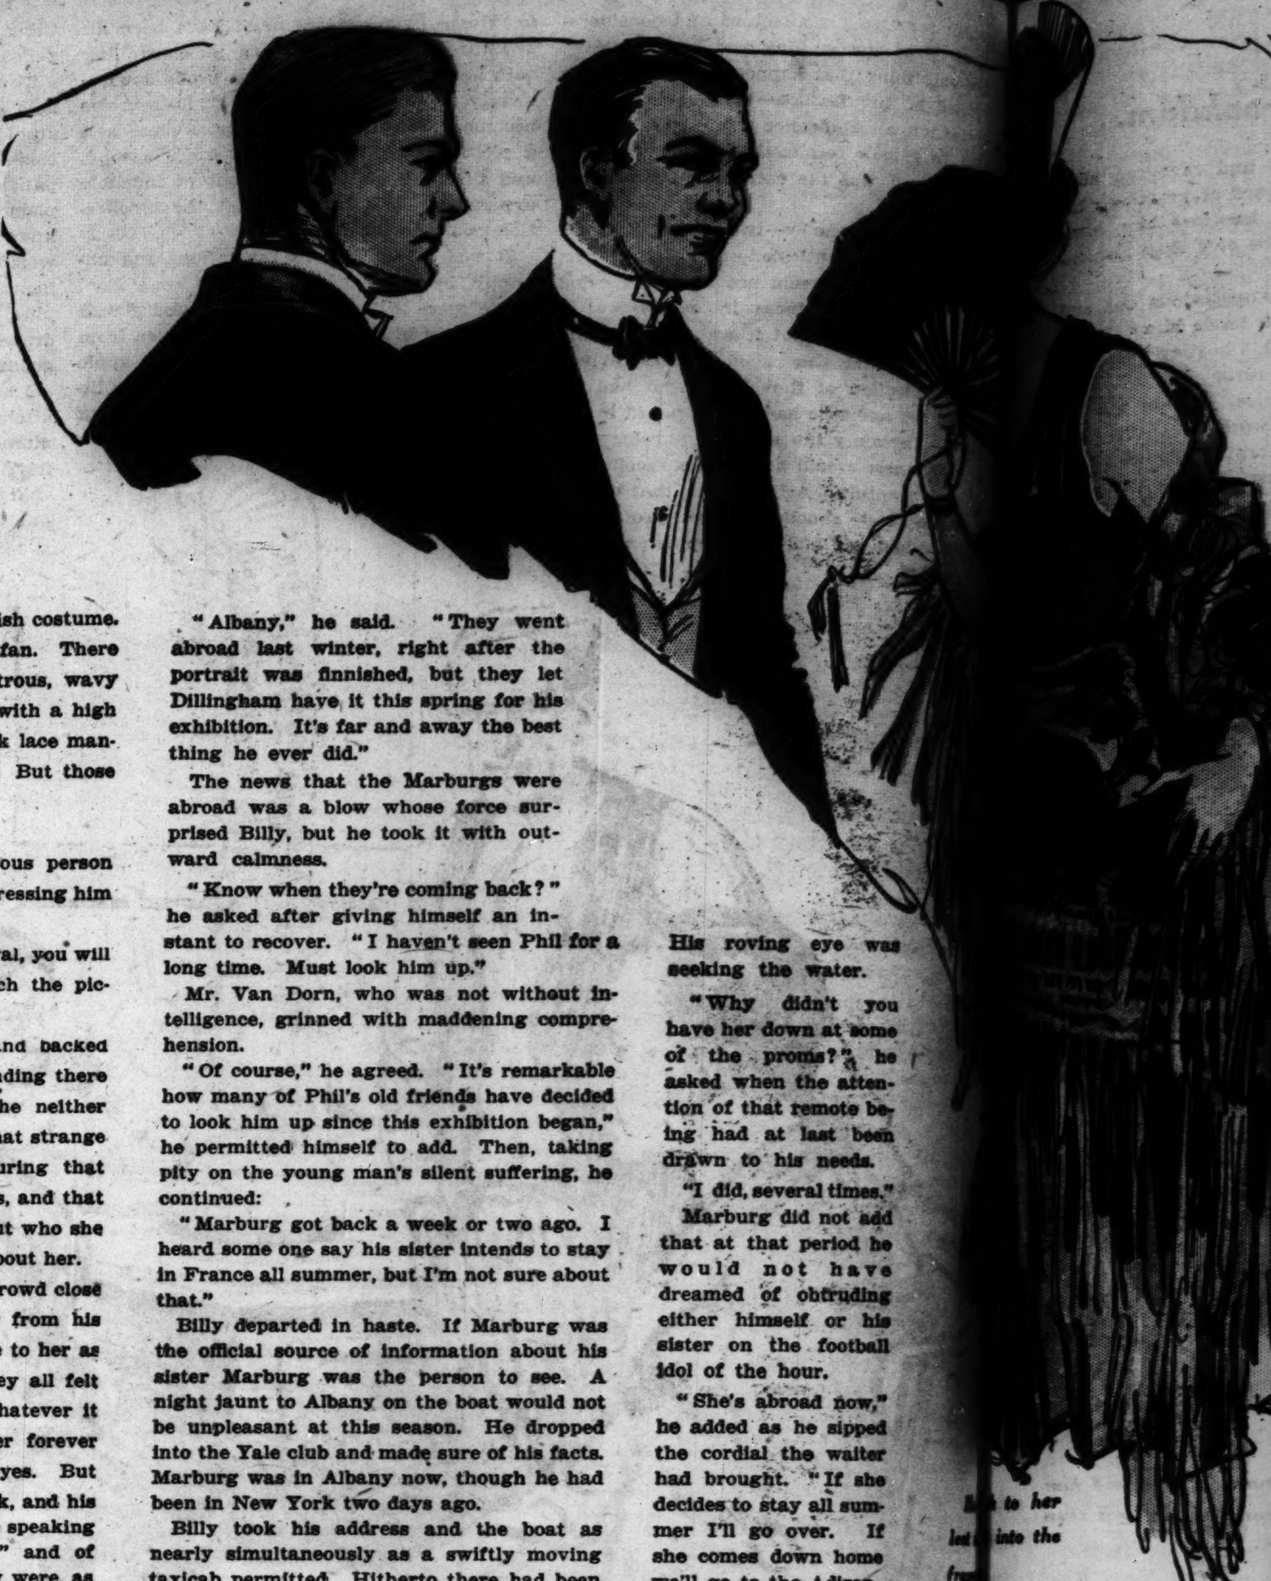
"It's Dolores Marburg," he said kindly. "Half Spanish, but looks the whole thing, trigged out in that Spanish fashion. Dolores to the life, too. It's got the very glint of her eyes. I'm delighted with it."

Dillingham, overhearing, added further enlightenment.

"Remember Phil Marburg at New Haven?" he asked. "Didn't know he had a sister, but he had, and last winter he had me do this because——"

"Where do they live?" Billy asked Van Dorn. "Marburg and his sister, I mean."

The old beau, who knew everything about every one and was an inveterate gossip, gave the information promptly.



"Albany," he said. "They went abroad last winter, right after the portrait was finnished, but they let Dillingham have it this spring for his exhibition. It's far and away the best thing he ever did."

The news that the Marburgs were abroad was a blow whose force surprised Billy, but he took it with outward calmness.

"Know when they're coming back?" he asked after giving himself an instant to recover. "I haven't seen Phil for a long time. Must look him up."

Mr. Van Dorn, who was not without intelligence, grinned with maddening comprehension.

"Of course," he agreed. "It's remarkable how many of Phil's old friends have decided to look him up since this exhibition began," he permitted himself to add. Then, taking pity on the young man's silent suffering, he continued:

"Marburg got back a week or two ago. I heard some one say his sister intends to stay in France all summer, but I'm not sure about that."

Billy departed in haste. If Marburg was the official source of information about his sister Marburg was the person to see. A night jaunt to Albany on the boat would not be unpleasant at this season. He dropped into the Yale club and made sure of his facts. Marburg was in Albany now, though he had been in New York two days ago.

Billy took his address and the boat as nearly simultaneously as a swiftly moving taxicab permitted. Hitherto there had been very little romance in his life, but now that it had come it had come suddenly and struck deep. He was actually a-quiver with the rapture of it, and the fact that he knew Marburg and could reach him so easily looked as if the gods were with him.

"She's what I've been waiting for all my life," he told himself. "And, thank God, I knew her the minute I saw her."

It was not difficult to get Marburg on the telephone when he reached Albany the next morning, and that young man, remembering Mr. Carew kindly, but without enthusiasm, was touched by the warmth of the latter's greeting when he came to Billy's hotel for dinner the same evening.

The host's vague memories of his guest had not misled him. Marburg proved to be a dark and silent youth whose strain of Castilian blood showed in the dignified hauteur of his manner. He had never gone in for athletics at Yale, and so he had never known Billy; but he had watched him on the gridiron with triumphant pride, and something of this old hero worship surged over him again as the two ate and drank and talked of the days five years ago.

They had a pleasant evening, and it was much to the credit of Billy Carew, who was not a diplomat, that his guest received no inkling during this reunion of his real purpose in renewing their slight acquaintance with such sudden fervor. It was not, indeed, until they were drinking their coffee that the name of Marburg's sister came up at all.

"Going to be around here this summer?" asked Billy with ostentatious ease. "If you are we might make some plans. I haven't quite decided what Ill do."

With the charm of the hour still upon him Marburg responded with unusual detail.

"I'd like to," he said cordially, "but I'm hanging on my sister's plans. We're all alone now," he added, "so we keep together as much as we can."

"Then you've got a sister?"

Billy's unconcern was almost too great. His roving eye was seeking the water.

"Why didn't you have her down at some of the proms?" he asked when the attention of that remote being had at last been drawn to his needs.

"I did, several times."

Marburg did not add that at that period he would not have dreamed of obtruding either himself or his sister on the football idol of the hour.

"She's abroad now," he added as he sipped the cordial the waiter had brought. "If she decides to stay all summer I'll go over. If she comes down home we'll go to the Adirondacks.

his mother had followed him a year ago, that he and Dolores had no brothers or sisters, and, most interesting fact of all, that they were twins. Deeply impressed by this, Billy regarded his host with added interest, almost with awe.

"By Jove," he ejaculated, "that's a close tie! Do you know when she's sick or in trouble or anything of that kind? They say the other twin can tell."

Marburg laughed a little, turning his wine glass slowly around and following its revolution with soft, unseeing black eyes. He was astonishingly like the portrait. This was one of the explanations of Billy's growing liking for him.

"She thinks she knows when anything's wrong with me," he said, "and once or twice she has proved it. Perhaps I'm less sensitive or less susceptible; the only thing I do is to look after her mighty carefully and see to it that she doesn't get sick or into trouble. And I can tell you one thing," he added and raised his eyes to Billy's with a sudden blaze in their somber depths, "I'm going to see to it that she doesn't marry the wrong man. Most of the crowd that's after her make me sick. I took her abroad last winter to get rid of one fellow. She didn't care for him, but she might have if I hadn't whisked her away in time."

"What's the matter with 'em all?" Billy asked with intense interest.

"O, lots of things—bad morals, bad manners, or bad blood; if it wasn't one thing it was another. The chap that gets her has got to be all right. By God, Carew," he exclaimed almost fiercely, "if a man married Dolores and put her through what some of the women I know are going through I believe I'd kill him!"

"Course you would!" corroborated Billy Carew buoyantly. "Exactly the right thing to do, too." His heart warmed to Marburg. He wanted to grasp his hand and tell him all and beg him to be at ease about Dolores' future, which was now assured. This being impracticable, he seized the glass of champagne that stood before him and, leaning forward, touched it to Marburg's.

"We're going to drink to the right man," he said firmly.

"The right man?" Marburg's attention had wandered. For a moment, while they sat silent, he had forgotten his own words. Now, recalling them, he laughed a little, self-consciously.

"Thanks," he said. "I don't often go into heroics, but so far, at least, Dolores' happiness seems to me a little more important than anything else on earth."

"You bet it is!"

Billy's acquiescence was not the easy, good natured tolerance of the guest who is giving a talkative host his head. There was something in the words that caught Marburg's attention; once caught, there was something in Billy's eyes that held it.

"But," he gasped, after a pregnant instant, during which the two men stared hard at each other, "you've never met Dolores. You've never even seen her!"

In his reply Billy admitted both the spoken and the unspoken charge.

"I know," he said, "I've never met her. But I've seen her, all right."

His manner as he spoke was almost fatuous. He had held himself in so long that now, in this sudden melting, he was like a snow man in the sun. To be talking it over at last with her brother—this was the next best thing to talking it over with her.

"I've seen her," he repeated, and stared before him with shining eyes. Marburg stared back curiously.

"Seen her?" he echoed. "Where? At New Haven?"

"No," Billy waved his hand with scorn, repudiating anything so remotely in the past as New Haven. "Here, in New York." And for Marburg's further enlightenment he added, "Her portrait, you know—by Dillingham."

Then, before his host could speak, much of what Billy had been feeling during the last fortnight poured forth in a rushing torrent of speech. At first Marburg tried to interrupt it; later he sat in constrained silence; and at last, bent forward with his head in his hands, he was apparently overcome by emotion.

In Billy's excited state this seemed at first quite natural. They were old classmates. They were discussing the woman who to both was the dearest woman in the world. Also, though Billy refused to let this touch more than the outer edge of his thought, they had been drinking champagne. The intensity of Marburg's feeling for his sister had been shown half an hour before in his sudden, almost melodramatic announcement that he would kill a man who made her unhappy.

Yet, looking at him more closely, Billy became conscious of an icy chill running the length of his spine, followed by a wave of hot, furious anger. For Marburg's eyes were hidden now; Marburg's shoulders were shaking; Marburg was laughing!

The unexpected dignity that sometimes fell upon Billy Carew, to the deep surprise of his friends, suddenly descended upon him. Very quietly he rose and looked down upon Marburg's bent form with cold and steady eyes.

"And now," he said, "I'm sure you'll excuse me if I rush off. I've an appointment at 3, and just four minutes to make it."

He was half way across the room before Marburg was able to catch up with him and grasp his arm. He was serious again, but there was still evidence of the continued presence of some extraordinary upheaval.

"Here, Carew, hold on!" he pleaded. "Don't go off like that. Let me explain!"

Billy turned and looked at him, and the cool dignity of the glance, instead of steadying Marburg, brought on another convulsive attack of what in a woman would have seemed incipient hysteria. Billy ground his teeth as he shook off his host's hand and strode toward the door, but Marburg caught his arm again and, with unexpected strength, dragged him back to their table. Fortunately, the place was almost empty; only two belated members besides themselves lingered in the quiet room whose calm was hardly disturbed by the little scuffle.

"O, Billy, forgive me," gasped Marburg, desperately, dropping into his chair as if his knees refused to hold him up; "but it's so awfully, awfully funny!"

Billy's anger rose and fell in surging waves as he stood above him. If Marburg was merely an ass, or if his champagne had gone to his head, one might overlook his conduct. Meantime, erect and silent, he awaited the promised explanation. It came.

"You see, B-Billy," stuttered Marburg, clinging to the intimacy of the name as a drowning man clings to a rope, "the portrait isn't Dolores at—at all. It's—O, O"—for the moment he was overcome again—"it's our grandmother!" he gasped at last, and rolled in his chair in helpless mirth.

In the next instant he made another wild grab at Billy's arm, but this time his victim was too quick for him, and while he was still wiping the happy tears from his eyes the outer door slammed and Billy Carew projected himself hurriedly into the street and also into the nearest taxicab.

"Central park," he directed the driver, briefly, and settled back to look his misery in the face.

He had to have a few minutes, he told himself, to think the thing over and pull himself together. At first his thoughts were in chaos. The disaster was so complete, so overwhelming, that he merely sat still and let alternate waves of disappointment and humiliation roll over him. But as the taxi turned into the park the peaceful greeting of waving treetops and long stretches of living green had their effect.

Insensibly he began to feel calm and soothed. He had come an awful cropper, there was no doubt of that. But he would set his teeth and make the best of it without whining. After a few minutes he ceased to think of Marburg or the merely embarassing features of the affair. The vital part of the whole experience, the only part that counted, was the terrible knowledge that the world did not hold her.

He had been in love, was still in love, for that matter, with a girl who had not been a girl for fifty years; who long since had been laid, an old woman, in her lonely grave. He had been in love with Marburg's grandmother! No wonder Marburg had laughed! He was able now to grin sardonically at himself.

Of course it was all clear enough as he thought it over. Marburg's sister had been named for her Spanish grandmother, and the portrait had been painted from some old photograph or daguerreotype as a gift to the namesake and granddaughter of the first Dolores. That was what Ned had been trying to tell him when he was interrupted the day of the exhibition. It was the first Dolores old Peter Van Dorn had known in the days of his youth.

O, it was all clear enough, and he would have learned the facts at once if he had not been so secretive. Well, it was a lonely world without his Dolores and all she had represented. For weeks she had not been out of his mind for an instant. Now he must dismiss her forever and try to forget the monstrous joke life had played on him.

His poise restored, and his mind changed from one of hot rebellion to a miserable acceptance of the inevitable, he ordered the chauffeur to leave him at his office. Work, he knew, was the solace he needed. He would drown himself in it.

The expression on his young face as he approached his desk made his stenographer, after one awestruck look at him, withdraw into herself and pull down her blinds. But as he settled into his swivel chair and swung resolutely toward the pile of mail awaiting him she emerged a trifle and presented him with the latest official bulletin.

"There are four telephone messages, Mr. Carew," she gurgled. "Mr. Van Dorn wants to see you tomorrow morning about his summer house. The rector of St. John's called you up about the east side property. Your uncle sent word that the Varick street deal is going through—and, let me see, there was one more." She fumbled among her notes. "O, yes, here it is. Mr. Marburg telephoned from the Yale club that he expected you to dine with him and his sister at the Plaza at 8 tomorrow night."

"The devil he does," muttered her employer with poignant bitterness.

He recalled the vigor of his words somewhat shamefacedly at five minutes of 8 the next evening, when, in the sitting room of Marburg's suite at the Plaza, he waited for Miss Marburg to appear.

In the meantime things had happened. Marburg had written him a note, repeating his invitation and skillfully wording it in such a way that a refusal would seem actually boorish. Moreover, he himself had experienced a certain change of heart. That he had acted like a fool could not fairly be laid at Marburg's door. The best way to down the specter that grinned between them was to see Marburg once more, meet his sister, be agreeable, and then forget them both. Now that they had met it was Marburg who seemed self-conscious and oddly ill at ease.

"We're going to dine alone up here," he said, "we three. So I've persuaded Dolores, as a favor to me, to masquerade a bit."

"Masquerade?" asked Billy, puzzled. The next minute he was on his feet, thunderstruck, staring.

For the door at the far end of the room had opened and the girl of the portrait was coming toward them, as if at last she had stepped out of her gold frame and into Billy Carew's life. The smile the portrait had promised was on her lips, and she was walking with the lithe, undulating grace of the Andalusian. In another instant he was bowing before her, holding her hand, and her dark eyes, the wonderful eyes of the portrait come to life, were deep in his. When he was able to speak it was to Marburg that he turned. He dared not speak to her lest she should vanish into her frame.

"But—but you said," he babbled almost incoherently, "that it was your grandmother!"

Dolores laughed.

"O, it's that portrait again!" she exclaimed in mock despair. "I knew it when Philip made me wear these things."

"It's—it's marvelous," stammered Billy. "I simply can't take it in."

He was still holding her hand. Very gently she took it from him and unfurled the fan of the portrait, waving it slowly back and forth.

"Philip is never tired of proving how exactly grandmamma and I are alike," she went on. "That's why he had her portrait painted from an old miniature and her costume copied for me. Is there a wager on it this time?" she asked her brother. Billy answered her question.

"Call it a stake," he begged. "The biggest stake of my life."

Her eyes widened.

"As big as that?" she cried with interest. "Which of you has won it?"

"That's for you to decide," said Billy.

Dolores looked at him, then at her brother, and the royal spirit of Spanish hospitality stirred in her.

"Whatever it is," she declared firmly, "I decide in favor of Mr. Carew."

Marburg laughed.

"That settles it, Billy," he said. "Take my sister—in to dinner.

Lydia's Joe—

by Jack Lait

Another of the Series Recalling and Revealing High Lights in Crookdom.

LOUIS AND CARLOS SISCOVITCH, or Susicovitch, alias Grandi, were Russian immigrants who had settled in St. Louis and learned to practice the profession of barbering. Surely no meaner start could be pictured for a pair destined to become historical in the loftiest chapters of forgery's colorful annals. Not only did they become international swindlers, stars of episodes dealing in huge sums, but they contributed to crime an institution.

Much like a coffee house in old England where Shakespeare and his roistering, brilliant companions hobnobbed; like the American bar in Paris, founded by "Piano Charlie" Bullard, a thief, which became the rendezvous of spendthrift tourists from every speck on the globe; somewhat like Wallick's, where notables of all the night lives of all centers forgathered—so became the saloon under the old Booth's theater, in New York, where the Siscovitch brothers, after they had become notorious forgers and associates and accomplices of such men as "Dutch" Becker, "Little Joe" Elliott, and Adam Worth, established a world retreat and headquarters for the headline swindlers of their generation.

There the famous forger on a holiday, much like the cocky actor of a late evening after his performance gathers with his kind and swells himself in the papier maché café of after theater life, "showed off" and pompously "talked shop" with understanding souls, his brethren of the "work," bound to him by common interests and ideals. It was in this place that Becker, with his glass before him, would draw from his waistcoat pockets the properties wherewith he would, before the bulging eyes of his envying satellites, make of a tiny square of blank paper a 2 cent postage stamp, colored and drawn and edged to imitate perforation, so nearly perfect that it would successfully challenge inspection—and which he then gummed to an envelope which he mailed to some forging friend in a foreign port "on business."

They were a gaudy lot, operating under conditions which made their success reasonably possible, before the Pinkertons had worked out the intricate systems of defense for financial institutions and protection against organized professional dealers in spurious "paper." Forging is today nearly extinct. Save for a few stray upstarts who now chance cheating a careless individual, this style of thievery is de trop. "Heavy tricks" are now rarely attempted. But in those days "layers down," the presenters, were toiling with both hands, one hand "pushing the phony" and the other "raking the green."

Among the forgers of securities and instruments none was more skillful or distinguished, perhaps, than Joe Chapman, who had been a copper plate engraver of high order before the temptations of quick, easy, and "important" money had swerved him to apply his talents into criminal avenues. Chapman married Lydia Bonham, a New York girl with a shady though brief "past," one of the most beautiful women ever known to the cognoscenti of cold, commercial crime. Chapman was a man of handsome presence, tailored with distinction, his impressive beard trimmed to fill out an exterior which suggested dignified prosperity; he had fine features and the demeanor of gentility. He was a patron of arts, lived sedately in a brown stone dwelling near Central park, drove in his own barouche, and spent his winters in Florida or Italy when he was not in a penitentiary.

He was essentially a chamber worker, having little of the courage which makes a successful criminal whose rôle predisposes contact with those whom he elects to fleece. His forgeries were painfully and punctiliously created in his "studio" at home and others carried his goods to market.

Chapman had but one vice—forgery; and but one passion—Lydia.

When the ill-fated voyage to Turkey, which has been touched on in earlier stories about Adam Worth, the man who stole the Gainsborough; "Little Joe" Elliott, husband of Kate Castleton and international crook; and "Dutch" Becker, the greatest of all forgers, was planned, Worth laid out the operations and peregrinations, and Elliott, Becker, Chapman, Carl Siscovitch, and another "layer down" started forth to issue and utter false London letters of credit. Lydia was left behind, in London, where she had quarters on Brompton road and lived as Mrs. Joseph Brown.

Chapman was arrested before the rest of the gang had been caught, and he made a craven confession, giving information on which the others were taken. For this Siscovitch and Elliott tried to kill him in the Constantinople jail.

Word reached Mrs. Chapman, who at once communicated with Worth, and the two hastened to Smyrna. Lydia, through her charms, won her way into the soft susceptibilities of the guards. She was planning to "double cross" Worth and all the prisoners excepting her husband, plotting to "spring" only Chapman. The plan involved slipping ropes and tools to the others, then having Chapman inform against them in time to prevent their escape, for which his pardon was to have been recommended. The trap was a boomerang. Elliott had learned of it, and, knowing that police would await them the following night at the foot of the wall, hurriedly made his escape that night, with Becker, Siscovitch, and the fifth man, leaving Chapman asleep in another part of the prison, where he had been secluded to save him from the vengeance of his quondam "pals."

Mrs. Chapman had, meantime, returned to Paris, all arrangements on her part having been completed. To her amazement the others in time made their way to Paris, and her Joe was still incarcerated and doomed to serve his seven years and to suffer a hearty flogging, moreover, because he had named the wrong time in his exposure of the others' plans.

Worth furnished an establishment for Mrs. Chapman in Paris and ordered Becker and Elliott to live there, to cut down his expenses. Then followed the inexplicable romance between Lydia and "Little Joe"—inexplicable except for one of two hypotheses: that the dashing little thief fascinated her because he had all the qualities of bravado and braggadocio that her husband lacked, or that Elliott, nursing a hatred against Chapman, who had betrayed him, and Lydia, who had attempted to, deliberately set out to steal Chapman's wife, thus to revenge himself on both.

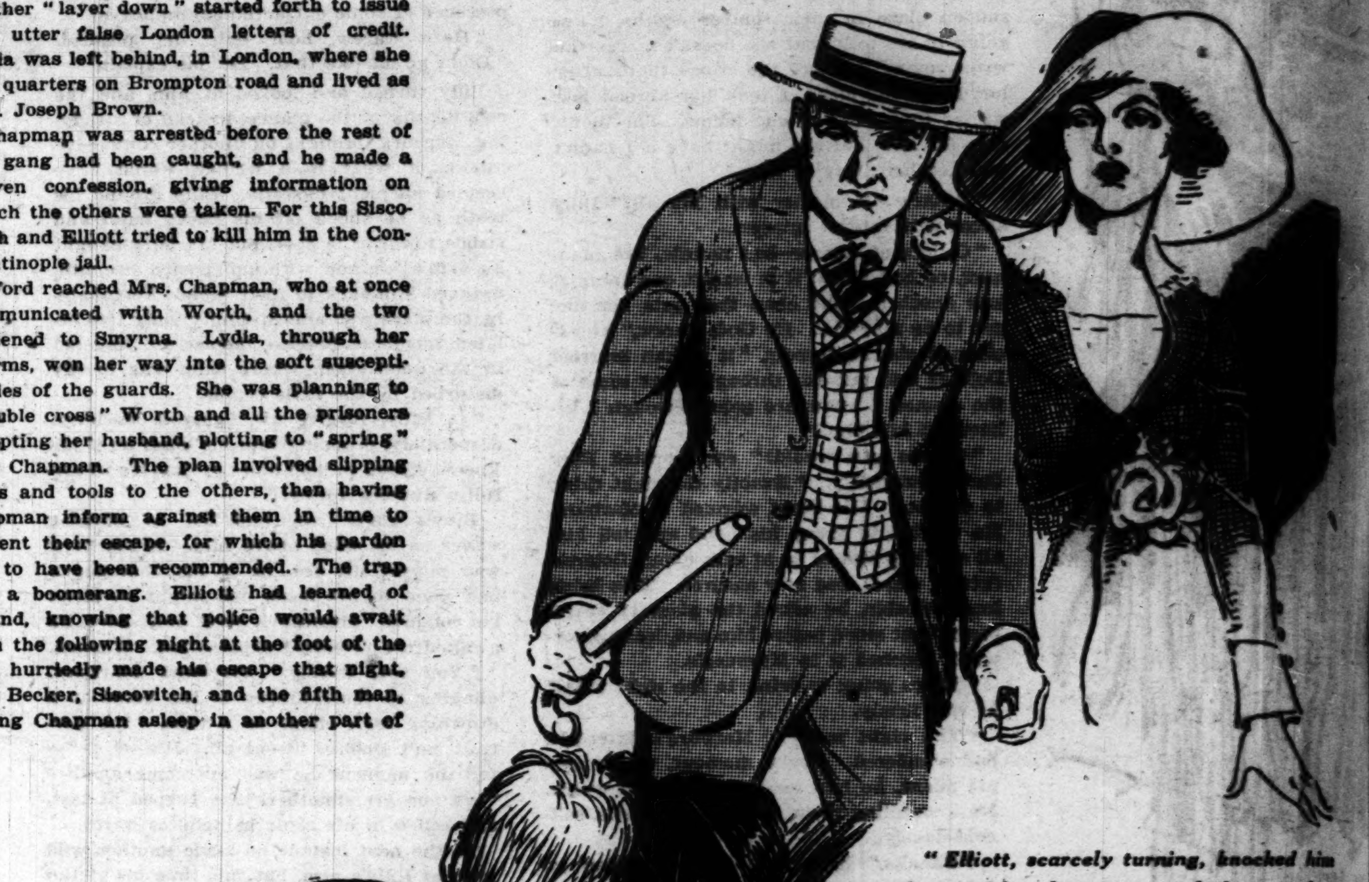
At all events it soon became common knowledge in inner crookdom that Elliott had struck up a lively romance with the "jail widow" of his former associate. And, one morning, twelve hours after Elliott and Becker had departed for Germany to again scatter spurious collateral, she was found dead, poisoned.

Thousands of dollars' worth of jewels which Chapman had bought for her in the early days of his adoration had disappeared. Elliott and "the Dutchman" both stood trial for the robbery and murder, and both were acquitted through the testimony of an American physician of malodorous record, who testified as an expert that she had died of heart failure. Later the jewels reappeared, one by one, and were pointedly traced as having come from the hands of Elliott, who was an unscrupulous rascal of most pronounced extremes, on whose fingers were the stains of safe blowing, burglary, forgery, highway robbery, mayhem, and, undoubtedly, murder.

Chapman in time staggered out of the Turkish prison, a shattered, almost blind, wreck. For days he hounded the grave of his wife in Paris, kissing the grass on the mound and feeding it with his tears. Then he sneaked to New York, where he was soon in the gutters, and where he died, blubbering and blabbering, a maudlin lunatic with a broken heart.

Once again, only, he had met Elliott. It was on the street near Herald square. Chapman, in rags, approached the little dandy, who was crossing the street with his beautiful second wife, a girl Elliott had "picked up" in a Paris café after Kate Castleton had been driven to divorce and renounce him. Chapman mumbled a word of greeting. Elliott, scarcely turning, knocked him down with a heavy cane of the sort then fashionable.

Chapman, despite his inglorious end and those propensities which made him despised by his fellows, was in his heyday looked up to as a scientific operator beyond even Becker in some specialties. Becker was his superior at freehand work, but Chapman was unequaled as a forging chemist. He could restore the most delicate tints to safety papers after erasures, and no paper was proof against his skill.



"Elliott, scarcely turning, knocked him down with a heavy cane of the sort then fashionable."

He originated another manner of work. He could fill in the infinitesimal perforations in checks or drafts such as are punched through the paper with "check protectors." Incredible as it may appear, he could "doctor up" these holes so that the alteration defied microscopic search. If the numerals were "shredded," or so made that filling in was impossible, he could and did cut a whole patch out, insert another with the figures he desired pierced therein, the whole done so that no eyes could discern the manipulation.

Because of Chapman's well known weakness as a "squealer" he was seldom allowed to know the identity of the men who presented his forgeries. Negotiating through a middleman, such as Worth, Chapman would prepare his art works and receive from the middleman about 50 per cent of the face value of the forgeries.

The "broker," whose business it was to handle the forger on one hand and the "layer down" on the other, received 25 per cent—and he earned it, if such endeavors may be regarded as meriting earnings.

His principal cause for worry, after he had procured the raised or forged paper, was to see that the proceeds thereof came into his hands. A man who will go into the profession of cashing criminally prepared securities or orders will steal from his friends as readily as from strangers. And it was this man into whose hands must come first the money in the transaction.

Therefore the middleman either took the risk of becoming involved in the event of a slip-up by standing somewhere near enough to watch the presenter, or he engaged spies, in which case he took the hazard of letting another thief into his scheme, adding another who must share in the loot, and chancing the possibility that this one and the other might conspire to rob both him and the other principal, the forger.

Presenters ranged from youths who could pass as messenger boys or errand boys to men who could pose as prosperous business men. Elliott was a famous "layer down," being possessed of smooth manners, glib talk, and an aptitude for appearing at ease in the tensest circumstances. Becker, who was clumsy of gait and short of vocabulary, was, at the same time, also a successful presenter, disarming suspicion by his very awkwardness and ingenuousness of approach. Becker was one of the few wizard forgers who would also take a hand at cashing the paper—he liked it, its dangers and its excitement; and he was honest with his gangs, always dividing even when he did the whole of the work, from making a check to bringing in the currency.

The more common methods of swindling by this system were draft raising or altering, forging depositors' signatures and indorsements, and gaining the confidence of bank officials so as to enable the obtaining of money on drafts, checks, or notes totally bogus.

Draft raising, the simplest and most common form, was operated thus: A purchased from a country bank a draft or drafts for small amounts, which he delivered to B, the middleman, who turned them over to C, who erased the ink lines and inserted the word "hundred" or "thousand" after the original small amount, always less than $10, filled in perforations and punched in new ones to match the false new amounts, then returned the falsified papers to B, who delivered them to D, the presenter.

D, by false representations, perhaps by forged letters of introduction, had obtained an introduction to a bank official, deposited the raised drafts, and waited a few days. Then he would present a small check for certification to see whether any suspicion had arisen. If not, he then drew all but a few dollars of his deposit, had the check certified, cashed it at another bank, and departed for a distant city. All this had to be done between the first of one month and the first of the next, within which time the forgery would not be likely to come to light.

The second method was much less complicated, but brought smaller returns. It involved merely getting some blank checks of the sort used by a certain depositor, then procuring a genuine check for purposes of copying the signature and learning the manner of filling in checks by that depositor, then forging "bearer" checks against that depositor's account and presenting them at the paying teller's window, usually in the rush hour. If a teller challenged a check the presenter either escaped as hurriedly as he could or gave the teller a telephone number as the one where the signer could be found to verify it; in the latter case an accomplice would answer at the given number and state that he was the depositor and that the check was sound.

Forgers practiced, too, a system of rifling letter boxes and mail bags, stealing checks and drafts, erasing the names of payees and inserting the word "Bearer." These checks, of course, were genuine except as to the altered beneficiary and seldom were questioned.

These were but the kindergarten styles of swindling, however. Such masters as Becker, Chapman, Elliott, the Siscovitch brothers, George Wilkes (one of the greatest of forgers), James Cregan, Jack Brush, "Dr." John Doyle, James Farrell, Alonzo J. Whiteman, Bob Knox, Charlie Melino, F. H. Crosby, Mike Lehr ("Jim the Penman"), Richard O. Davis, Max Steel, Leroy Channing Shear, Adam Keith, J. H. Stoddard, Herman Valentine, and Joe Adams "shot" for huge stakes with forged bonds, stocks, letters of credit for large sums, negotiable bills of lading and warehouse receipts, and all manner of giltedge securities.

Becker it was who, on blank parchment, made, by hand, spurious government bonds which were cashed on sight by bank tellers. Chapman was given a block of stolen blank letters of credit of Coutts' bank, London, and filled in $40,000 worth in one day, all of which were turned into continental gold. Whiteman operated like a millionaire with forged stocks and bonds, maintaining an office on Wall street for months and doing a public business with them.

Munroe Edwards, George Engles, George T. McDonnell, the Bidwell brothers, and Edwin Noyes Hills flooded England with Bank of England forged securities and were brought to book only because of a mistake in a date on one of the instruments. They got money by pledging their handiwork for loans of large figures. Engles and both Bidwells died paupers. Hills reformed after a prison "stretch" and ended his career while making a scant living by selling paper covered copies of a book written by the Bidwells.

Wilkes died in the charity ward of Bellevue hospital, a shabby finish for a man who had engaged whole floors of costly hotels while touring with his high flying gang of forgers and utterers, including Andrew Roberts, Val Gleason, Henry Cleary, Walter Sheridan (the most famous "layer down" that ever lived), the Siscovitch brothers, Al Wilson, W. P. Bartlett, Edward Burns, Steve Broadwell ("the man with the cough"), Chapman, Elliott, and Becker. Steve Raymond, another of the crack forgers, died on the street in New York. Cregan died a tramp in Nice. Sam Lobley, who cashed a $27,000 forgery against the Equitable Life Insurance company, died an invalid after eight years in Sing Sing. Brush and Shear, freehand experts, disappeared after long prison terms. Charles J. Everhart, alias "Marsh Market Jake," an old school check swindler of prominence, died in a poorhouse.

The new methods of bank protection swept down upon the forger hordes, and in a brief period the penitentiaries were alive with the best of them. Whole groups were corralled, and it may be cited as conclusive evidence of the wiping out of organized forgery that the most expert of the principals were responsible for imprisoning accomplices, as follows: Becker, 8; Wilkes, 10; Brush, 5; Doyle and Farrell, 6; Whiteman, 8; Lehr, 4; Meline, a unique swindler of the younger set that was prospering about the time that the first lot began to grow old, 9; Chapman, the most dangerous "inside man" ever known to the craft, and referred to by his professional intimates as "Joe Dynamite," 20.

In Every Town

by ONEY FRED SWEET

A Handful of Veterans Have Waited to Pass on the Connecting Threads.

THE boys have been coming home fast, and you can see most any kind of a uniform on Main street nowadays. I guess it's the same all over the country. Chuck Haines was one of the first to show up again. Chuck was drafted late and he was wearing a campaign hat and cloth leggings, and he hadn't taken the pains to have his overcoat altered so it would fit, but being one of the first ones back, it didn't make any difference. When he stood out in front of the cigar store he looked mighty classy to the home folks passing by.

Then they began coming back with green hat cords and red and pink and white. Jim Hamilton came back with an officer's cap on, and the peak of it was so low over his eyes that he had to lift his chin back when he looked at anything. Ed Knill, who used to work in the postoffice, came breezing back in a natty sailor suit. And finally there drifted in those who wore the spiral leggings and the jaunty, foreign looking caps—the boys who'd been clear overseas. Like every other town in the U. S. A., I don't care how small or how isolated, we began to take on a military aspect. We found ourselves rubbing elbows with aviators and tankers and throwers of hand grenades. And it was all the more noticeable because we'd gone along rather drab when it came to clothes.

The bunch didn't start to work right away. The old jobs were going to be tame for awhile, and the boys seemed to want to adjust themselves first. They'd hung out in Dentley's cigar store before they went away, and they enlivened the joint with their presence when they got back. There wasn't a one of 'em that didn't say the old town looked better to them than any place they'd been, and they'd been every place.

Here they were—back from Texas and Georgia, back from scouring the Atlantic, back from European trips. And naturally they gathered together as the age of youth had gathered them together before, but they were resplendent now with their buttons and badges and bars, and their comradeship was the stronger because of the experience they had shared.

You see how it was. All of a sudden we had a 1919 model G. A. R. For so many, many years the old boys seemed to think they had a corner on the war stuff. They had made Atwell's shoe repairing shop down on the side street their rendezvous ever since pioneer days. In there they had gone over and over the dope of fifty years ago, and the dust had settled on the shelves and the floors sagged along with their own decline.

They had the smug idea that the war they had fought in was the last one. They had a notion that they had made about all the history for the country that was ever going to be made. There were just a few of them that lingered. They didn't scuffle with one another. To preserve their energy they leaned on their canes even as they sat. They had reached a stage where for stretches no word was spoken at all. They hobbled faithfully each day to their chairs, wondered how it ever happened the Republican party got out of power, watched each other go to pieces.

Not for twenty years had they drawn any discrimination because of the merit of service records. They were willing now to let each other get away with anything—so many of the old bunch that once took issue were waiting over in the cemetery for reveille—but no man ever hung out in the dingy place that didn't wear a bronze button on the lapel of his coat. The old G. A. R.!

So there's the two places in town now—the shoe repairing shop on the side street, where there is left but a decrepit guard, and the cigar store, where everybody passes and where the blood of youth throbs impulsive under the new style American uniforms.

Think of the old bunch and you think of Old Ed Bennett, with his John Brown whiskers and his crooked cane and his lowered shoulders and his head cocked to one side when he occasionally makes an effort to hear what's being said in the world of now. He makes you think of Grant and "hard tack" and torch light parades, and Gettysburg, and "Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground" and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching."

Think of the new bunch and you think of Tom O'Donnell, with his ruddy, unlined face, and his close cropped hair, and his thrown back shoulders, and his loud voice. He makes you think of Pershing and trenches and airplanes and tanks, Chateau Thierry, "Good-by, Broadway, Hello France," and "Over There."

The old bunch had always been strong for their "camp fire," given along about Washington's birthday night in the opera house above the drug store. The women always buzzed around in white aprons those nights, and the children scampered across the floor between the two red hot stoves, and there was the smell of coffee and baked beans.

You always knew what story T. I. Waite was going to tell—the one about his being where the bullets were thickest, "under the ammunition wagon." And Mr. Ezra Ferman always read a poem that he'd written himself. And Henry Meyer led a chorus he'd directed every Thursday night at his house for a month that sang "Just Before the Battle, Mother." Henry's voice was cracked and the meter in Ezra's poem halted, but they put poetry into life, those camp fire programs did. And I guess it was pretty bleak in the section during pioneer days—lots of prairie and wind and snow and away off from the railroad.

Those old fellows and their wives seemed to be of one type, somehow. They all had about the same social standing in the community. Few of 'em had much in the way of this world's goods. Either the war had made 'em sort of alike, or they had been alike before they'd gone into the war.

But this new bunch—either the fellows around were in the army or they weren't, according to what the government had said. The army just took 'em all, rich and poor, high and low. And if they continue the camp fires, this new bunch, there's going to be a mixture of women with aprons on cooking beans and coffee such as the community never saw before.

I think the camp fire idea for this year was on Old Ed Bennett's mind the afternoon he left the shoe repairing shop early for home. Ed usually takes the shorter cut down the back street, but this particular afternoon he came around past the cigar store. It was a thawy afternoon, threatening to turn cold, with the wind in the northwest. Ed stood for a minute or two in front of the cigar store, sort of peering in—peering in on the new G. A. R. that leaned gracefully against the counters, that talked so loud, that was so throbbing with life.

And as the old man stood there Tom O'Donnell saw him through the frosted pane and came outside.

It was a shame that Tom should ever lay aside his uniform. He knew just how to set the cap low over one eye, how to wrap the puttees. Such campaigning as he had gone through had only given an added brightness to his blue, black lashed eyes, a pinker glow to his cheeks. He smiled at the old man—a smile that revealed teeth that were flawless and gums that were red. He smiled as youth in its glory and strength smiles at toddling infancy and leaning old age.

Ed smiled back—tried to smile back in comrade fashion, tried to say something slangy that both could appreciate. But the slang that Old Ed knew, snappy enough, perhaps, for the "'60s," was quaint by two generations and it failed to register.

The old man sized up the comfortable, strangely cut, olive drab overcoat and the heavy, thick soled boots.

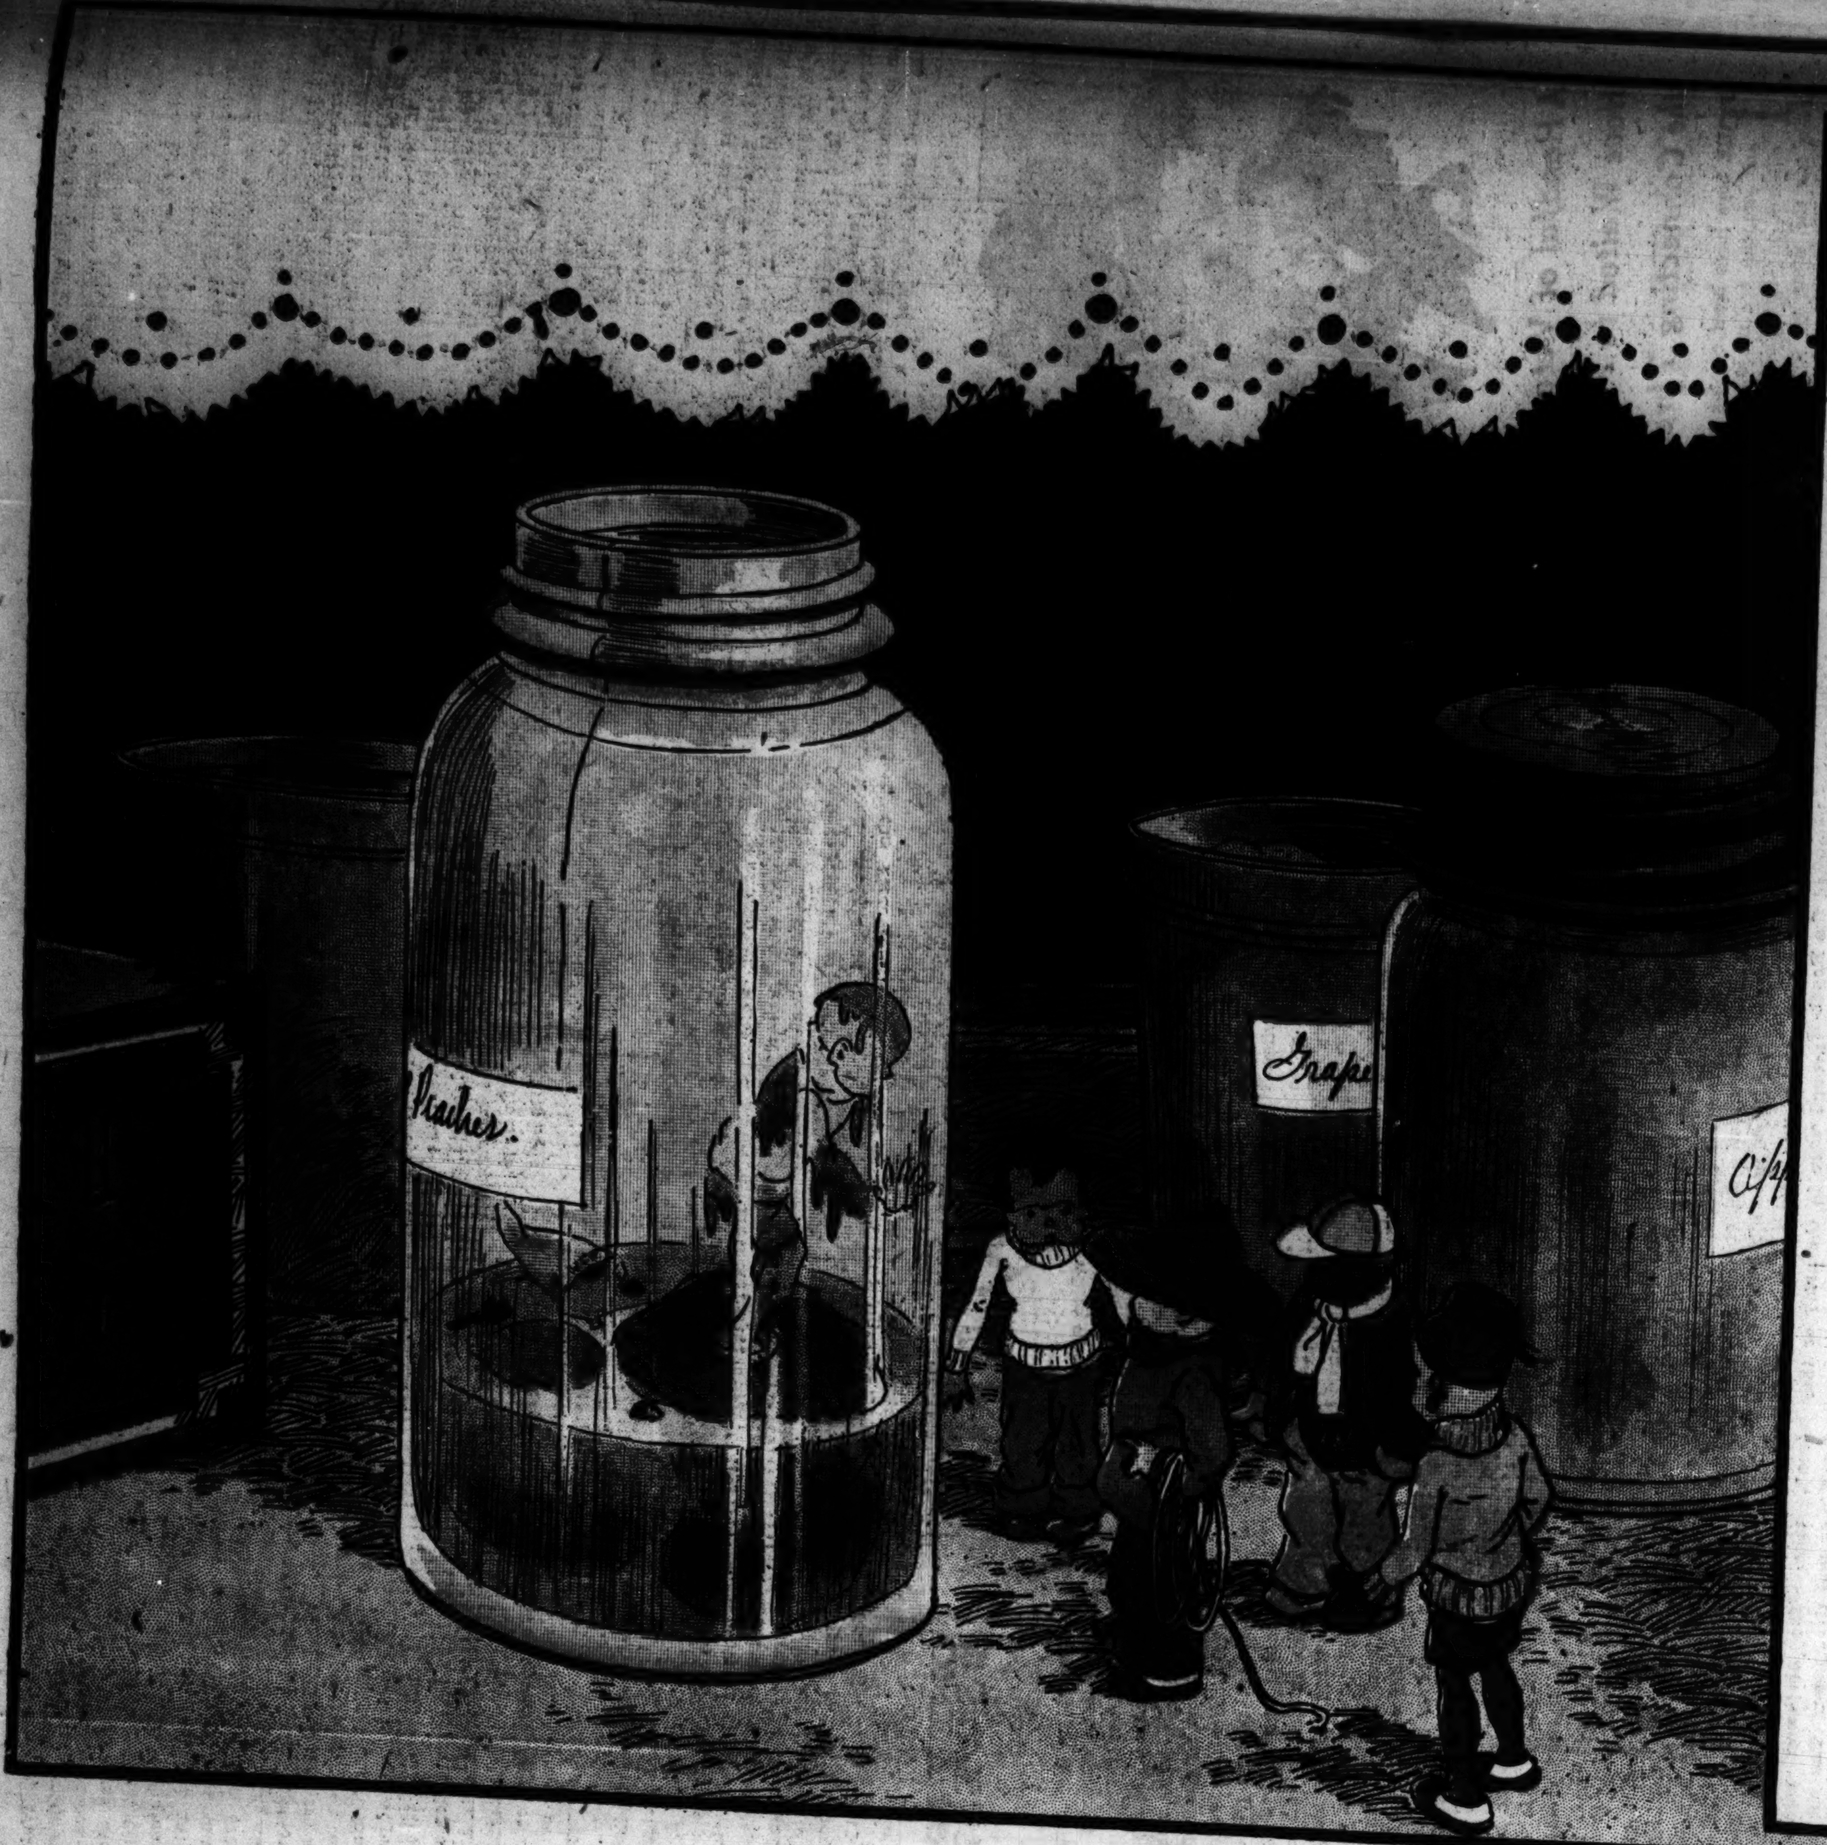
He had been a dashing cavalryman, Ed had. I guess his first impulse was to want to reminisce a bit, but he checked himself. It was a new age. For fifty years he had lived in those memories; they had been sweet. But these youngsters who had come back had fought high in the air and deep under the sea. Everything had been clear cut until the last few years. Now things were getting cobwebby. These boys coming back had brought with them a smack of England, of France. He could not get their conversation. Their freshness and vitality gave him a pang.

The old man stretched one hand toward the sidewalk as he smiled. He was showing Tom how high he was as he remembered him best. And then he cocked his head to one side to catch what Tom had to say in reply. Even by cocking his head he could not understand, but he smiled as if he did.

And then the old man buttoned his overcoat about his throat and took a grip on his cane as if to be on his way. He seemed not quite sure of the direction he wished to take. The northwest wind came keen around the corner. The old man wavered. He slipped into Tom's arms. And Tom's arms were so strong. The smile on Tom's face faded. They took care of him, the boys of that new bunch. They got him home—the home where he had all his relics, the home where for some time he had tried to make things go alone. And there was no gulf of years between him and the new bunch as the wintry night came on. They were pals. They had taken up the country's battle where he had left off. A new age, maybe, but fundamentally they had everything in common. There was a picture of Abraham Lincoln in the room where he went to sleep.

Old Ed Bennett had typified the G. A. R. in the town. And with his passing you might say the local organization went out. There were a few who still hobbled down to the shoe repairing shop; there are always a few leaves that linger on the tree late after summer has gone. But Ed had been so often post commander, had attended all the reunions, had always been in evidence on Decoration day, had been such a power in the Republican party, had helped his fellows get pensions, had retained such a clear idea of what had happened when the union had been threatened. He had been the spirit of the gatherings at the shoe repairing shop.

Doc Welty, the corner druggist, says that it wasn't the patent medicines that kept Ed on earth the last months, particular patron though he was of cures for fleshly ills that crowded. He says that after a reign of fifty years Ed felt he had to bequeath his place in the town to some one worthy, and that he simply kept alive on his nerve—that he hung on until Tom O'Donnell came home.



THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE DUNCE TAKES A TUMBLE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"CRICKETY!" exclaimed the Dunce one Saturday afternoon as he dropped into a chair before the Teenie Weenie fireplace, "I can't get anybody to do nothin'."

"What's wrong, Dunce?" asked the Lady of Fashion, looking up from her sewing.

"Ah, I want to take a walk or somethin' and everybody is busy or somethin'."

"Why don't you get Gogo to go along? He always likes to take a walk," smiled the little lady.

"Ah, he an' the Cowboy an' the Turk are buildin' a fly trap over at the tool house. The Sailor and the Scotchman are helpin' the Cook get a spoiled potato out of the cellar. Paddy Pinn, the Doctor, the General and the Old Soldier are havin' a meetin' at the hospital and the Clown and the Poet are out in the back yard talkin' nonsense with a sparrow," growled the Dunce.

"I'd love to take a walk today, but I promised to mend this dress for Mrs. Lover and it has to be finished by 4 o'clock, as she and Mr. Lover and the Twins are invited over to the squirrel's house for dinner. Why don't you go over to the laundry and try Chuck and Zip? Maybe one of them would like to take a walk."

"Jinks!" shouted the Dunce, "I never thought about the Chinaman and Zip," and jumping up he hurried over to the old tea pot, where he found Zip toasting his shins before the fire.

The Chinaman had just gone over to the hospital to deliver some shirts to the Doctor, but Zip was ready for a walk, and in a few minutes he slipped on his sweater and the two Teenie Weenies set off together.

There was one place the Teenie Weenies loved to visit best of all and that was any big house where big people lived, for there were always so many big and wonderful things to see.

The two little fellows made their way straight to the nearest big house, and crawling under the door they began to investigate the place.

"Let's crawl up on that," said the Dunce, pointing to a shelf high above their heads, "and maybe we can find somethin' good to eat."

After a hard climb the two Teenie Weenies landed on the shelf, but they found nothing but glass fruit jars which towered above their heads.

"S-s-s-say, Zip!" said the Dunce as he nodded his head in the direction of one of the jars, "that jar hasn't got any top on it and there are pickled peaches in it. I've just been thinkin' that we could get up on the shelf above and you could hold a string while I slid down in the jar and got some of the fruit."

After a long hunt the two Teenie Weenies found a piece of string, and climbing up to the shelf the Dunce started to slide down into the jar. He got nearly half way down when the string snapped and the little chap dropped with a loud splash into the juice.

Poor Zip was scared half out of his wits and ran off for help as fast as his short legs would carry him. He found three of the Teenie Weenies in the tool house, and grabbing up a piece of rope they followed the little fellow at top speed.

When they climbed up onto the shelf they all burst out with laughter, for the Dunce was a funny sight, standing on a pickled peach with the juice dripping off the end of his nose.

The Cowboy threw a rope into the jar and the rest of the little men soon pulled him out and carried him to the laundry, where he was put to bed while Zip washed his clothes and dried them before the tiny stove.

Making the "Difficult Age" Easy

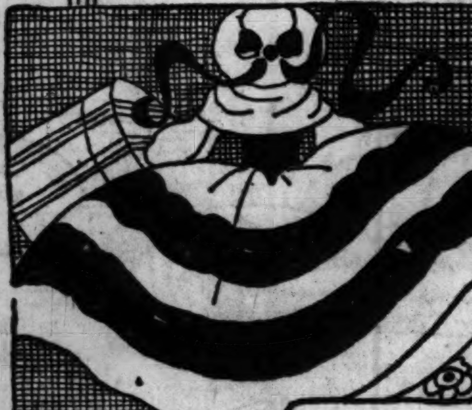
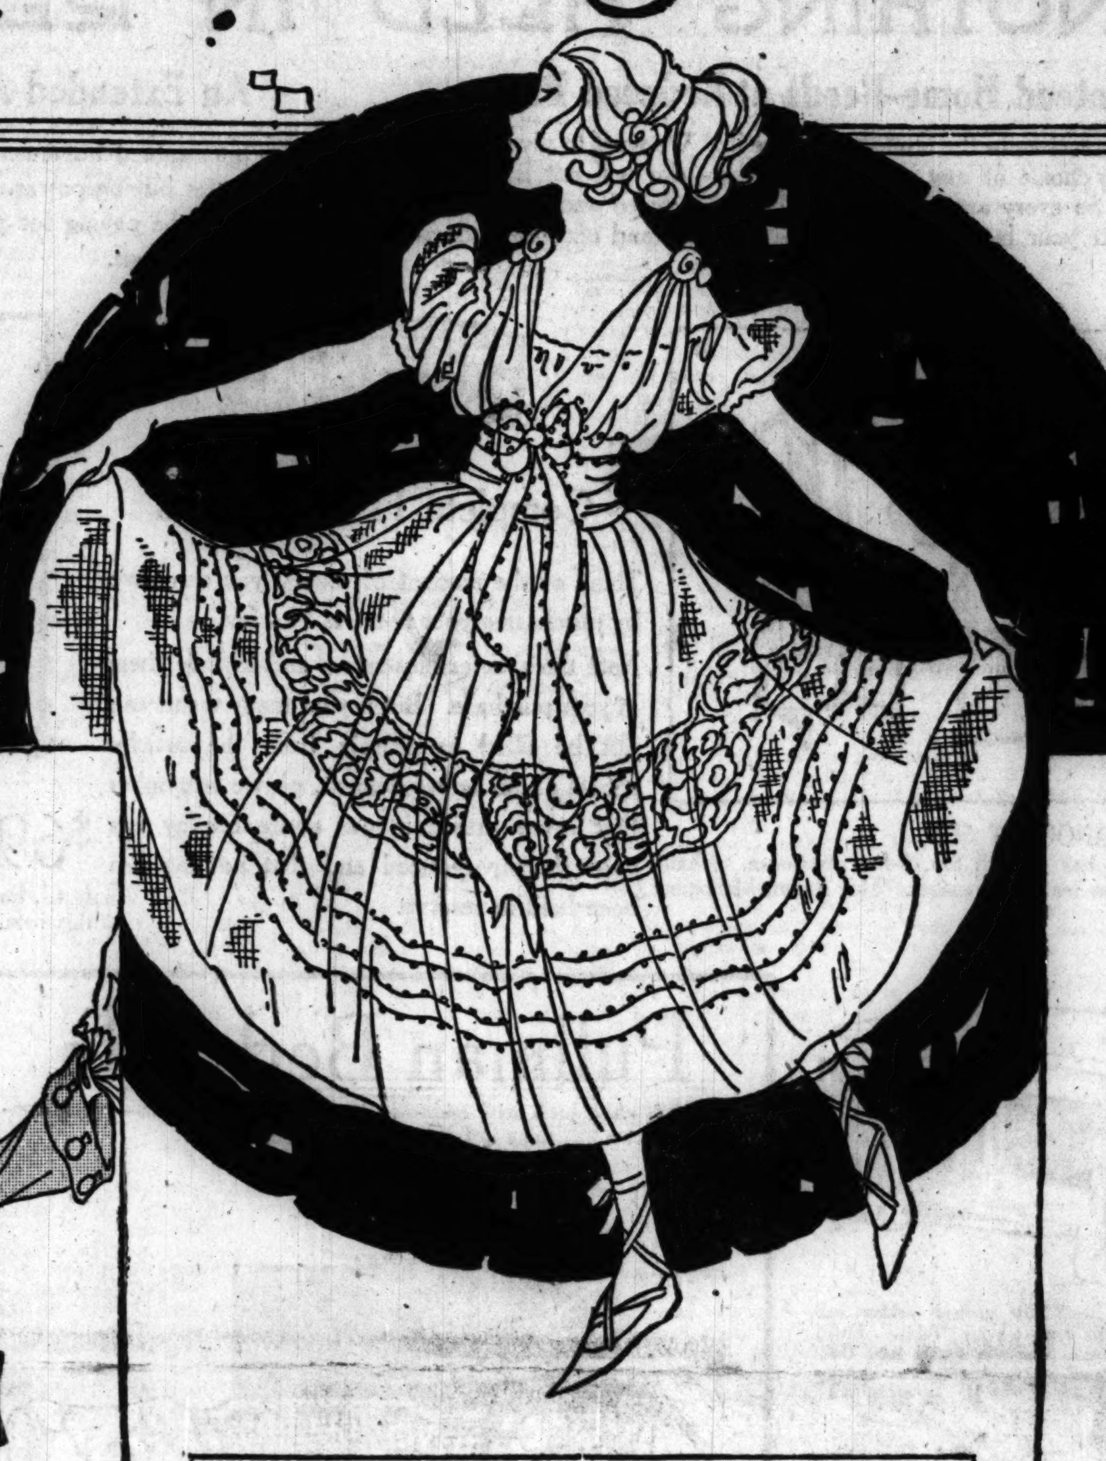
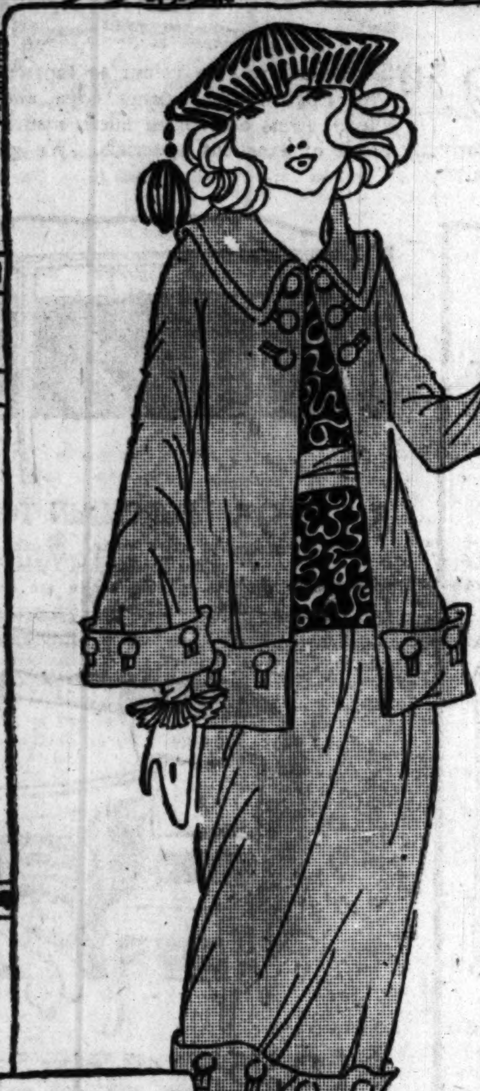
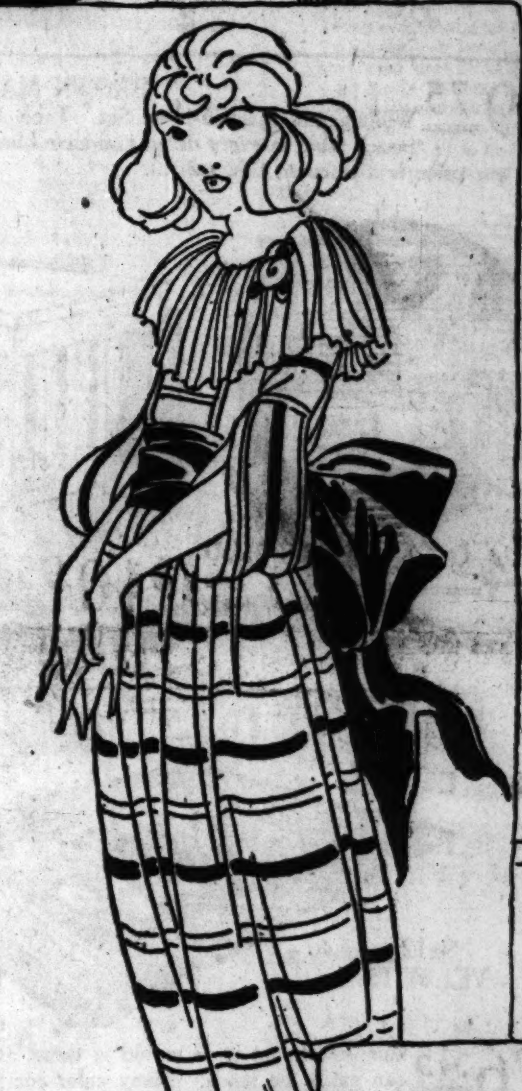
FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

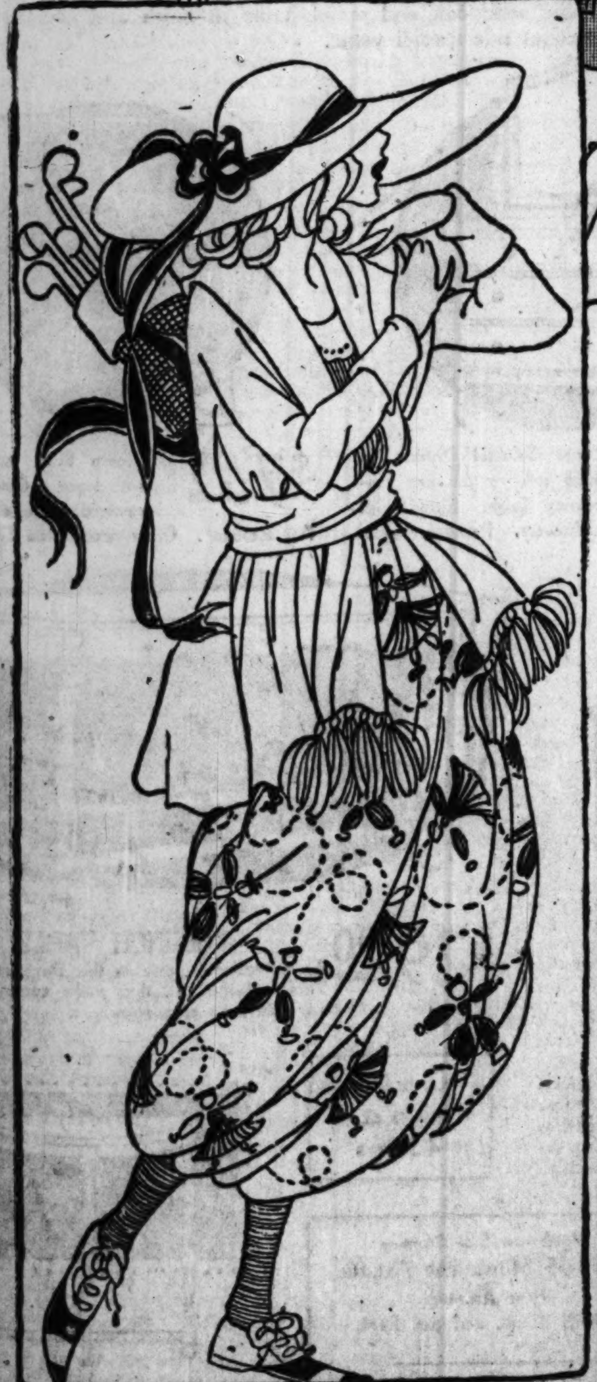


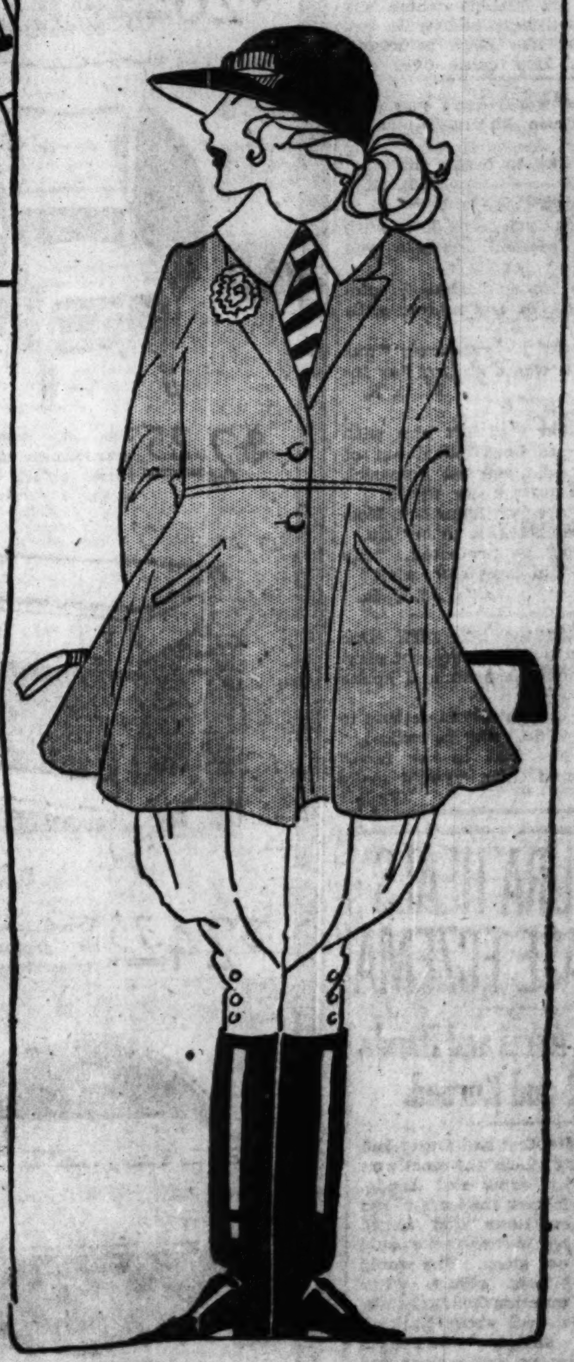






WHO wants to be a graduate deb when a sub-deb may now wear a dancing frock of white net trimmed with silver embroidery and picot edged robin's egg blue ribbon; a navy tricotine suit opening over waistcoat of old blue silk embroidery in silver thread; an afternoon dress of tan Georgette, collared in white chiffon, sashed in rose velvet ribbon and trimmed with narrow velvet ribbon of rose and tan; a sports costume which tops a skirt of Pussy Willow taffeta exploiting Ninette and Rintintin; and, finally, a riding costume composed of hunter's green coat, white whipcord trousers, black velvet jockey cap, and white silk shirt?





NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Long years ago when we were in the High school wondering just who was going to show us our geometry originals today we used to be fascinated by the girl who sat right in front. She was 15 and chubby and she always wore a plaid taffeta waist. That waist was made tight and when the girl got up to recite it showed her pathetic attempts to induce a waistline.

We knew there was something wrong with the chubby girl wearing plaid tightness. But all the time we were happily unconscious of the fact that we ourselves were quite as cheerless a spectacle. For we, mind yon, were wearing a striped taffeta waist also fitting tightly and we were the scrawny kind of 15.

Plaids and stripes—all sorts of tight fitting things—these used to be handed out to the girl of from 14 to 17 indiscriminately as the old time sulphur and molasses. No wonder the flapper had to go off by herself and dream of growing up to swish scornful velvet trains!

Of course the first principle of dressing the school girl is to put upon her garments which are rather loose fitting. Clothes of the flapper should be equally lenient to the figure that is either too chunky or too spindly. The next principle is to adapt grown-up modes to suit the growing girl and endow them with that simplicity which divides the overdressed from the well dressed school girl.

In the group of clothes which we are showing today there are suggested frocks for the school girl to meet every occasion. First and most necessary is the suit. This is of blue tricotine and the vest of old blue silk is embroidered in silver thread. Of course, the ideal thing for these indeterminate figures is the box-coat which, just as it so happens, is now being worn by grownup folks. Here it is all full of cuffs and not saying a word about the waistline underneath being a bit too large.

Right opposite is a panel dedicated to telling how the Louisa Alcott reading girl should go to the matinee or other afternoon party. This frock is an adorable tan Georgette with big frilly collar of white chiffon and a smashing sash of rose velvet ribbon. But this is not all. Ribbon, which is at present the pastime of the adult mode, is introduced all over the surface of this frock—tan ribbon alternating with that of rose velvet. And before looking away please notice the sling sleeves which Lanvin invented way over in Paris after she had looked at the prints of the sleeves in which the old mediaeval scholar carried his books. It presents here such a graceful way of keeping the ribbon lines from being too monotonous!

If Tennyson's Maude, "who was not yet 17," had been going to parties today she would not have done it in that famous "gloss of satin and glimmer of pearls." But alas! there didn't seem to be any flappers in those days. You just vaulted from the nursery to meet the wicked villain and the hero with the well chiseled nose.

But if Maude had been 16 in these days her mother or her guardian would likely have selected something like this charming dancing frock at the top of the page. This is white net over white taffeta and the wide, wide skirt shows a band of silver embroidery policed by two bands of picot edged grosgrain ribbon in robin's egg blue — lovely with that stretch of silver above. The girdle and sash are of the same robin's egg blue ribbon and over the round low neck and the puff sleeves which Queen Victoria —herself then hardly more than a flapper—wore at her coronation are drawn two wily folds of the net. Wily, because they cover the place where bones are so apt to show on 16 year old necks! These folds, which do the same thing in the back, are held by robin's egg blue roses with silver leaves.

At the lower left is a combination of sweater and skirt which might be done just as successfully by the flapper's older sister. The sweater, a hand knit one of green yarn, tops a pussy willow taffeta skirt over which romp those two famous luck-twins of Paris—Ninette et Rantintin. Facing this young lady from the lower right of the page we have Miss In-Her-Teens ready for a ride. A black velvet jockey cap, a coat of hunter's green, trousies of white whipcord, shirt of white habutai, and necktie with regimental stripes—pshaw, who cares if we ever really do grow up!

To dress—yes. But what of those not too few youngsters who today value no one's opinion but their own and choose their dresses and other accessories with no other check upon their untutored taste than fear of what will happen if father's purse should be too roughly called upon?

What of the girl of 15, or 14, or 16—that luckless age in these times when the romping spirits of a few seasons ago are given over to more serious meditations upon the ways and whys of angling for masculine attention—what of that girl, we ask, who dresses herself on her own allowance and dresses herself with all the assurance of a Madame Tallyrand or of La Pompadour herself.

You may see her any day by the merest exertion. Glance to the left or right on the fashionable boulevard, the crowded shopping street, or the slightly less populated park walk and you will see tripping on high heels, topped by sheer stockings, that peek more shyly than they did last year, below the tight, crinkly skirt which rises narrowly to meet the ruffles of the blouse. You will see a smart hat on a smarter head. A head, more than like, with bobbed hair and reddened cheeks, darkened brows and scarlet lips. A head that, were there not a distinct spirit of youth about those same eyes and lips, you would swear belonged to the third row of the chorus, where paint makes up for the deficiencies with which approaching age crowns, or mars, us.

Theodore was delighted with his new suit, bought with a view to future use and with due regard to Theodore's rapid growing propensities. But when he wore it to school his joy was quickly turned to grief as the unfeeling boys frankly accused him of wearing his father's clothes. The teacher used her utmost tact to smooth out matters, but the tear stained little face did not clear all day. The next day another boy appeared in a new coat evidently made from his mother's. The astrakhan collar was sufficient to stir up the "savage" state of the boys. The new garment was promptly dubbed "his sister's coat." Again did tears flow copiously and the teacher was at her wits' ends to give comfort. Little Theodore slipped his arm around the weeping boy and said: "Don't cry, Jimmy; that's just the way I felt yesterday." E. G. K.

Don's mother had repeatedly tried to break him of sucking his thumb, but all efforts had failed. One day as he sat on the carpet with his thumb in his mouth his little sister Bess came into the room. "Aw, Donnie," said she, "there you go sucking that thumb again. What makes you do it? They's no juice in it." A. M. R.

Emory has six kittens which his mother would willingly part with, but her young son has been reluctant. One day little May came over and asked for one.

"Why in the world don't you give May one of those kittens?" pleaded his mother.

"O, I don't like to break the set," was his reply. E. L. R.

The day before Cyril came down with the "flu" he seemed irritable and cross.

This was so unusual that I said: "Cyril, what can be the matter with you?"

"I don't know," he answered, "but I feel just like it was a stormy day inside of me." M. C. R.

Robert's mother had left him with me when she had been called out of town. One day he seemed homesick or ill. I didn't quite know which.

"I think you are just homesick, Robert," I said, as I took him in my lap.

"No, I'm not," he protested. "My head is hot, so I'm drug store sick." M. C. R.

Ollie was a pretty little girl. One day she and little sister were out playing when a friend stopped and spoke to them.

"How much little sister is getting to look like you, Ollie," she remarked.

"Don't tell her that to her face," gravely cautioned Ollie, "you'll make her vain." F. J.

DY FOR VALENTINE'S DAY.

HILDREN to the end of time will love sweet Valentine. And so will grownups who dare admit that the child is still in their s, and will out in nice ways if normal opportunities or in dis ble ways if suppressed. At any there are great numbers who make themselves suitable com to children.

ere is just as much of entertain t today as ever in the lines, "As vine grows round the stump, you my darling sugar lump," as when were originated. If we want to academic we might say that these to folk literature, as they un tedly do. Some solemn faced le have found reasons for taking ht in all the "folk" playfulness of days, although they would not play themselves.

For Valentine's day these r lumps may be shaped into hearts to little figures on sticks, such lls or soldiers or trees or flowers, rding to the skill or willingness of one working with the sugar.

All miliar things are hard to do, but therefore, all the better discipline our nerves. We hate to be awk d even when no one save ourselves But forget yourself in the task proposing! Three Grades of Candy.

ere is the proposition: Out of one king of sugar you can make three des of candy and as many different es as you will out of each grade. First, this sugar may be poured, n cooked to the desired degree and hot, into little molds of your own sing. Let all the bubbles subside re the pouring. Then the rest may poured out on a plate or platter and ked or pulled with a fork until it is the taffy stage, and can be shaped ribbons or wound around sticks and ped into figures. If you want to go pulling, the whole or a part, it will mately turn to a velvety fondant ch you can work into bon bons, or with a bit of water in a double and pour into just such molds you used when the sirup was hot. got a glassy lump then. After product has been worked to a t or opaque stage, you will get of the cream patty type. One cup may be used for the poured and the rest divided to make other two sorts.

If you are clever your thumb you can make heart ped indentations, but the best thing and quickest is one of those tiny t-shaped candy boxes you can buy the candy store at this season. The point sticks sold for toasting marshmal may be put into the corn starch one end inserted in the heart ped indentation. One stick may be up into four or five of good lollipop th. Or small orange wood sticks be used, or the heaviest type of picks, but ordinary toothpicks are er long nor strong enough.

Sirup for Sugar Lumps.

Making sugar lumps of this sort on ks is as easy and short a task as king fudge. It is not necessary to make the corn starch molds if have a big sheet of tin which you butter and lay your sticks around. cooked sirup may be cooked a lit stiffer and then a lump of it pped at one end of the stick on the But it is easier if you want par ular shapes to use the corn starch. ever, when the forms poured on e pan are cold you can fold and mold em with your fingers.

Here is the sirup: One cup of sugar, e cup of white corn sirup or glu e, and one-third cup of water stirred r the fire until completely dissolved mingled and then gently boiled to soft ball stage or to 238 degrees. r poured candy alone it can be ked to hard ball stage. If you want r sugar lumps to be red throw to the partly cooked sirup two table ons of the little red cinnamon can s, the smaller the size the better. t colors fade with cooking, so uld not be added at the start. The d cinnamon flavor is all that is eded in this case to finish the candy. ssafras water from steeping sassa will give a flavor that is not so versally liked and will color the dy a light pink.

When so much corn sirup as a half sed there will be no chance of the ps sugaring off as they may do with maller amount, especially if it is ked in too large a utensil. In cook g sugars for candy it is best to have small a surface as possible. A fry g pan may do for molasses taffy but t for the sort of thing here de ibed. An aluminum handled pan ing about a quart is best for this ount. Of course it must be watched efully and the fire kept low after sugar once boils.

If we want to work our candy into the shapes of dolls or what we choose we must pour the hot stuff on a buttered platter and let it cool to about lukewarm, being careful that the edges do not stiffen. When there is as much glucose or crystal corn sirup as one-half we can begin to work it sooner than otherwise. A stiff fork or a wooden paddle is a good utensil to use for the working. When it will ribbon then we may wind it around a stick and mold it with another stick or with buttered fingers. It is best to work where it is rather cold and the molded figures will not keep their shape if not kept in a cold and dry place. This is a point to emphasize.

One who has never tried to do this molding will be astonished to find what she can do in this sort of work. The candy itself by being hit here and there will take accidental shapes that are entertaining.

This sort of play might take the place of a candy pull for young women and their friends, prizes being given for the best figures. If the sticks are not used it is still easy to make figures and different shaped lumps. The simplest is made by rolling a lump into a ball and then pressing it a little into heart shapes.

At the Pulled Stage.

The third or fondant stage of our batch of candy is reached when, with patient working, the mass loses its glassy surface and becomes opaque and bonbonlike. If it is to stand after this it should be kept covered with a damp cloth. It is best for it to stand a few hours and "ripen," when it may be melted up in the top of a double boiler and poured out as patties or into larger heart shaped molds, decorated or lettered finally to suit the day, Valentine's day.

By the way, when the candy is at the pulled stage pieces of it may be pulled out into ropes, twisted, and then folded into heart shaped frames for dainty little pictures to be used for place cards. And the ingenious will find other uses. Of course it is at this stage that roses and other flowers are made.

If the candy is kept from getting too cold it will remain workable for an hour if it has not been pulled too much. Professionals keep it warm by a special sort of heater while they manipulate it into flowers, vases, hats, and what they will. The amateur is not debarred from having the fun of trying some of the same things.

Cooking sugar is nice work, therefore those who will take the pains to do it nicely are likely to become more or less nice cooks. Some one has said that confectionery is the poetry of the kitchen, and it ought to be undertaken with this idea.

Glucose Measured Warm.

In order to measure glucose exactly it is necessary to warm it. Some people do not add it to the sugar until the latter is completely dissolved or melted, but in putting the above together one way to secure the desired effect is to put the cup of sugar in the saucepan, add the third of a cup of water, and stir until the sugar is dissolved, then add the cup of glucose.

A wooden spoon is best because metal touching or scraping against it, as a spoon will against a saucepan, does affect the flavor, be it ever so slightly. If there is any dirt in the sugar and glucose it will rise as scum, and it is necessary to watch this carefully and skim it off.

Porcelain working boards and platters have been broken by the amateur when in haste to cool the candy to the working stage, if the door or window is opened and a strong draft blows upon the dish heated by the boiling hot sirup. Better wait a little or be sure there is no draft. In cooling candy for a fondant it is better to let it cool slowly, otherwise the edges harden too soon. In fact before the center part should be stirred. The temptation is, if stirring these edges in, to begin the whole stirring too soon and so fail in the end to get the velvety results desired.

When beating for a fondant if the whole lumps in a short time it can be melted over and used for cooking fruit, but it is not much use to try to make first class candy with it by recooking.

Making Candy to Sell.

Not infrequently I get letters from people who want to make candy to sell. They want to know how the professionals make some one type of candy, and I cannot tell them, but I do know enough about it to know that the trained people first learn to cook a sirup with a thermometer exactly as simple as the above, and that with that one sirup or with the principle of that one sirup well grasped they can make perhaps a hundred varieties of candy.

Some of these people have the simplest of equipments, and some have an elaborate outfit. One of the books telling how to make candy lists first as desirable the following utensils: Thermometer, marble slab, sugar scraper, spatula, dipping forks and rings, pastry brush, caramel cutter, marzipan molds, tin sheet, rolling pin, starch tray and plaster molds, candy bars, hair sieve, saccharometer or sirup gauge, waxed paper and wafer paper, rubber mats, saucepans and double boilers, nougat frame, knives, scissors, airtight tins and jars, hook for pulling candy, tin measuring cup, pair of heavy gloves for pulling candy, platters and basins, crystallizing tray, and wire rack.

But the most important utensil in candy-making after the sugar is cooked is a willing, patient hand, and preferably a hand with trained fingers. A thermometer saves time and care, and if candy is made frequently in the home it is indispensable, and pays for itself many times over. For home work the ordinary kitchen equipment will otherwise suffice. Good home candies are interesting and inexpensive. See what a show you can make with a cupful each of sugar and corn sirup. The picture shows, but more yet might be done.

on Professional or Home Made Lollipops—First two kinds from left poured; two others worked to pulled stage; third(my love) to fundant

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one up one-half pint. The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Crystallized Orange Peel.

Wash and wipe oranges. Remove the peel from four thin skinned oranges or save the peel from the oranges from which the juice was extracted and served at breakfast until the required number are on hand. The peel will keep firm if dropped into cold water to cover. Cover with cold water and bring to the boiling point and let cook slowly until tender. Drain and with a teaspoon carefully scrape out all the white portion, using care that the peel is not broken. Cut the yellow rind into narrow strips, using the scissors for this purpose. Put one cup of granulated sugar in a saucepan, add one-half cup of water, and boil until it spins a thread. Add prepared peel and cook in sirup five minutes (counting time after boiling point is reached). Drain and dredge or roll in coarse granulated sugar. To accomplish this part of the process with dispatch, spread a half cup of sugar on a clean sheet of paper, toss orange peel over it, then take the paper by the edges and roll peel back and forth in sugar until strips are well coated. Then spread on waxed paper to dry. Store in tin boxes. The remaining sirup and sugar may be used for sweetening apple sauce, applie pies, or prunes.

Orange Cream Sherbet.

Cook two cups of sugar with two and one-half cups of boiling water and the thinly pared rind of one-half a lemon for five minutes. Add the grated rind of two oranges, two cups of orange juice, and one-half cup of lemon juice. Turn into a freezer and freeze to a mush. Whip two and one-half cups of cream until stiff, add two-thirds cup of powdered sugar, and one-eighth teaspoon of salt. Beat the yolks of two eggs lightly, add to whipped cream, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Add to frozen mixture and finish freezing. Serve in tall glasses.

Orange Jelly.

Soak one-half package of granulated gelatin in one-half cup of cold water twenty minutes; add one cup of boiling water and seven-eighths cup of sugar. Stir until the gelatin and the sugar are dissolved; strain. Add the juice of one lemon and two cups of orange juice. Turn into small glasses, first wet with cold water. Chill. Unmold on small individual plates, dressed with a lace paper doily. Serve with sunshine cake for dessert at luncheon or at Sunday evening tea.

Orange Crullers.

Beat two eggs until thick and lemon tinted, add gradually three-quarters cup of sugar and one-quarter cup of thin cream. Mix and sift two cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, one and one-quarter teaspoons of cream of tartar, three-quarters teaspoon of soda, the grated rind of one-half orange, and one teaspoon of orange extract. Chill dough, roll one-half at a time to one-quarter inch in thickness. Shape with small biscuit cutter, put one-quarter teaspoon of orange marmalade in center of one-half the rounds, moisten edges with milk, cover remaining rounds, press edges, and fry in deep, hot fat. Drain on brown paper and when cold dredge with powdered sugar. Serve with tea or cocoa at luncheon or supper.

whipped until solid. Decorate a melon mold with sections of oranges from which all the white portion and membrane has been removed. Pour in the cream mixture. Chill on ice; remove from mold, garnish with orange jelly and whipped cream. This recipe will make twelve generous portions.

Orange Rice Pudding.

Cover one-half cup of rice with two cups of cold water and let soak over night. Drain and put in double boiler, add three cups of milk and cook until rice is soft. Add two thirds cup of sugar, grated one-half of an orange, one and one-half tablespoons of orange juice, one tablespoon of lemon juice, three-quarters teaspoon of salt, and the yolks of two eggs slightly beaten. Cook until mixture thickens. Turn into a buttered serving dish and cool slightly. Spread unevenly with a meringue made of the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff and dry and gradually add two tablespoons of powdered sugar and one-quarter teaspoon of orange extract. Sprinkle meringue lightly with granulated sugar. Place in moderate oven to brown meringue. Serve with or without fruit sauce.

Lemon Sauce.

Sift together one cup of fine granulated sugar, one tablespoon of cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon of salt; add slowly one cup of boiling water while beating constantly. Cook five minutes. Remove from range and add two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of lemon juice, and a slight grating of lemon rind. Strain. A few grains of nutmeg may be added.

Orange Sauce (Cold).

Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff and dry. Mix the grated rind and pulp of three oranges, one-third cup of powdered sugar, one tablespoon of lemon juice, and one teaspoon of grated rind. Fold carefully into the beaten whites of eggs. Serve cold.

Orange and Rhubarb Marmalade.

Select eight large thin skinned heavy oranges (they are then rich in juice) for this purpose. Wash, wipe dry, and remove the peel from oranges in quarters. Cook peel in boiling water to cover until soft; drain when cool. With a spoon remove the white portion by carefully scraping each piece. Then lay several pieces one above the other and cut the thin yellow rind in narrow strips crosswise, using the scissors for this purpose. Cut the oranges in quarters, remove the seeds and all of the white tough skin. Put into a preserving kettle, add five pounds of southern grown rhubarb washed, wiped, and cut in one-half inch pieces without peeling. Heat to boiling point and simmer one-half hour; then add four pounds of granulated sugar and the prepared rind. Cook slowly two hours. Store in jelly glasses.

Great care should be taken that this marmalade does not cook too long and fast and no longer than directed, lest the flavor be injured by overcooking the sugar with the acid. Southern grown rhubarb appears in the market the latter part of January and will be found much more delicate for this purpose than home grown, which appears when the best quality of oranges are no longer to be had.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

NERVES HER SUBTERFUGE.

OCCASIONALLY we come across a story, if not the actual experience, of one girl in an office taking advantage in one way or another of the other girls and of her employer. According to the following letter, the girl who is the subject of it has made nervousness her subterfuge for shirking her work now and then.

"Dear Miss King: In the office where I am employed there are four girls besides myself. All of us, with one exception, have been regular in our attendance and faithful to our duties. The exception, Miss R., stays away from the office frequently and, while she is a young girl and appears to be perfectly healthy, her excuse for her absence is always a nervous attack. She talked and evidently thought a great deal about her nervousness, and after being away from the office for a day or two she would tell us about having had to stay in bed and have some member of her family wait upon her.

"At first we were all extremely sympathetic toward her, and on the occasions when she was absent from the office the four of us, in spite of the fact that we had plenty of work to do ourselves, managed to do her share of the work so that she would not get hopelessly behind when she returned. Our employer was indulgent about her staying at home, as she never seemed to fall much behind in her work.

"This condition lasted for about three months, when one day something happened at the office that displeased Miss R. and she became so angry that she banged things around on her desk, and finally stamped out of the office in a rage. She wasn't able to finish her work and had to go home early that day. The next day some one called the office to say that Miss R. was ill and would not be down. She came back the following day as blithe and healthy looking as usual.

"For the first time after an absence from the office Miss R found that her work had accumulated. From that time on we greeted her remarks about her nerves with coldness, and whenever afterward she stayed away from work (which has not been quite so frequent of late) we neither helped her nor inquired about her health.

"Do you believe that we are justified in taking this attitude toward her? We are positive that her nervousness is nothing more than bad temper, and that she has been taking advantage of us by staying away from the office.

"T. C."

Even if Miss R. were not shamming there is no excuse for a young and otherwise healthy young woman allowing herself to get into such a condition that frequent absences from her work are necessary. Nervousness is largely a matter of mental attitude and any young woman free from a constitutional weakness ought to be able to control herself to the extent of making an attack of "nerves" an unknown quantity.

I believe you and your associates are taking the proper attitude toward Miss R. in refusing to help her with her work, and also in refraining from talking about her nervousness with her

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

"I will go with thee and be thy guide." —Everyman.

Hundreds of boys and girls in Chicago are doing part time work out of school hours, helping to earn their way through high school. They are earning from $3 to $7 a week. They are sacrificing their pleasures, often their rest, but they are bent on an education and are willing to strive for it.

Experiments in various parts of the country have shown that part time employment for children of secondary grade is, if necessary, a practical undertaking.

War time conditions have stimulated the public interest in the work of school children during out of school hours. Now that peace has come plans are being projected in every state for the furtherance of such work as will be useful, economically and educationally, to the thousands of children who must do some work if they are to remain in high school.

Any further information you wish on this subject or any questions you wish answered on schools, write to the School Counselor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune."

OUT OF SCHOOL HOURS.

THERE is one group of people who believe tremendously in education. They need no facts and figures to convince them of its value. They have lived the life of the school and they know it is worth while. Their faith is great and they prove their faith by their works.

They are the band of busy, earnest, light hearted boys and girls who go out from school each day for several hours' work in the business world.

They are sacrificing their pleasures and often rest, but education they must have and by their own effort. They are fighting the war which goes on perpetually here at home, the war against poverty and ignorance.

Most young people by economizing their time find several hours a day left free. This they can use for pleasures, for home duties, or for outside work. Many of them choose the latter. In some schools, chiefly the boys' technical schools, the percentage of such workers is half the school.

They seem to possess the spirit, though they do not know it, of the immortal Cicero: "Who shall reproach or chide me if that time which others give to rest of mind and body or to pleasures, banquets, dice, and ball, I give to these, my chosen pursuits."

There are many objections urged against this part time work, but when it becomes a question of leaving school and working all the time, or remaining in school and working part time, the latter is surely worth a trial.

Outside work is distracting is one of the arguments against it. Pleasures are also distracting. Movies and social life often affect school work most unfavorably.

The health of the boy or girl gives way under the strain of the twofold work is another objection. That of course is an occasion for investigation to see how conditions can be bettered.

There is much to be said on the other side in favor of the system. Young people develop under this responsibility. The habits of promptness, accuracy, attention, required by the business world, are reflected in their school work.

We wish that it might never be necessary for a young person to go out into the industrial world until he has finished his education; we wish that the state so valued the highest development, physical and mental, of its young citizens, that by its authority a system of scholarships might be established for all who need financial aid. Under these circumstances the pupil would have an added incentive for serious and earnest work, for otherwise the scholarship would be withdrawn.

However, the tendency seems in another direction and since this state or local aid is not established, except in a small degree, it is necessary for the parents and school to combine in regulating the work for the best good of the workers. The placement bureaus, now being organized, are a step in that direction.

This supervision should consider several points—the healthfulness of the work, the remuneration, the time required; also the physical condition of the worker, his school duties and his home surroundings.

Often the school work can be lightened and a little longer time can be taken to complete the course—two and one-half years instead of two, or four and one-half instead of four. An early dismissal from school can be secured so that the outside work can be done in daylight. But in this connection it must be remembered that the pupil is losing an hour or two of time for study in school and so his school work should be lightened by taking one less study.

Home conditions should also be good for these workers. They should have a long night of sleep and abundance of wholesome food.

In general out of doors occupations are to be preferred. For boys there are many of these even now under our congested city conditions. Of course, in earlier days when many homes had a garden, a good woodpile, a cow, and barn and horse there was much healthy work for boys. There is still much, but of a different character.

Some boys prefer summer vacation work and manage to make enough to justify them in attending closely to school work during the year. Last summer the boys seemed to have found the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. But such a remunerative summer will probably not return again.

The average boy in high school who works outside gives about three hours a day to his employer and all or part of Saturday. For this the average compensation under wartime conditions averages $5 a week. This seems like a sufficient contribution to the family resources, and this amount of time can be given and yet there will be enough left for rest and study.

A greater number of hours than this is not advisable, no matter what the temptation to parent or pupil in the matter of more money.

Some lines of work could be condemned even without comment; for instance, ushering at vaudeville or movies, or playing the piano in such places. No young person can remain up until after 11 each evening and have any strength left for school.

So far little attempt has been made to fit the occupation to the boy's future work. When part time work is better organized the right place will be found for each worker.

For instance, the boy taking the printing course ought to do his outside work in a printing office just as the boy in the pharmacy course does his outside work in a drug store. The latter is the only instance in the course of study where the outside work is fitted to the school work and where the aim to adjust the school course and the work for remuneration is accomplished.

Table Runners of Italian Filet

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

NEVER within the memory of the present generation has linen been so precious, so scarce, so expensive, and so highly prized as it is at the present moment. We can thank the soulless Hun for our depleted equipments and linen closets that stare at us with empty shelves. With the looms of Belgium stolen or destroyed, it will be some time, no doubt, before we shall have again those complete stocks from which to choose and make selection.

As it is, we buy sparingly and carefully. And every bit of linen in the house is treated with special tenderness and consideration. This is as it should be. Only the ignorant and ruthless despoil or waste that which is beautiful.

If beautiful linen ever fulfills its real mission, it is when it is spread in proud display as day time dress for the dining room table or as all time array for console or sideboard. It is there we place our best pieces. And they, in return for this distinction, inspire in us a real affection. It is with sorrow that any woman sees a bit of fine lace or embroidery slowly dissemble and reduce itself to threads and fragments. She hangs to it to the last, uttermost moment; she never gets away from the idea that pretty thoughts have been woven into its composition.

There is at the present time a preference for Italian filet for the dining room table runner or scarfs for tables in the family feasting hall. It possesses not only the quality of beauty but the substantial element of endurance. The most ruthless laundress cannot kill it, no matter how valiantly she wages her war against things inanimate. Cluny, too, has its place of usefulness, and a stunning runner shows this combined with coarse val and linen.

Hand made centerpieces have come from Belgium during the last year. This has been made possible by the Friends of Lace society, founded by the Queen of Belgium. Great artists contributed designs, special thread was purchased, and women enrolled for the work, while schools of lacemaking were established for the children.

You may see some of these pieces in shops where fine needlecraft products are sold. One point de Venise runner bears the arms of Ypres, another the arms of Brussels. A smaller piece, in which the wheat design appears, expresses the Belgian's gratitude to America for bread. A fine runner for the sideboard has for its theme a group of Venetian point lace squares, united with Cluny, and the whole banded with filet. In the center of each square is the coat of arms of one of the allies. An oblong piece with rounded corners is of fine linen, edged about with point de Paris.

A distinctive note is given the runner of solid filet by the use of a colored mat. This is being done. Simpler effects are procured by selecting a foundation of linen and combining in the design squares and edging of filet, embroidery, and cutwork. Madeira embroidery is suitable for the dining room that is more comfortable than ornate.

More than precious are old pieces of sampler work. Your great-grandmother used to call it cross-stitch. These samplers preceded the period of machine made decorations, and often portrayed verses and family histories. A little girl 10 years old would start a sampler, and the chances are the task continued through years, with careful attention to stitches. Besides verses and dates, these exquisite productions showed designs of birds, flowers, vases, trees, and conventional borders. They are considered the most intimate of all collectible old things, and can be found now and then in studios and shops. The art has been revived to a certain extent, and, as the war woman carried her knitting around with her, the peace woman now displays her cross-stitchery. In time these efforts develop into beautiful centerpeices and sideboard scarfs.

In the beginning of the life of the sampler the fabric was tannery cloth, tiffany cloth, or cotton canvas. Loosely twisted linen threads were used first, then silk, and finally Berlin wool. If you are fortunate enough to possess a genuine old piece, you will not place it on your table; you will frame it and use it for a wall decoration. As an over-mantel effect it is good.

Just what ornament shall decorate the dining room table other than its linen top piece is an interesting question. Many women have several decorations, to provide variety.

The French fruit dishes of pierced and gilded china are nice. Some have high standards, others have claw feet, still others stand firmly on their foundations, bowl fashion; the gilt withstands dust and water. To be correctly ornamental they should be filled with fruit. Old bronze bowls are decorative and "different." Compotes of Waterford glass will contribute a bit of charm and color. Old Japanese pewter tea jars, so arranged as to hold fresh flowers, or filled with artificial blooms, are unusual, and glass vases in clear, glowing purple are equally stunning. If there is already plenty of color in the dining room scenery you can select a vase of white Venetian glass.

Groups of vases, consisting of one large center vase and four smaller ones, give a dressed up appearance to the dining table. A set of English faience, copying the old Chelsea design, is beautiful, bright with designs of birds and flowers.

Plant lovers will insist upon blooms, but there is always the one difficulty—sunlight does not as a rule touch its golden rays upon the table. But with a number of bowls, pots, or jugs supplying blossoms in the sunny window they can alternate in shedding their radiance. One who knows the bulb game can produce an endless display of crocuses, hyacinths, daffodils, and gorgeous tulips. An excellent Japanese arrangement is to place crocus bulbs in the center of a large cork ring, sprinkle the ring with grass seed, and place in a decorative bowl that has been half filled with water. Glass bowls, such as serve as tenements for gold fish, can be used for hyacinths, which will live in water if properly supported with a collar of canvas; the canvas can be sprinkled with grass seed, which will form a suitable foundation or carpet.

Miniature hyacinths are charming, and so are beautiful Darwin tulips, growing in dark colored bowls. Snowdrops and crocus are to be preferred for the flower pot that is punctured with holes and from which the blooms protrude, forming massed effect. When the flowers first peer out from these holes one is reminded of a bird house with bird heads appearing at every doorway.

As a lastly, let us include silver pheasants as a table decoration. One may have a single, or a pair, or a young flock of them. Certainly the idea is unique enough to be attractive. One clever housewife who puts her own ideas into effect prefers an ornament in the shape of a quaint old English figurine—a lady in Watteau mode, standing demurely upon a bank of flowers of brilliant coloring.

Nova ware baskets, filled with fruit or flowers, make "adorable" decorations.

R. B. R.: You made a mistake in having the walls pink. A light neutral tint would have been much better. Make a silk shade in light mauve for the center light. Have sand colored linen bed covers trimmed with narrow mauve fringe. Covers and cushions to match.

Cut out the front JJ trade-marks only, and mail them to us, stating what molds you want. Send no money. We pay postage on the molds.

Waukesha Pure Food Company, Waukesha, Wisconsin If there is any objection to sending the trade-marks you may send instead the grocer's sales slip which comes with the Jiffy-Jell purchase.

Jiffy-Jell

For Desserts and Salads

The New-Style Gelatine Dainty

Real-Fruit Dainties

Note that Jiffy-Jell is not like old-style gelatine desserts.

Jiffy-Jell flavors are essences, made from the fresh, ripe fruits. They are made by condensing fruit juices, so a great deal of fruit flavor comes in a small bottle.

These fruit essences come sealed in glass—a bottle in each package. So they keep their strength and freshness.

A Wealth of Fruit

Jiffy-Jell flavors are abundant. We use half a Pineapple to make the vial of flavor for one Jiffy-Jell dessert. We use 65 Loganberries to flavor another.

So Jiffy-Jell desserts taste like fresh-fruit dainties. They are fruit dainties, with all the healthfulness, all the delights of fruit. They are the same as though you used the freshly-picked fruit itself.

12½ Cents Per Dinner

A package of Jiffy-Jell serves six people in mold form, or 12 if you whip the jell. All for 12½ cents.

Think what that means in midwinter—now when fruits are high and scarce, and when you need them most. There is no other way to get real-fruit desserts at anywhere near this cost.

Jiffy-Jell comes ready-sweetened. It is properly colored and acidulated. So you simply add boiling water, then the flavor from the vial, and let it cool.

You can, of course, add whipped cream if you wish, or chocolate, nuts or fruit. But Jiffy-Jell alone is delicious, because of its wealth of fruit flavor.

Just Find It Out

Jiffy-Jell will surprise you. It will give you a new conception of quick gelatine dainties. Try it this week under this offer. Even one package will open the way to a thousand delightful dinners.

THE longs seem to have it! The question before the house being the long and the short of the new skirts! The long and the narrow! The longer the narrower!

We're a queer sex, to be sure. In fact, there aren't many queerer! Standing in front of our mirror in our tight skirt, or walking hurriedly toward the r. r. station, we realize it.

Just yesterday, when we were rushing around in our short and snappy uniforms, we had an idea we were a wonderful sex—so sane—and we were encouraged in the belief. Everybody told us we were. We accomplished so much and we dressed so sanely and becomingly We got around quickly and comfortably. No passenger train schedules were upset because of our necessarily slow progress. We could hop on and off the train if the emergency demanded it.

But just about the time it was all agreed we were a pretty comfortable sex to have hanging around, Henry gives friend wife enough to buy a new outfit, and what does friend wife do but come hobbling home with a skirt about forty inches around and two or three from the ground, more or less. Henry, in his blind innocence, suggests a walk. Henry didn't have so much to say about the sex as a sex, but what he didn't have to say to Mrs. Henry about the sex as represented by her and her latest purchase—well, we'd rather pass over.

What's the remedy?

There's no such thing as a remedy for woman's idiosyncrasies! "Grin and bear 'em while they grin and wear 'em," suggests one mate.

I don't imagine they are in for long, however. There's a deal of care to be taken of a long skirt that a short one never gave. They fray and tear from step pressure. Buttons fly off easily They wear out more quickly. And they produce a physical tiredness from energy used in walking in them.

The friction wears stockings out more quickly, an expensive pastime these days of forbidding silk stocking prices.

And you have to have smart shoes on to make the picture pleasing. Even more than with the short skirt is the long the magnet that draws eyes toward the shoes. Utter sloppiness, unpardonable untidiness, is the verdict when shoes stick out under one of these long skirts in anything but tiptop shape.

Strange Weddings Contest.

A Mouse at the Wedding.

A friend of mine, hysterically afraid of mice, had often declared that wherever she went one was sure to follow. She did not figure on one attending her wedding, however. She was married at home and during the ceremony a mouse scampered across the carpet at the feet of the bride. Just as she was about to say "Yes," she screamed "O," and, jerking her hand from the bridegroom's, she caught up her skirts and veil and mounted the nearest chair. Nothing could induce her to come down. There she remained until the ceremony was finished and the bridegroom lifted her from her perch. I witnessed the wedding, but, like the rest of the guests, I heard little of the marriage service on account of the laughter, which was general. The parson gave them a certificate, so I suppose they must be married. B. B.

In Need of Repairs.

Many years ago I attended a wedding in Cripple Creek, Colo. All was progressing gayly until the bridegroom was called upon to produce the ring. In vain he felt in his trousers pocket; nothing could be found except a hole through which the ring had evidently fallen into his boot. He glared helplessly around at the assembled guests.

"Take off your boot," ordered his prospective mother-in-law. The young miner hesitated, the suspense and silence were painful. "Take off your boot," again came in strident tones, as the old lady crowded forward in a threatening manner.

The young fellow reluctantly pulled off his boot, the ring was found—also a huge hole in the stocking through which five toes protruded. A painful silence ensued—but again the efficient old lady saved the day by remarking: "Sam, it's high time you were married." A. H.

Ceremony Was Long.

The wedding ceremony had just ended at my cousin's marriage when she heaved a sigh of relief and remarked: "Thank goodness, it's over at last!"

"Was it such an ordeal, dearest?" tenderly inquired her new husband.

"No, but a pin was sticking me frightfully and I thought the minister would never finish." F. J.

Unaccountably Absent Minded.

A friend of mine was being married and a host of friends were present during the ceremony, which the minister was performing most impressively. The bridegroom alone was inattentive and seemed unaccountably absent minded, when suddenly he bawled out: "Gee, I forgot to bring along the wedding ring!" F. J.

Following the Fire Engine.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was when one night the fire whistle blew and, going to see where the fire was, I followed the fire engines with the rest of the crowd. When the trucks arrived at their destination a marriage party was found. Some one had turned in the alarm for a joke. Of course we stayed to witness the proceedings, which made it embarrassing for the bride and bridegroom. H. G.

His College Chum.

To everybody except me it was a funny incident at a wedding; to me it was an embarrassing moment. We were married by a college chum of my husband, and when the minister asked the usual question I was shocked to hear my husband reply: "Sure, Mike." R. S.

Case in Doubt.

An old bachelor lawyer married a young girl friend of mine When the minister asked this question of the bridegroom, "Do you take this woman to be your lawful wife," he answered, "Yes, your honor," which so surprised and amused the girl that she burst into a paroxysm of suppressed laughter and, in her confusion, attempting to excuse herself and regain composure, answered the minister's next question, "Jane, do you take this man to be your lawful husband," with "Excuse me." The minister saved the day by quietly going on with the ceremony, but the bridegroom always insisted that he did not know whether he lost or won his case, whether he was accepted or rejected. E. B.

Lessons on Ukulele.

"I would be happy if you knew of any person who would be kind enough to give me a few lessons on the ukulele. Who will play good fairy and teach this invalid the ways of the sweet stringed instrument? It would while away many a dull half hour, if she could play plaintive tunes for herself.

Loan of Wheel Chair.

"Will you ask through your columns if some one has a wheel chair they would loan to a sick girl? She is compelled to sit in the house day after day, as she is too weak to walk, and her mother, who is the main support of the family, cannot afford to buy a chair. We expect her to be well and strong in a few months' time and a wheel chair in the meantime would indeed be appreciated. "L. C."

THE VALENTINE TABLE.

When we speak or think of February there are two things which we associate with the name Valentine's day and leap year. The latter comes but once in four years, but the faithful Feast of Hearts never fails us with its yearly call.

A cobweb or a spider web party is always pretty and amusing. It is a sure way to promote congeniality and furnishes an interval of breathless suspense following the ribbon to its end where the name of your supper partner is written on a red cardboard heart.

To loop a house with ribbon, especially if it is a big house and a large party, would be an expense beyond most of our purses. But the paper serpentine ribbon coming in rolls of fifty yards is just as effective and much less expensive. Attach your ribbons all at the same starting point and wind them through the rooms which you will use for the party. Let them end at different places and paste a large cardboard heart at the end of the ribbon, each heart bearing the name of some guest at the party The ribbons are to be of two shades, white and red, the red for the boys and the white for the girls. The one named at the end of each ribbon will be the supper partner of the follower of that particular ribbon.

If it is a dancing party or a cotillon on a small scale the two favors shown are attractive and easily made. Small steel or wooden sticks can be bought at any shop which sells favors and these you wind with red crepe paper cut in strips one-half inch wide. Paste at either end securely. At the top paste hearts in either red or gold or arrows. These you can buy by the box. Have the hearts for the girls and the arrows for the boys.

The supper table shown is set for twelve, but this can be modified to suit the number of your guests, whether smaller or larger. The heart shaped center decoration is really a Jack Horner pie modified in shape. For its base take a piece of heavy cardboard. Measure its circumference and cut a piece of cardboard three inches high. Glue these together with passe-partout. Now take the crêpe paper and cover the entire cardboard heart with it, leaving a ruffle of about an inch of the paper above the rim of the cardboard. Flute this by running the paper's edge between thumb and forefinger. Take three thicknesses of the paper and cut out the heart's shape, but one inch wider all around. This is for the top covering.

Through this covering, with a sharp knife or scissors, make as many slits as there are guests at the table and run through each slit a ribbon (red for boys and white for girls). Attach the favors to the ends of these ribbons and, placing the favors in the cardboard heart, adjust the top covering of paper and paste it firmly to the edge. The ruffle which you have made with the outside covering hides this finishing.

For your nut cups cover with crêpe paper, either white or red, the small plain paper cups which you buy. Stick on these red gummed hearts (these also come by the box) or arrows. Your paper napkins can be made bright by these also.

On each ribbon end fasten an arrow, which is the place card. This completes the table.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

HOW TO ADDRESS ENVELOPES.

THERE is a certain charm about an attractive exterior, whether it be a sunny smile, the trim and artistic binding of a book, the white, beribboned wrapping of a package, or the neat and legibly addressed envelope of a letter, which somehow promises that what is to be found on deeper search will prove worthy of the effort.

And it is in this last instance that we Americans make many mistakes. The English and the French send their communications, both personal and business, out upon their wanderings in envelopes correct as to spacing and placing, but we, perhaps due to a misdirected desire for novelty and fashionable fads, perpetrate much that causes exquisite agony to one inherently or by training fastidious in such small matters.

The purpose of an envelope is to give the address of the person for whom the letter is intended, as well as that of the sender, if so desired (and this is an excellent plan to follow), and to provide a place for the stamp, but it often seems as if the writer were unaware of all this, for she—this fault is more feminine than masculine, I regret to say!—huddles the words off to one side in such a cramped, abbreviated, and perpendicular way that the result is frequently offensive to a practiced eye, and, worse still, undecipherable.

Careful men and women write the name of the addressee plainly across and in about the middle of the envelope; underneath follow the street and number, the city, and the state on successive lines, each one indented from the left a little further than the next above. The return address, if one is to be used, is put inconspicuously yet distinctly in the upper left hand corner, the postage stamp (right side up with care!) in the upper right hand one. Fantastic methods of placing the stamp—to which the initiate may attach sentimental meanings—and unintelligible abbreviations are avoided while a clear, legible hand, or typewriting, is employed.

D. A. AND C. K.: "Certainly" and "Yes, indeed," are still the acceptedly correct replies to make when any one excuses himself. People who seek "novel" answers run the risk of being considered ignorant or affected.

"TIZ" FOR FEET

For Sore, Tired, Swollen Feet; for Aching, Tender, Calloused Feet or Painful Corns—Use "Tiz!"

Good-by, sore feet, burning feet, swollen feet, tender feet, tired feet.

Good-by, corns, callouses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more limping with pain or drawing up your face in agony. "Tiz" is magical, acts right off. "Tiz" draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. Use "Tiz" and wear smaller shoes. Use "Tiz" and forget your foot misery. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" now at any druggist or department store. Don't suffer. Have good feet, glad feet, feet that never swell, never hurt, never get tired. Beware of imitations!

The Corset That Gives Stout Women The New Trim Figure

What Mrs. Nemo Wise Says:

"There is a reason why Self-Reducing Corsets are so popular. They've been worn and tested out for over 25 years. Millions wear them. They are the most economical investment you can make, because they wear twice as long as any other corset. Their Hygienic-Style Service gives you a better shape, because they reduce your size and lighten your weight; and that improves your health and looks.

Self-Reducing Corsets are the most comfortable corsets stout women can wear."

Self-Reducing Corsets $4.00 to $12.00

Nemo JUSPUL the Strings BRASSIERES

"They make you look and feel smaller. They're Self-Adjustable. They come in a variety of styles, and in all sizes." $1.00 $1.50 $2.00

Great Purchases from Two Leading Mills Result in This Extraordinary

Sale of America's Highest Standard Rugs

PURCHASES of $34,524 worth of Superior Quality Wilton Rugs at cost, on which buyers at this sale will save $20,274—that, in brief, is the story of this sensational offering of exactly 1,047 fine rugs. It's a story of mighty good fortune for us—and for you.

Hundreds of Chicago's homes which have looked forward to new rugs this spring should benefit by this noteworthy opportunity. It is one of the most remarkable we have offered in years.

A few weeks ago two of America's best known Wilton rug mills notified us by wire that they were about to offer large portions of their made-up stocks at great reductions from the present market prices. Our representative went East immediately and in both instances secured the choicest offerings and the major portion of the entire quantity. They will all go on sale tomorrow—and such values are sure to arouse enthusiastic buying.

Out of regard to the many stores throughout the country that have on hand these same grades at regular prices, we have been asked not to publish the names of the makers. These names, however, are woven into the rugs themselves. Fourth Floor.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOU are a child of Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) if you were born the week beginning today, but your nearness to the sign Pisces seems to soften and mellow the flighty nature of Aquarius. You have an intuitive nature and generally see things in a clear light. Whether you follow that light is a question, for you are a dear lover of ease, except when effort leads to enjoyment and self-gratification. You have a strong vein of selfishness.

You have a great deal of latent talent which you use principally for yourself. What you are compelled to do for others you do with many a grunt and groan, but you work like a horse for your own fun and enjoyment.

You are domineering. There is no way equal to your way and you severely denounced the failures and mistakes of others, particularly if they have defeated your desire to have your way by having the thing done their way. You never made mistakes. O, no! If your schemes turn out disastrously or your plans miscarry, it is because some one else has interfered and upset things. You argue every inch of ground and continue to argue against doing what you don't want to do but are compelled to do.

You are tolerably truthful when it pays to be, conscientious in a degree, rather sly, and can be affable and courteous if not too much trouble. Taken in all—you are rather an interesting character with grand possibilities that will materialize some time. You have much in you that is lovable and bright and interesting. You are thoroughly good and don't give any one much reason to worry about you. You do the best you can and leave it there.

You are strongly attached to home and kin and show strong attachment and much love if it is drawn out of you. You are often the pet and favorite of the family, especially if you are the last baby with a long gap between you and the rest of the family. Perhaps this fact gives undue development to your more selfish traits, for you are not slow to take advantage of it and turn to it for your own profit. Sometimes you like to go visiting, especially if you are boss of the expedition and you are left to arrange the fun to your liking. On the whole you are loved by all and are worthy of the wealth of affection lavished upon you.

You are easily disappointed. You get sad and mournful over your disappointment, but not moody nor sour, and therefore receive much sympathy from others, especially the family.

As a marital companion, if you are a woman, a Cancer man will suit you best, June 22-July 22. If a man, Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, or Capricorn, Dec. 23-Jan. 20.

Your fortunate weeks are those beginning Nov. 12 and Aug. 5; colors, gray, emerald green, pink, white, and black. Birthstones, chrysolite, pink shell, and moonstone.

He Passes Her House.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl of 14 years and I want to get acquainted with a boy of 16 years of age. He passes my house every day. So please tell me how can I get acquainted with him. PEARL."

You must wait, Pearl, until a chance for a regular introduction comes. It may happen one of these days that you will discover in a friend of yours one who knows a friend of his and thus make an introduction possible. In the meantime don't worry your 14 year old little head too much about him.

HER PHYSICIAN.

WHILE serving at a field hospital during the winter of 1915 my uncle, a physician, was so badly injured that he was permanently discharged from the medical corps of the British army. By early summer his health permitted him to leave his home in Ireland for a long planned trip through Canada, where, in late summer, he arrived at one of the resort hotels of the Canadian Rockies.

The first night at dinner his attention was drawn to a woman who was seated alone at a small table near his. Her wavy black hair, dead white skin, and blue eyes made her a striking picture, but it was her almost transparent thinness and the feverish flush of her cheeks that aroused his professional interest. Day after day he watched her in the dining room and as she started on long solitary walks. She seemed to avoid all social intercourse with her fellow guests, and the hotel manager, upon inquiry, told my uncle that she was mourning the death of a relative.

Her room in the hotel was directly above my uncle's, and at night he could hear her restless pacing of the floor. One night he was startled to hear her steps falter decidedly, then start for the door. A moment later there was a crash on the staircase, and he rushed into the hall to find her a moaning, delirious heap at the foot of the stairs—a victim of brain fever. He carried her quickly to her room, roused the maid on the floor, and had the good luck to find that he could secure the services of a trained nurse who was attending another guest of the hotel.

My uncle cared for the woman through anxious weeks. She was too ill to be moved, her relatives were all in Ireland, and except for his accidental interest, she was entirely alone. Through her delirium he discovered the cause of her illness—a quarrel with a younger brother, whose guardian she had been. The boy was extremely wild and when, after a series of notorious escapades, she had refused him further funds he denounced her bitterly and disappeared. Her efforts to find him were unavailing and she received no further tidings of him until there came the announcement of his death in the first battle of the Marne. She became morbid, convinced herself that she was directly the cause of the boy's death, and was driven almost insane by constant worry and remorse.

My uncle undoubtedly saved her reason and life, but I doubt if it was through his medical skill alone. He found that this younger brother was the patient whom he had risked his life to save when a German airman bombed the hospital at which he was serving. He had carried this boy from the burning hospital, only to have a falling beam catch them both. The boy died later from exposure, and my uncle's leg was so terribly injured that he could never serve again. Before the boy died, however, he told my uncle what a trial he had been to his older sister, how he had suffered at his estrangement from her, and his last words were, "Find my sister and tell her that if I'd lived she'd have made a man of me—that I loved her always, and that she was right about the money."

My uncle had tried to reach her in Ireland, but the boy had neglected to tell him that his sister was in reality a half-sister, with a name quite different from his own. This chance meeting in a Canadian hotel afforded him the opportunity to deliver his message and save the sister of the boy for whom he had sacrificed his leg.

She is my young aunt now. Her hair is noticeably streaked with white, and my uncle will always walk with a cane, but they both speak tenderly of the dead boy who brought them together.

When the Baby Needs a Laxative---

No one knows better than the ever-watchful mother—the natural doctor of the family in all the small ills—that when the baby is out of sorts it is usually due to indigestion or constipation.

It is always well, in any of its illnesses, to look for this cause. The diet may have to be changed, but before good can result from it, the bowels must be moved.

The mother has the choice of many medicines—cathartics, purgatives, bitter-waters, pills, physics, etc. But the little body doesn't need such harsh remedies for they wrench the system and do only temporary good, so often followed by an unpleasant reaction.

A better plan is to employ a mild, gentle laxative of which only a little is required. There is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold by druggists under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin that thousands of mothers have used successfully for baby's constipation and its accompanying ills, such as belching, wind colic, restlessness, sleeplessness, etc.

The nursing mother will also find it ideal for herself, and it is especially important that she be free from constipation.

Syrup Pepsin is guaranteed to do as promised or the druggist will refund the money. Thousands of cautious families have it in the house, secure against the little ills.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN The Perfect Laxative

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 28 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

FREE SAMPLES

If you have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin send for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 468 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. If there are babies at home, ask for a copy of Dr. Caldwell's book, "The Care of Baby."

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

One of the Natives.

We were returning late at night after a long day's ride. It had been a delightful day and the girl at my side had promised to be my wife. It was dark and starting to rain. Of course, we got on the wrong road. As we were driving through a scarcely distinguishable town I pulled up to the side of the street. Leaning out I inquired of a nearby native the shortest road to our home town. Just then [illegible] burst into laughter. Failing to see anything funny I demanded the reason and between bursts of laughter she pointed to what I had supposed was a man and said, "Don't you see? You were talking to a watering tank."

After the Song.

My most embarrassing moment was when I went to a motion picture theater and the people stood and sang "The Star Spangled Banner." When they all sat down I remained standing for a few minutes reading the program.

Greeting the Meter Man.

I live in a two family flat and have my laundry in the basement. The family living in the other part of the house has three small children who before going to school Monday morning come to the laundry to visit me. Last Monday I was deeply interested in my work when some one opened the door and walked in. I, without looking to see who it was, said, "Hello, sweetheart," and then looked. To my greatest surprise it was the gas meter reader. I at once dropped my head and blushed and have decided never to speak again before looking. A. S.

Got His Feet Wet.

One windy summer's day while sailing on the lake in my canoe, the boat suddenly capsized and I was thrown into the water; while clinging to the side of the boat I shouted for help. Minutes seemed like hours. I lost my hold and found I was standing in two feet of water.

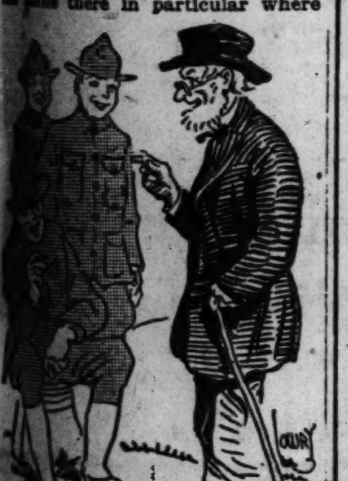
Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever-so many stories pertaining to camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Trees Were Scarce.

Grandpa was getting on in years and while down at camp with his soldier grandson was recalling bygone days. "Yes," he said reminiscently, "I recall one battle there in particular where the bullets fell like hailstones."



"Why didn't you get behind a tree?" laughingly asked his grandson.

"Get behind a tree? Why, son, there weren't enough trees for all the officers!"

To Tease the Teut.

The other day at an exposition a woman stood viewing a big warplane, upon which were painted the customary red, blue and white circles when she was heard to remark to her husband: "Isn't it strange that the allies should all paint targets on their airplanes?"

It Couldn't Be Done.

There was a hard boiled sergeant who delighted in "picking on" the men just from civilian life. One day he was giving the command "Right dress," and one of the fellows was napping and did not do as commanded, after the sergeant had called it out several times. Then the sergeant was furious and shouted to the fellow: "Hey, you, dress right!" And somebody else hollered: "How can you dress right on [illegible] a month?"

Nothing Exciting.

A few days ago my sister received a letter from a soldier now in Germany. She was much surprised and remarked, "What do you know about that! He is with the army of occupation!" My brother became interested and asked, "[illegible], is that a good job?" M. C.

Explaining About "The Mollusc"

By Sheppard Butler.

ONE never does things just right. "Why," asks a gently querulous correspondent, "do you completely ignore the delightful comedy so perfectly cast and played by Mr. Arliss and his company? I agree with you most enthusiastically in your praise about that exquisite bit of acting in 'A Well Remembered Voice,' but I think it a pity not to call the attention of those who love something truly delicious (sic) on the stage to 'The Mollusc.' Can you conveniently mention when and by whom it was played here before?"

Well, "The Mollusc" was not utterly ignored in these columns, but there were reasons for its being given little more than passing attention. Perhaps you will find it diverting to have them enumerated.

First—The reportorial mind, popularly supposed to be chronically on tiptoe with eager interest in anything and everything, really moves in rather orthodox channels. We recorders of the day's doings get to be about as provincial in our own way as any of you, and one of the symptoms of this condition is that, no matter how vital a topic may be, it will be given scant attention in any newspaper office after some one has made the wet blanket remark, "That's been printed." "The Mollusc" has been played in Chicago before—played, reviewed and discussed in detail—so the newsgatherer's instinct was to dismiss it with a word. Having been a reporter I suppose I'm still in the rut.

Second—Mr. Arliss' performance in the little Barrie play is a notably beautiful achievement, the like of which you will not encounter in many weeks of playgoing.

And third—His performance in "The Mollusc" is not by any means notable. It is adequate enough, but you could name offhand a dozen actors who would do better by the rôle of the typical Englishman, with his veneer of brisk Colorado mannerisms. This sort of thing simply isn't the Arliss métier. The play is an engaging comedy, and in this instance its central figure is capitally visualized by Miss [illegible] Birkett, who is largely responsible for keeping things moving as they do. But as for Mr. Arliss, he himself, I think, would be the first to list "The Mollusc" as a passing incident rather than as a milestone in his career.

Still and all, as they say, the comedy, even now, is well worth this belated half column. Its theory of molluscs presents an amusing bit of philosophy about folks, much as did Gelett Burgess' droll little monograph which set us all talking, years ago, about bromides.

A mollusc, you know, is one who "uses force to do nothing when it's so much easier to do something." She will use every wile at her command to get you to bring her a book from across the room rather than go over and pick it up herself. She is not lazy; on the contrary, she "spends all her energy and ingenuity in sticking instead of moving." And you may imagine that reforming a mollusc, as they do in the play, is a highly entertaining proceeding.

As to when and by whom "The Mollusc" was played here before: Kyrle Bellew and Miss Isabel Irving presented it at Powers' nine years ago. That was its only Chicago hearing, aside from the present one, but it was played elsewhere in this country at different times by Joseph Coyne and Miss Alexandra Carlisle; by Miss May Irwin, who interpolated some songs and experimented with it for a week or two, and by the late Sir Charles Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore.

Mr. Arliss' production, therefore, is the fifth in the United States. No one has ever succeeded in making a deep impression with the comedy on this side the Atlantic, though in England, where it originated, it brought much fame to its author, Hubert Henry Davies.

Rehearsals began last week for Henry Miller's production of the play by Philip Moeller, entitled "Moliere," which promises to be one of the notable theatrical events of the year. This has been finely cast, with Mr. Miller in the title rôle, Miss Blanche Bates in the part of Madame de Montespan, and Holbrook Blinn appearing as Louis XIV. The scenes of the play are laid in the Palais Royal and the Louvre as they were in 1670. In addition to the principals, many courtiers, ladies in waiting, and other decorative characters are involved in the proceedings. Moeller is the author of "Madame Sand," in which Mrs. Fiske appeared a year ago.

Miss Patricia Collinge, it is told, is due at the Blackstone Feb. 24 with "Tillie," a play made from Mrs. Helen R. Martin's more or less widely read novel, "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid." She will have the assistance of John W. Ransome, Miss Maude Granger, Miss Mildred Booth, and many others. Mr. Arliss departs on Feb. 22.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will terminate their engagement at the Woods on March 1. Arrangements are under way for an entertainment to succeed them, but they had not been completed when these lines were written.

Concerning Mlle. Tavie Belge, pictured on this page, her press agent vouchsafes the information that she became prima donna of the Royal Opera house in Antwerp at the age of 16 and sang there continuously until the day the fortress fell to the Germans. After that she toured Canada, giving concerts for the benefit of the various Belgian relief organizations. She was, it is said, a genuine refugee, having been penniless when they engaged her for the leading rôle in "Fiddlers Three," which we shall see at the Olympic this evening.

About Mr. Stock and Others

By Frederick Donaghey.

MR. STOCK is back in the news, as a result of his visit on Friday to the naturalization officials; and I'm not lonely in thinking that he should be back on the dais in Orchestra hall, as well. When the situation of his lack of citizenship arose, his record of doings and of sayings was gone into with, doubtless utter scrupulousness; and it is known that nothing was turned up to reflect upon his conduct or his attitude in his long residence among us. He had been made by countless devices, many of which were friendly and well-meant, correctly to assay the position into which he had drifted through neglect in not becoming a citizen; and he carried himself through the ordeal with tact, with decency and manliness, and with dignity.

In accepting his resignation on the verge of the season, the executives of the Orchestral Association may be presumed to have bestowed sound thought upon the condition of the general mind at the time; and, though the outcries about the Orchestra's conductor were largely spurious, a sense of the public temper was, in the special conditions of the day, not a bad aspect of the case as the directors pondered it.

The fact persists that Mr. Stock had done nothing against the United States. I have not thought of asking him; but it seems, from what I know of the average citizen, a safe bet that none of us, in all the years from his immigration to his immolation, ever, even by implication, gave reason for him to think that he ought to be a citizen. It was not our habit to talk so with aliens of any nationality; and those of us who thought nationally about such things knew that we were making too many citizens with too little caution. I believe, and have ever believed, in the ideal of this United States as the greatest of nations standing alone, if need be, against the remainder of the world; and never once was I moved to say to the foreigner among us: "Come: put on your hat, go over to the federal building with me, and become an American." Neither did you, nor you: all of us forget that little thing.

If there were anything against Mr. Stock's record of residence, fifty processes of naturalization now would not be rightful atonement, nor a sane reason for restoring him to his position. Nor would the signing of peace and the resumption of amiable dealings with the foe be a valid argument in his behalf, although we are turning loose, with full pay for time lost, the conscientious objectors whom we fed and housed while the conscienceless fared away to fight and die. And, so far as research has disclosed, Mr. Stock has done nothing.

MEANWHILE Chicago has suffered through the inevitable and to-be-expected deterioration of what is, I think, chief among its known esthetic assets—meaning the Orchestra. All the deputy-conductors, and guest-conductors, and visiting-conductors, and composer-conductors since Music, heavenly maid, was young could not keep an organization of the kind at par in the absence of the spirit and influence which worked, and urged, and humored, and inspired it till it shone out, some seasons ago, as the First Orchestra—the best in all the world. It was not that when the founder left it forever, in 1905. Under Stock, it caught up to, it went along with, and it passed in sheer musical efficiency, skill, versatility, and art all the older orchestras, including Boston's and the best in Europe.

This, of itself, were not a reason for putting Mr. Stock back, if he had moved, or even talked, against the nation. He has done nothing.

The Prokofieffs and the Gabrilówitsches, the Kneisels and the Weidigs, the Chadwicks and the Sokoloffs have given us diversion in their brief turns with the baton; and the visitors to come, like Victor Herbert and the pepful Polacco, will do likewise, I expect. But great orchestras are not kept up by such processes; and Chicago's would not long survive the system. As to Mr. DeLamarter, nothing save credit and praise belongs to him; and I still suspect, as I did when he was named, that no better man could have been put in pending the adjustment of Mr. Stock's citizenship.

RAISA remains an invalid; and Campanini, in New York, is being put to it to make répertoire. Both "Pelléas and Mélisande" and "The Juggler," neither used in the Auditorium season, have been given—with Garden, of course; and she has been heard there as Thaïs, too. Save for Galli-Curci's pieces, the Italian répertoire is wellnigh out of commission: Fitziu doesn't go any farther there than here as a substitute for Raisa. Little Miura's Butterfly not only helps out, but elicits rapturous yells from the reviewers. Dolci, a great tenor whom Chicago harbored for ten weeks without waking up to the circumstance, did not get a hearing in opera until Friday night, when he went on with Galli-Curci in "Lucia," and made the capacity crowd she drew tear up its hats in delight.

The critics have been having a grand time with the Chicago company, they think. Most of them discovered within twenty-four hours after hearing it that "Linda" was not so modern as "Pelléas"; and nearly all of them have sapiently let their readers in on their special stock of information that Mary Garden's is not among the world's great voices. Then, their personal recollections of the youth of Patti and the girlhood of Sembrich make fine reading, if you can keep from laughing: they learned about Patti on her farewell tour, and first heard Sembrich when, in her maturity, she returned to the United States in 1898.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT

The installments of Col. Roosevelt's autobiography printed in The Daily Tribune since last Sunday cover his experiences in the latter part of his career in the New York legislature, his battles for reform measures, and his defeat in the speakership contest in the state assembly. Then follows an account of his ranch life in the west, which is continued in the installment herewith.

[Copyright: 1919: By the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

INSTALLMENT XXII.

WHEN I went west, the last great Indian wars had just come to an end, but there were still sporadic outbreaks here and there, and occasionally bands of marauding young braves were a menace to outlying and lonely settlements. Many of the white men were themselves lawless and brutal, and prone to commit outrages on the Indians. Unfortunately, each race tended to hold all the members of the other race responsible for the misdeeds of a few, so that the crime of the miscreant, red or white, who committed the original outrage too often invited retaliation upon entirely innocent people, and this action would in turn arouse bitter feeling which found vent in still more indiscriminate retaliation.

The first year I was on the Little Missouri some Sioux bucks ran off all the horses of a buffalo hunter's outfit. One of the buffalo hunters tried to get even by stealing the horses of a Cheyenne hunting party, and when pursued made for a cow camp, with, as a result, a long range skirmish between the cowboys and the Cheyennes. One of the latter was wounded; but this particular wounded man seemed to have more sense than the other participants in the chain of wrong doing, and discriminated among the whites. He came into our camp and had his wound dressed.

A year later I was at a desolate little mud road ranch on the Deadwood trail. It was kept by a very capable and very forceful woman, with sound ideas of justice and abundantly well able to hold her own. Her husband was a worthless devil, who finally got drunk on some whisky he obtained from an outfit of Missouri bull whackers—that is, freighters, driving ox wagons. Under the stimulus of the whisky he picked a quarrel with his wife and attempted to beat her. She knocked him down with a stove lid lifter, and the admiring bull whackers bore him off, leaving the lady in full possession of the ranch. When I visited her she had a man named Crow Joe working for her, a slab sided, shifty eyed person who later, as I heard my foreman explain, "skipped the country with a bunch of horses." The mistress of the ranch made first class buckskin shirts of great durability. The one she made for me, and which I used for years, was used by one of my sons in Arizona a couple of winters ago.

I had ridden down into the country after some lost horses, and visited the ranch to get her to make me the buckskin shirt in question. There were, at the moment, three Indians there, Sioux, well behaved and self-respecting, and she explained to me that they had been resting there waiting for dinner, and that a white man had come along and tried to run off their horses. The Indians were on the lookout, however, and, running out, they caught the man; but, after retaking their horses and depriving him of his gun, they let him go. "I don't see why they let him go," exclaimed my hostess. "I don't believe in stealing Indians' horses any more than white folks'; so I told 'em they could go along and hang him—I'd never cheep. Anyhow, I won't charge them anything for their dinner," concluded my hostess. She was in advance of the usual morality of the time and place, which drew a sharp line between stealing citizens' horses and stealing horses from the government or the Indians.

A fairly decent citizen, Jap Hunt, who long ago met a violent death, exemplified this attitude towards Indians in some remarks I once heard him make. He had started a horse ranch, and had quite honestly purchased a number of broken down horses of different brands, with the view of doctoring them and selling them again. About this time there had been much horse stealing and cattle killing in our territory and in Montana, and under the direction of some of the big cattle growers a committee of vigilantes had been organized to take action against the rustlers, as the horse thieves and cattle thieves were called. The vigilantes, or stranglers, as they were locally known, did their work thoroughly; but, as always happens with bodies of the kind, toward the end they grew reckless in their actions, paid off private grudges, and hung men on slight provocation. Riding into Jap Hunt's ranch, they nearly hung him because he had so many horses of different brands. He was finally let off. He was much upset by the incident, and explained again and again, "The idea of saying that I was a horse thief! Why, I never stole a horse in my life—leastways from a white man. I don't count Indians nor the government, of course." Jap had been reared among men still in the stage of tribal morality, and while they recognized their obligations to one another, both the government and the Indians seemed alien bodies, in regard to which the laws of morality did not apply.

Indians Show Treachery.

ON the other hand, parties of savage young bucks would treat lonely settlers just as badly, and in addition sometimes murder them. Such a party was generally composed of young fellows burning to distinguish themselves. Some one of their number would have obtained a pass from the Indian agent allowing him to travel off the reservation, which pass would be flourished whenever their action was questioned by bodies of whites of equal strength. I once had a trifling encounter with such a band. I was making my way along the edge of the bad lands, northward from my lower ranch, and was just crossing a plateau when five Indians rode up over the further rim. The instant they saw me they whipped out their guns and raced full speed at me, yelling and flogging their horses. I was on a favorite horse, Manitou, who was a wise old fellow, with nerves not to be shaken by anything. I at once leaped off him and stood with my rifle ready.

It was possible that the Indians were merely making a bluff and intended no mischief. But I did not like their actions, and I thought it likely that if I allowed them to get hold of me they would at least take my horse and rifle, and possibly kill me. So I waited until they were a hundred yards off and then drew a bead on the first. Indians—and, for the matter of that, white men—do not like to ride in on a man who is cool and means shooting, and in a twinkling every man was lying over the side of his horse, and all five had turned and were galloping backwards, having altered their course as quickly as so many teal ducks.

After this one of them made the peace sign, with his blanket first, and then, as he rode toward me, with his open hand. I halted him at a fair distance and asked him what he wanted. He exclaimed, "How! Me good Injun, me good Injun," and tried to show me the dirty piece of paper on which his agency pass was written. I told him with sincerity that I was glad that he was a good Indian, but that he must not come any closer. He then asked for sugar and tobacco. I told him I had none. Another Indian began slowly drifting toward me in spite of my calling out to keep back, so I once more aimed with my rifle, whereupon both Indians slipped to the other side of their horses and galloped off, with oaths that did credit to at least one side of their acquaintance with English. I now mounted and pushed over the plateau on to the open prairie. In those days an Indian, although not as good a shot as a white man, was infinitely better at crawling under and taking advantage of cover; and the worst thing a white man could do was to get into cover, whereas out in the open if he kept his head he had a good chance of standing off even half a dozen assailants. The Indians accompanied me for a couple of miles. Then I reached the open prairie, and resumed my northward ride, not being further molested.

In the old days in the ranch country we depended upon game for fresh meat. Nobody liked to kill a beef, and although now and then a maverick yearling might be killed on the round-up, most of us looked askance at the deed, because if the practice of beef-killing was ever allowed to start, the rustlers—the horse thieves and cattle thieves—would be sure to seize on it as an excuse for general slaughter. Getting meat for the ranch usually devolved upon me. I almost always carried a rifle when I rode, either in a scabbard under my thigh, or across the pommel. Often I would pick up a deer or antelope while about my regular work, when visiting a line camp or riding after the cattle. At other times I would make a day's trip after them. In the fall we sometimes took a wagon and made a week's hunt, returning with eight or ten deer carcasses, and perhaps an elk or a mountain sheep as well. I never became more than a fair hunter, and at times I had most exasperating experiences, either failing to see game which I ought to have seen, or committing some blunder in the stalk, or failing to kill when I fired. Looking back, I am inclined to say that if I had any good quality as a hunter it was that of perseverance. "It is dogged that does it" in hunting as in many other things. Unless in wholly exceptional cases, when we were very hungry, I never killed anything but bucks.

Occasionally I made long trips away from the ranch and among the Rocky mountains with my ranch foreman, Merrifield; or in later years with Tazewell Woody, John Willis, or John Goff. We hunted bears, both the black and the grizzly, cougars and wolves, and moose, wapiti, and white goat. On one of these trips I killed a bison bull, and I also killed a bison bull on the Little Missouri some fifty miles south of my ranch on a trip which Joe Ferris and I took together. It was rather a rough trip. Each of us carried only his slicker behind him on the saddle, with some flour and bacon done up in it. We met with all kinds of misadventures. Finally one night, when we were sleeping by a slimy little prairie pool where there was not a stick of wood, we had to tie the horses to the horns of our saddles; and then we went to sleep with our heads on the saddles. In the middle of the night something stampeded the horses, and away they went, with the saddles after them. As we jumped to our feet Joe eyed me with an evident suspicion that I was the Jonah of the party, and said: "O, Lord! I've never done anything to deserve this. Did you ever do anything to deserve this?"

Served as Deputy Sheriff.

IN addition to my private duties, I sometimes served as deputy sheriff for the northern end of our county. The sheriff and I crisscrossed in our public and private relations. He often worked for me as a hired hand at the same time that I was his deputy. His name, or at least the name he went by, was Bill Jones, and as there were in the neighborhood several Bill Joneses—Three Seven Bill Jones, Texas Bill Jones, and the like—the sheriff was known as Hell Roaring Bill Jones. He was a thorough frontiersman, excellent in all kinds of emergencies, and a very game man. I became much attached to him. He was a thoroughly good citizen when sober, but he was a little wild when drunk. Unfortunately, toward the end of his life he got to drinking very heavily. When, in 1905, John Burroughs and I visited the Yellowstone park, poor Bill Jones, very much down in the world, was driving a team in Gardiner outside the park. I had looked forward to seeing him, and he was equally anxious to see me. He kept telling his cronies of our intimacy and of what we were going to do together, and then got drinking; and the result was that by the time I reached Gardiner he had to be carried out and left in the sage brush. When I came out of the park, I sent on in advance to tell them to be sure to keep him sober, and they did so. But it was a rather sad interview. The old fellow had gone to pieces, and soon after I left he got lost in a blizzard and was dead when they found him.

Bill Jones was a gun fighter and also a good man with his fists. On one occasion there was an election in town. There had been many threats that the party of disorder would import section hands from the neighboring railway stations to down our side. I did not reach Medora, the forlorn little cattle town which was our county seat, until the election was well under way. I then asked one of my friends if there had been any disorder. Bill Jones was standing by. "Disorder, hell!" said my friend. "Bill Jones just stood there with one hand on the gun and the other pointing over toward the new jail whenever any man who didn't have a right to vote came near the polls. There was only one of them tried to vote, and Bill knocked him down. Lord!" added my friend, meditatively, "the way that man fell!" "Well," struck in Bill Jones, "if he hadn't fell I'd have walked round behind him to see what was propping him up!"

Spent Winter in East.

IN the days when I lived on the ranch I usually spent most of the winters in the east, and when I returned in the early spring I was always interested in finding out what had happened since my departure. On one occasion I was met by Bill Jones and Sylvane Ferris, and in the course of our conversation they mentioned "the lunatic." This led to a question on my part, and Sylvane Ferris began the story: "Well, you see, he was on a train and he shot the newsboy. At first they weren't going to do anything to him, for they thought he just had it in for the newsboy. But then somebody said, 'Why, he's plumb crazy, and he's liable to shoot any of us!' and then they threw him off the train. It was here at Medora, and they asked if anybody would take care of him, and Bill Jones said he would, because he was the sheriff and the jail had two rooms, and he was living in one and would put the lunatic in the other." Here Bill Jones interrupted: "Yes and more fool me! I wouldn't take charge of another lunatic if the whole county asked me. Why" (with the air of a man announcing an astounding discovery), "that lunatic didn't have his right senses! He wouldn't eat, till me and Snyder got him down on the shavings and made him eat."

Snyder was a huge, happy go lucky, kind hearted Pennsylvania Dutchman, and was Bill Jones' chief deputy. Bill continued: "You know, Snyder's soft hearted, he is. Well, he'd think that lunatic looked peaked, and he'd take him out for an airing. Then the boys would get joshing him as to how much start he could give him over the prairie and catch him again." Apparently the amount of the start given the lunatic depended upon the amount of the bet to which the joshing led up. I asked Bill what he would have done if Snyder hadn't caught the lunatic. This was evidently a new idea, and he responded that Snyder always did catch him. "Well, but suppose he hadn't caught him?" "Well," said Bill Jones, "if Snyder hadn't caught the lunatic, I'd have whaled hell out of Snyder!"

Under these circumstances Snyder ran his best and always did catch the patient. It must not be gathered from this that the lunatic was badly treated. He was well treated. He became greatly attached to both Bill Jones and Snyder, and he objected strongly when, after the frontier theory of treatment of the insane had received a full trial, he was finally sent off to the territorial capital. It was merely that all the relations of life in that place and day were so managed as to give ample opportunity for the expression of individuality, whether in sheriff or ranchman. The local practical joker once attempted to have some fun at the expense of the lunatic, and Bill Jones described the result. "You know Bixby, don't you? Well," with deep disapproval, "Bixby thinks he is funny, he does. He'd come and he'd wake that lunatic up at night, and I'd have to get up and soothe him. I fixed Bixby all right, though. I fastened a rope on the latch, and next time Bixby came I let the lunatic out on him. He 'most bit Bixby's nose off. I learned Bixby!"

Bill Jones had been unconventional in other relations besides that of sheriff. He once casually mentioned to me that he had served on the police force of Bismarck, but he had left because he "beat the mayor over the head with his gun one day." He added: "The mayor, he didn't mind it, but the superintendent of police said he guessed I'd better resign." His feeling, obviously, was that the superintendent of police was a martinet, unfit to take large views of life.

It was while with Bill Jones that I first made acquaintance with Seth Bullock. Seth was at that time sheriff in the Black Hills district, and a man he had wanted—a horse thief—I finally got, I being at the time deputy sheriff two or three hundred miles to the north. The man went by a nickname which I will call "Crazy Steve"; a year or two afterwards I received a letter asking about him from his uncle, a thoroughly respectable man in a western state; and later this uncle and I met in Washington when I was president and he a United States senator.

It was some time after "Steve's" capture that I went down to Deadwood on business, Sylvane Ferris and I on horseback, while Bill Jones drove the wagon. At a little town, Spearfish, I think, after crossing the last eighty or ninety miles of gumbo prairie, we met Seth Bullock. We had had rather a rough trip, and had lain out for a fortnight, so I suppose we looked somewhat unkempt. Seth received us with rather distant courtesy at first, but unbent when he found out who we were, remarking, "You see, by your looks I thought you were some kind of a tin horn gambling outfit, and that I might have to keep an eye on you!" He then inquired after the capture of "Steve"—with a little of the air of one sportsman when another has shot a quail that either might have claimed—"My bird, I believe?"

Playbills

OPENINGS.

Olympic — "Fiddlers Three," a musical comedy by William Cary Duncan and Alexander Johnstone, with Mlle. Tavie Belge, a prima donna from Belgium; Hal Skelley, Thomas Conkey, Miss Louise Groody, Joseph Miller, Miss Josie Intropidi, and numerous others. First time tonight.

Princess—"The Overseas Revue," a song-and-dance affair which professes to show how they entertained the doughboys back of the trenches. Miss Elizabeth Brice, back from "over there," is the principal player, and the others include Will Morrissey, Miss May Boley, Clarence Nordstrom, Lon Hascall, Mlle. Marcelle Carroll, and several "acts" from the varieties. First time tonight.

DRAMA.

Blackstone—George Arliss and a company of efficient associates in a double bill, comprising Hubert Henry Davies' brilliant comedy, "The Mollusc," and Sir James Matthew Barrie's mystical playlet, "A Well Remembered Voice." Distinguished entertainment.

Powers'—"Tiger Rose," a lurid melodrama, of which Mr. Belasco has made capital entertainment by bestowing upon it his characteristic stagecraft and the fine acting of Miss Lenore Ulric and other distinguished players. Extra matinées will be given on the Friday afternoons of this week and next.

Studebaker — "The Masquerader," a dramatization of a "best seller" of a dozen years back, notable chiefly for the opportunity it gives Guy Bates Post, a good actor, in the dual rôle around which the play is built. Mr. Post gives a good account of himself.

Garrick—"Business Before Pleasure," Alexander Carr and Barney Bernard in another of the Potash and Perlmutter plays. On the whole, the best of the series.

Woods'—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in "Keep Her Smiling," a comedy of the type they have made popular in the movies, with the added interest of hearing 'em talk.

Cort—"Old Lady 31," a placid little comedy about an old ladies' home, engagingly played by Miss Effie Ellsler, Scott Cooper, and an interesting cast of old-timers.

Wilson Avenue—The North Shore players in "Lilac Time," the first of a series of stock productions to which this playhouse will be devoted hereafter. Miss Mildred Davis, Miss Marie Nelson, Miss Lillian Drew, and Rodney Ranous will have the principal rôles.

Victoria—"Mutt and Jeff in the Woolly West."

National—"The Brat."

Imperial—"Bringing Up Father."

WORDS AND MUSIC.

Auditorium—"Chu Chin Chow," the dazzling and opulent spectacle ever seen around these parts. The background is marvelous, the music delightful, though the band plays it too loud, and the players of varying degrees of excellence.

Colonial—The "Ziegfeld Follies," our annual obeisance at the shrine of pagan loveliness.

Cohan's Grand—"Going Up," a musical comedy with some of the best music current in the theater.

Illinois—Mitzi in "Head Over Heels," a commonplace musical comedy which the ubiquitous star turns into a gorgeous romp.

La Salle—"See You Later," a farce with fetching tunes, good dancing, and droll nonsense by T. Roy Barnes and Victor Moore.

VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Miss Lillian Russell in songs; Harry Watson Jr., Al Herman, and others.

Palace—Miss Blossom Seeley, Robert Holden, and Bennett Johnstone in "On the High Seas," Carl Jorn, etc.

Rialto—"He's A Devil," Edna May Foster and Grant Gardner are the headliners.

McVicker's—Willard's Fantasy of Jewels, Richard the Great, George M. Rosener, et al.

Great Northern—The Great Northern players in "Maggie Taylor—Waitress," with a bill of variety.

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—"Girls de Looks," with Joseph K. Watson and Will H. Cohan.

Star and Garter—"Bon Ton Girls," with Lester Allen.

Mme. Bertha Kalich approaches a Chicago playhouse as yet unnamed with "The Riddle: Woman," her most recent venture.

At the Illinois Mitzi, in "Head Over Heels," is present under one of those contracts which provide that the play shall remain as long as it attracts a stipulated number of spectators. This leaves it somewhat uncertain as to when De Wolf Hopper will arrive with "The Better 'Ole," but his coming is definitely scheduled as an event of the near future. It is curious that production of the Bairnsfather play in Chicago should have been so long delayed. It has been enormously successful elsewhere.

A London opus which is heading for these shores is "Nurse Benson," which Miss Marie Lohr, now an actress manager, has long been playing. The Frohman company has acquired the American rights, and it is probable that the play will be Miss Ethel Barrymore's vehicle next season. The piece is a comedy by R. C. Carton and Justin Huntley McCarthy.

Chu Chin Chow

ASHTON STEVENS
In the Chicago Herald and Examiner, wrote:
"Chu Chin Chow" is the most beautiful production of our time. An orgy—someone is bound to say—but oh, what a finely ordered orgy. The most artistic show I have seen on the American stage.

AMY LESLIE
In the Daily News, wrote:
"Chu Chin Chow" is of thrilling beauty. Scenes of splendor at the Auditorium. A saturnalia of pictorials never before realized in spectacle. It surpasses all the opiate dreams of song and story.

SHEPPARD BUTLER
In the Chicago Tribune, wrote:
"Chu Chin Chow" is a dazzling exhibition of showmanship. The palaces, the slave market, the robbers' cave, are spacious scenes, opulent with color, and taxing the Auditorium stage to the utmost.

O. L. HALL
In the Chicago Journal, wrote:
"Chu Chin Chow" is a flaming extravaganza of the Orient. A dazzling pageant of the Bagdad of the Arabian Nights staged at the Auditorium. Many gorgeous scenes. In the field of pure extravaganza there has been nothing to compare with "Chu Chin Chow," nothing so filled with amazements, nothing to match it in pictorial grandeur.

About Mr. Stock and Others

...believes that she forced the armistice through her agitation against music by German composers, has been complaining to the Japanese ambassador about a countryman of his who, in preparing a program to conduct, included Wagner; and Japan is still in grave attendance on the peacemaking in Paris. I read that the French musicians have lifted the ban on Liszt, who wasn't banned in this country, and has been, I think, the pet composer of the pianists this season, so far as it is gone.

Mr. Huneker, in the New York Times, is pleading for Wagner operas in Italian if English be impracticable; and this is a good idea for managers who find Wagner profitable. Campanini doesn't. Dolci, Caruso, Crimi—any of the three would sing Wagner's tenors better than any German who has ever tried; and this is true of all the voices. Never has there been a German soprano who could sing the three Brünnhildes so well as Raisi would, if given the chance. I recall no instance where a dominant or important rôle in Wagner has not been sung better, one time or another, by non-German than by German performers, if I except two or three of the parts for contralto with Schumann-Heink when she was in her prime, twenty years ago.

BOTH Gabrilówitsch and Victor Herbert will be visitors with the Orchestra for the eighteenth pair of concerts, next week; the former to play the piano in Tschaikowsky's first concerto, and Herbert to conduct the program, which is made up to take in a suite by him called "Woodland Fancies," new to the répertoire. This is the date originally made with Gabrilówitsch in the belief that he would be able to get a line on Glière's third symphony, called "Ilia Mourometz"—the gigantic piece which Cyrus Hall McCormick brought from Russia for the Orchestra. It was edited and cut by Mr. Stock; and it were hardly humane to ask Mr. DeLamarter to learn the work in all the conditions of his job. So, Gabrilówitsch will come anyway; and, with the memory of his great performance last season in Brahms' second concerto, the Orchestra's clientèle will be glad to have him back at the keyboard.

Hulda Lashanska, a soprano who stirred up something like excitement at Miss Kinsolving's final Blackstone musical, is to sing with the Orchestra week after next, using matter from "Hérodiade" and "Carmen."

Thelma Given

Miss Given comes for the first time to Chicago this week to play in the Orchestra's Friday-Saturday concerts. She is one of Auer's pupils on the violin, but not, as her herald says, "the only girl in the celebrated group now in this country"; a young Chicagoan, Ruth Ray, is at least one other, and is soon to reappear after a postgraduate course with the veteran tutor. Miss Given has been getting in the east what, in the trade, are called "great notices"; and she approaches, at least, as a somebody.

Concerts and Recitals

THELMA GIVEN, who learned to play the violin under Leopold Auer, is the soloist in the week's Friday-Saturday program of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, under Mr. DeLamarter. She is new to Chicago. Her conveyance is a concerto by Conus, new to the répertoire. Another novelty in the bill is a suite by Felix Borowski for a ballet-pantomime, "Boudour"; and he will conduct it. Schumann's fourth symphony, Dvorák's overture called "Carnival," and Lalo's Norwegian Rhapsody are other matters of the seventeenth program.

The Orchestra, under Mr. DeLamarter, will give a concert on Tuesday at 4:15 p. m. in Mandel hall, University of Chicago, with Schubert's eighth (the Unfinished) symphony as the principal item.

Today.

3:00 and 4:15—Chicago Concert Ensemble: seventeenth concert. Proceeds for Armenian and Syrian relief; and Haig Gudeman, Armenian violinist, will take part in both concerts. Fullerton hall.

3:30—Flonbaley Quartet: third and final concert in series. The Playhouse.

3:30—Max Rosen, violinist, in recital: his second. Kimball hall.

3:30—Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, in recital: his third. Orchestra hall.

Monday.

8:15—Apollo club, under Harrison M. Wild: second concert. Cowen's cantata of "The Veil" and Florent Schmitt's setting of the Forty-second Psalm will be revived, with Cora Libberton, Frances Ingram, Warren Proctor, Louis Kreidler, and, at the organ, Edgar Nelson, and with an orchestra from the Chicago Symphony. Orchestra hall.

Thursday.

8:15—Mendelssohn club, under Mr. Wild: second concert. Frances Ingram, soloist. Orchestra hall.

4:30—Organ recital by Edwin Stanley Seder. No fee. Fourth Presbyterian church.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It came as a night letter from Akron, O. It read: "Wife and I on way one week New York beginning Monday shes crazy insists I ask you what we should see please fix schedule reply Pennsylvania hotel thanks."

Which is a pleasant little task. Picking plays for other people may sound simple, but it isn't. Not when they come from Akron, O., and you know nothing of their tastes. He might have used the rest of the fifty words telling us their favorite plays at home.

And before this Akron idea spreads let me add that I make neither a business nor a practice of furnishing playgoing schedules to Broadway visitors. Perfectly willing to assist as far as possible through the medium of this letter and always willing to advise—but if it should happen that all the folks coming to New York should decide to ask me where to go after they got here—well, you can imagine what it would be like.

However, I shall do my best for Mr. and Mrs. Akron, and it may be I will thus be of help to Mr. and Mrs. Sandusky, Mr. and Mrs. Peoria, and various other friends and well wishers, who frequently seek counsel.

In doing this I am jumping quickly to several important conclusions. (1) That Mr. and Mrs. Akron are average folk at home, but inclined to be what they term a bit sporty in New York; (2) that they want to see as many of the plays they hear talked about as they can; (3) that their taste in theatricals is that of the playgoer who likes a good show, y'understand, but doesn't believe in paying a lotta money for a bad one; (4) that they want to crowd into their one New York week all the playgoing possible; (5) that the "shes crazy" of the telegram refers to Mrs. A.'s fondness for the theater, and (6) that they have seen, or will have an opportunity of seeing in Akron, such older successes as "Three Faces East," "Friendly Enemies," etc., already on tour.

As a matter of fact, they probably will want to hear one or more operas, and just now they have the two largest singing organizations in the world, both the Metropolitan and the Chicago companies, here to choose from. But they will have to make their own choice and their own substitution of opera for plays.

In the theater I would start them off Monday night to see "Lightnin'," a good, wholesome, amusing light comedy with Frank Bacon giving an appealing performance in the leading character. And from "Lightnin'" I would send them to the New Amsterdam roof to see Mr. Ziegfeld's newest "Midnight Frolic," thus giving them for their first night out a taste of the most characteristic form of entertainment to which theatrical Broadway lays claim.

Tuesday will be their first real day and probably they will still be keen as mustard for the theater. There is a Tuesday matinée at the Winter Garden, offering a chance to compare the big musical creations of the city with those that afterward reach Akron. By Tuesday night they will be ready for a bit of real drama, and I would suggest Jack Barrymore's splendidly vital performance in Tolstoi's "Redemption," followed by a bit of supper and dancing at the Cascades, say, or any of the big hotel supper rooms, if the artistic gloom of the Russian play has inspired the need of an antidote.

By Wednesday Father Akron will likely have begun to falter and to have met several business acquaintances who will demand his time, so we will send mother to see Barrie's "Dear Brutus," with William Gillette, at the Empire, or Winthrop Ames' beautiful production of Maeterlinck's "The Betrothal" at the Century in the afternoon, and at night they can go together to see Julia Sanderson and Joseph Cawthorne in "The Canary" at the Globe, with another cabaret to follow if they are equal to it. Something tells me, however, a good night's sleep will be welcome by midnight Wednesday.

Thursday offers a chance for another extra matinée. Alice Brady is playing an appealing melodrama that the women folk love and the men sniffle through called "Forever After" at the Playhouse. Mother Akron will enjoy it, I'm sure, and father, too, if she can drag him to it. At night they might see "Tea for Three," thus letting the day be filled with drama and topped off with music at a midnight supper at Mr. Healey's "Golden Glades," or one of the other elaborate restaurant shows.

By Friday they will begin to feel a bit conscience stricken. Have they really made the most of their time? Have they seen the best acting? Or only the most popular? So if Walter Hampden is still playing "the best Hamlet of our day" Friday afternoons at the Plymouth they might go there, and in the evening to see the Dunsany plays at the Punch and Judy, and thus do a reasonable penance for their sins. On the other hand, father probably will have discovered a farce called "Up in Mabel's Room" by that time, or want to see the Hippodrome, which he always misses when he comes alone. And the night's compromise might well be Frances Starr's return to her "Easiest Way" form in Knoblock's "Tiger! Tiger!" at the Belasco.

Saturday will be a big day. They will want to celebrate from noon till very, very late. Time enough to sleep at home. And there are so many things they have missed. Well, one can't see everything—not in a week. So we will give them their choice between Fay Bainter's "East Is West" and George Cohan's "A Prince There Was" for the matinée, send them to see Leo Ditrichstein in "The Marquis de Priola" at night, take them from there to the "Midnight Whirl" on the Century theater roof, and then, when it is late and they are still hungry, drop them in at the lowly Child's in Columbus circle that they may have a glimpse of what night life in New York may be like after July 1. Everything else is closed now, but all the girls and boys, all the gay old rounders with their thinning hair combed across their bald spots like lines on a map of the enemy's trenches in France; all the soldiers taking chances on catching the early morning trains and thus getting back to camp before reveille, are here crowding each other along the sides of the tables, set end to end to save space. And I hope the Akron train leaves late Sunday afternoon.

PICTURE EXCHANGE LIVELY.

By Mae Tinée.

WELL, collectors, how're the collections coming along? Judging from my mail, barter and exchange have been lively this week. There seems to be a pretty good supply of Clara Kimball Young, but a shortage of Viola Dana. One boy has six William Farnums, but can't locate a Harrison Forde. Lillian Gish will be traded for Dorothy upon application, and a little girl with two Bessie Loves would be much obliged for Bessie Barriscale.

So it goes. And the collection grows (anything for a rhyme)—and here in THE TRIBUNE office is your Auntie Mae ready to help you each Sunday with two nice pictures in the rotogravure section, accompanied by life sketches prepared by herself.

Come to think of it, maybe some of you don't know what all this is about—if in some way you missed your paper last Sunday. This is the idea:

There's a new fad among the school boys and girls—getting collections of the pictures of their film favorites. They're trading back and forth, just as in other days they used to "swap" marbles, and pencils, and rings, and "all day suckers."

When I heard of the fad I became interested—that sort of game is right in my line, of course—and offered to help. Each Sunday, I promised, two pictures of picture folk should appear in the rotogravure section and to go with them I would write informative stories. So that if it was the desire to keep an album, the fans would have pictures of uniform size, accompanied with all the data regarding their favorites.

I'll be glad to have you write and tell me how the collections are progressing and to receive suggestions as to what pictures shall appear in the roto section.

Think what a wonderful thing such a picture album will be to present to our grandchildren!

(I never thought of that before!)

George Kleine is exultant over the fact that the company was requested to provide a print of "Quo Vadis" to assist in the entertainment of the presidential party while on shipboard during the return journey. Mr. Kleine writes that the film was delivered with but few changes just as it came out in 1912.

"Snowed in" is the word Metro has been receiving from the company headed by Anna Q. Nilsson, which recently went to Truckee, Cal., to photograph snow scenes for a coming production. No alarm is felt for the players, however, as they are said to have prepared themselves in every way against just such an emergency.

That bright little person, Bessie Barriscale, says that the person who declares he's tired of pictures doesn't really mean what he says. She says it isn't the pictures that tire him—it's what he is made to live through before he sees the picture.

"I went to see a feature recently," she confided to a friend, "and here's what it looked like to me:

"There followed five reels of picture that I was too numb to understand."

Louise Lovely is to work for Metro, supporting Hale Hamilton.

Dolores Cassinelli, it is rumored, is to play in a series of pictures adapted from the works of Gabriel D'Annunzio. Remember his "Cabiria"?

Charles Ray fought a winning battle with the influenza and is now back at work again. His directors, however, see that he toils only a few hours each day. Mr. Ray wishes me to tell you how much he appreciated your letters of sympathy and good will.

Just heard that Dustin Farnum is a great-grandson of Daniel Webster. Did you know it?

Judging from a letter received by the Select company the college students in State college, Pennsylvania approve of Constance Talmadge. The letter is from a theater manager. This is it:

"Kindly send hereafter double the order of photos on all Constance Talmadge pictures. She is most popular here with the college students—in fact, so much so that before evening our photo frame is usually empty—when we're to show one of her pictures. . . ."

"How Long, O Movie World," implores the St. Paul Pioneer Press in an editorial, "will you starve the mind while the eyes are fed on an uninterrupted diet of—cream puffs? . . . There is a large element of the public, we believe, who like pictures and who are attracted by the beauty, personality, and cleverness of certain screen favorites. But they cannot watch these favorites in action without sitting through a pictorial debauch of cant, false ideals, improbabilities, and artificialities that are insulting to the intelligence and nauseating to the senses. . . . One could wish, then, that the development of scenario writers and editors would not lag behind that of the device which depends upon them for material."

The plot's the thing, all right—and it should be gotten right down to the brass tacks of every day living.

Hereafter Fritzi Brunette will be starred in Jesse D. Hampton productions.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Curry and Graham:

"Are you aware that you put your umbrella in my mouth last evening while walking up the stairs?"

"Very careless of me; very careless, I'm sure. I wondered what became of it, and—by the way, would it be too much trouble to ask you to return it?"

"Smoking produces selfishness."

"I don't believe it."

"Well, it does. Take, for instance, isn't a chimney always 'stuck up'?"

"Is the milk on your farm pasteurized?"

"Of course. I keep all the cows I've got in the pasture all summer long."

"Collect and congregate mean the same thing."

"Don't say that. It's a difference between a congregation and a collection."

"Some men wear their best pants out in the knees in the winter getting religious."

"And the seats of their trousers out in summer backsliding."

"I never yet saw a larger bill than the bill my duck has got."

"You ought to see my automobile tire bill."

"My face is my fortune."

"I never knew you were so poor."

"Where is the best place to keep milk during a hot summer day?"

"In the cow."

"When I die I shall be cremated as my husband was."

"Don't talk of such dreadful things. Just think how much better it would be in your case to cross out the 'c' in cremated and make the word 'remated.'"

"What business are you in now?"

"Ah, same old business."

"Stealing, eh?"

"How dare you insult me in that manner? Why don't you observe the golden rule?"

"What has the golden rule got to say?"

"Do unto others as you would have others do unto you?"

"You've got it wrong."

"How so?"

"Do others or the others will do you."

McVICKER'S.

Henry and Moore:

"There's a button off your coat."

"Where?"

"There."

"So it is."

"Sew it on."

"Yes, sew it on."

"But say, I want to tell you not to be butting into my business."

"Go on and tell me."

"I did tell you."

"I ain't butting in."

"Don't say you're not butting in, 'cause you're always butting in."

"At present, I'm a button out."

"Well, let's have a little song."

"No, let's have a little comfort."

"What do you mean by a comfort?"

"I mean for you to get off my foot."

"I ain't on your foot."

"You ain't on my foot? (Looks down to make sure). You ain't on my foot?"

"No, I'm not on your foot."

"You're too stupid for anything."

"By you calling me stupid—it just shows what a negoramous you are."

"A what?"

"A negoramous—negoramous. Don't you know what a negoramous is?"

"You mean an ignoramus."

"Negoramous."

"Ignoramous."

"Don't corrupt me, don't corrupt me. I'm said negoramous."

"Very well, we'll let an ignoramous call himself a negoramous."

"You don't know the first thing about animal kingdom. That shows what a negoramous you are."

Comment by Mme. X.

One Is to Take Part in Costume Ball; the Other Is Engaged.

Mrs. Paul Bartlett is to be one of the 1830 group at the Cordon costume ball on Friday in the foyer of Orchestra hall. In the absence of Miss Alice Roullier, who has gone to Florida for the season, Mrs. Bartlett and Miss Alice Gerstenberg will share the responsibilities of the group and will act as joint hostesses at the 1830 group dinner at the Cordon preceding the ball.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Blossom of Hubbard Woods announce the engagement of their daughter, Katharine, to William S. Bacon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Bacon of Macomb, Ill. The wedding will take place in June. Miss Blossom, who is one of the most attractive girls in society, is a member of the Junior league and is an ardent devotee of outdoor sports. With her parents she is spending the winter in New York. Mr. Bacon, who recently received his discharge from the army, was a lieutenant colonel in the chemical warfare service at Lakehurst, N. J.

Friends of Opera Combine to Back Chicago Company

By Mme. X.

WHAT a friendly folk we're getting to be! There are the friends of opera, the friends of South Michigan avenue, the friends of Russia, the friends of France, all busy in different directions. The Friends of Grand Opera, an enterprise born of Mrs. John Carpenter's fertile brain, got on its feet last Wednesday afternoon at a well attended meeting in Mrs. Carpenter's peacock blue drawing room.

The original founder and guardian angel of our present opera troupe, Mrs. Harold McCormick, was made honorary chairman of the association. She is now in Zurich, Switzerland, but perhaps this honorary chairmanship will be one more mesh in the net her friends are weaving to catch her and bring her back to Chicago. In the coming reorganization and remaking of this city she could be very helpful.

Mrs. R. T. Crane Jr. was continued as chairman, with Mesdames Joseph G. Coleman, Julius Rosenwald, Frederick Upham, and John A. Carpenter as vice chairmen, Charles G. Pike as treasurer, and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham as secretary, and Mrs. Eric Gerstenberg as head of the propaganda work.

The organization is to have an executive committee of twenty-one members—men and women—and is to have a general membership of probably between 100 and 200 to start with. Its aim is to make grand opera as much a part of our civic life as the Art institute and the Symphony orchestra.

Handles Box Sales.

It will handle the problem of selling the boxes and encourage the taking of season seats. It is proposed that those who take their boxes for three years shall have first choice and have the privilege of keeping the same box for that period, while those who only take their boxes from year to year cannot feel so sure of this continuity of occupation of the same seats. There's a certain solid satisfaction in being identified with a special opera box only equaled by the serious joy of sitting year after year and generation after generation in the same pew in church.

This organization aims to exercise a more or less guiding influence in the development of our opera in the kind of music to be favored, the choice of artists and programs, and will probably have much to say when comes the time to choose a new home for our opera.

That this is not far off seems probable. For a long time the Auditorium theater has been a not very profitable proposition to its owners, and rumor has it that as soon as the Chicago Grand Opera company's lease is up the building will be remodeled and turned into offices. Thus will be lost to us Chicagoans the—accoustically speaking—most perfect hall for music in the world. Miss Mary Garden, Mme. Galli-Curci, Muratore, and many other artists have all said that there is no place so well adapted for singing as our old, not very pretty, nor very chic Auditorium.

If only there would arise in our midst some great benefactor who would say, "I will build you the most beautiful opera house in the world just at that incomparable site, at the corner of Randolph street and Michigan avenue," what a grand and glorious feeling it would be!

Plans for Michigan Avenue.

Apropos of the Boul. Mich., my friend and fellow citizen, Miss Emily Larned, having been largely instrumental in establishing the motor bus in our midst, is again to the fore and this time she's undertaken an even harder job. She's trying to save Michigan avenue from its present slow decline into unsightly old age. She has called a meeting for tomorrow afternoon at the Blackstone hotel, when she hopes to form a society of friends of Michigan avenue.

She's summoning to the task all of those old inhabitants who, twenty or thirty years ago, built fine residences there from Sixteenth street down to Fortieth street, and who have since been forced out of their homes by the tides of fashion and business. She urges that circles, like the famous circles in Washington, be planted at intervals along South Michigan avenue. She suggests as the first one, "Roosevelt circle," at Thirty-third street, with a statute of the great colonel in the middle. She is especially anxious to set barriers up against the threatened African invasion, which now menaces the avenue.

I merely cite Miss Larned's undertaking as one more evidence of the irrepressible influx of the feminine into public matters, an active force which, if well directed, should be of great use in this city.

Consequent on Thomas Whittemore's recent stay here, friends of Russia and Mr. Whittemore have organized a committee to gather funds to aid the latter in his relief work in that sorely afflicted country.

Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Hugh McBirney, and Mrs. Russell Tyson are the nucleus of this undertaking.

The opening of the Black sea to commerce has made much easier the problem of getting supplies into Russia.

The common cry is, "Do what we may, millions must die of famine in Russia this winter, so what's the use of trying?" I don't think that any of those wretched men, women, and children whose lives may be saved by the help Mr. Whittemore is able to get to them will quite agree with this summing up of the hopelessness of the task.

On Travel Bent.

Society's latest bridal couple, the Frederic C. Bartletts, flitted through town last Monday and Tuesday on their way to China, looking handsome and happy. They are going to stay in the orient until late spring or early summer.

There's a general scattering of the clans just now. Mrs. Charles Brega and Miss Margaret Enders leave Chicago tomorrow to go across the sea to visit Mrs. Brega's daughter, Mrs. James, in London. The latter has not yet entirely recovered from the terrible strain of the nightly boche air raids of last winter and spring that made life hideous in the British capital.

Many Chicagoans remember Mrs. James when, as pretty and charming Miss Louise Brega, she was such a prominent figure in society here. She had soft, fluffy, brown hair, starry blue eyes, was excessively slender and excessively lively, and sang "Still wie die Nacht" in a way to melt the heart of the hardest. I am told that now her hair is quite silver in hue, that she no longer sings "Still wie die Nacht," and that she is not so gay as of yore. The war has left its mark on her as on many others.

A cheerful party will be the trio composed of Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. George C. Clarke, and Mrs. A. B. Dick, who go on Feb. 17 to visit Mrs. Clark of Pass Christian, La.

Ready for Liberty Loan Work.

Not every one is going away for pleasure, however. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is off again this week for a conference with the national women's Liberty loan committee at Washington, D. C., to make plans for floating the next national bond issue.

Mrs. William McAdoo is chairman of this committee, while other members are Mrs. Thomas Higginson of Boston and Mrs. George Bass of Chicago.

As an illuminating instance of the well organized ramifications of this committee is the response the committee made to a recent request of the secretary of the treasury, Carter Glass, as to what coöperation they could give him in a preliminary nationwide campaign to explain the why and wherefore of the new loan. After some conferring they said that in a fortnight they could put a million women on the job.

Some organization that — one that reaches into every school district and city precinct from Maine to California, from Florida to North Dakota!

Leaving for South America.

No one is undertaking a more varied and interesting trip to foreign parts than Mrs. Lorenzo Johnson of Winnetka, who sets forth in a few days, in company with her son and his wife, for Venezuela, where Mr. Johnson, as chargé d'affaires, will be in actual charge of the American legation during the absence of our minister there. It's a long and by no means easy journey to Caracas, the Venezuelan capital.

Mrs. Johnson expects to be back again by June in her attractive house, "Lasolas," on the bluffs of Winnetka.

When this country went into the war Mrs. Johnson made it possible for each of her three sons-in-law to go to his country's service by promising to look after the wife and family of each if they needed it. George Massey and Ayers Boal went into the navy, while Capt. Hardenbergh returned to the army, which he had left some years before to go into business.

Ayers Boal, who has been in command of a destroyer, is coming home in a day or so, while George Massey returned a week ago, after fifteen months of the hardest kind of service on the North sea, first as a mine layer and then as mine sweeper.

Capt. Hardenbergh is now a colonel and is still in service, though he is planning to return to civil life. The Hardenberghs, who have been camping out in a Winnetka apartment, will shortly move into their own house in Hubbard Woods. The Ayers Boals are in their own cozy brown house on Sheridan road, while nearby, in a quaint cottage on Mrs. Johnson's place, the George Masseys are enjoying the fruits of peace.

The whole thing is a family epic which has its like in thousands of American households. The return of our warriors is the chief event of the day. New York hotels are packed to overflowing with soldiers and sailors and their adoring families, who have come from all over the country to welcome them. Our own streets are daily filled with fresh batches of them in their jaunty overseas caps and smart belted coats. It is probable that never again in our lifetime shall we see anything so martial and stirring.

Paper Ball at the Casino.

It's some years since there's been enough heart in social circles to celebrate St. Valentine's day, but this year the old saint comes into his own again—at least he does at the Casino, where they're planning something completely new as an entertainment.

Invitations are out or on the way to Casino members bidding them to a "paper ball," which means that they must dress in paper, using their fancy both as to color, shape, and significance.

Many of the members are planning costumes that shall illustrate their wartime activities. Mrs. Joseph Coleman, for instance, in memory of her chairmanship of the publicity committee of the woman's committee of the State Council of Defense, is going as "Publicity." Mrs. "Sam" Chase is going as "Junk," while Mrs. Jacob Baur, chairman of the county and city woman's Liberty bond committee, is going as a Liberty bond. There's much scope for ingenuity and imagination in a paper ball.

Off for Santa Barbara.

Mrs. Robert McGann, who left town last Thursday for Santa Barbara, taking with her her son, Capt. Farwell Winston (just returned from France), his wife, and child, will study with much interest the course of a fire which recently menaced her beautiful new home there. The flames came to within five feet of a big woodpile near the house. A little more and one of [illegible] cito valley's most beautiful residences would have gone up in smoke.

Miss Lolita Armour's new house in Santa Barbara—a charming cottage near the old Spanish mission and overlooking the town, sea, and mountains—is receiving its final touches before its mistress goes out to take possession of it, which will be within a few days.

She'll find out there a lot of Chicagoans, among them the Edward Ryersons, the Donald Ryersons, the Clyde Carrs, the Alfred Bakers, the Robert G. McGanns, Hobart C. Ch[illegible] field-Taylor, Charles Francis Brow[illegible], David and Thomas Jones, and [illegible] Gwethalyn Jones.

View Smoke Effects.

Meanwhile other Chicagoans, not so fortunate, have the privilege of staying at home, and, between gasps, exulting in the city's wonderful and unrivaled smoke effects. Here's what our smoke does to a highly organized brain:

The town is gray,
  But not with years,
Nor grew it gray in a single day
  As towns have grown when the [illegible]
The skies are black
  With sullen smoke.
I try to breathe
  And can only choke.
I slip in the slime
  That covers each stone,
As I wipe off the grime
  I gloomily groan,
With a smut of a frown,
"What an h— of a town
  Is Chicago!"

Fortunately, just at this point of the tirade, the victim choked to [illegible]

WEDDINGS

The marriage is announced of Miss Mary Louise Ogden, sister of Mr. and Mrs. George K. Ogden, to Louis [illegible] mert Jr.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Miriam Furth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Furth of [illegible] Park boulevard, to George A. [illegible] of La Salle, Ill., which took place Monday at the Sisson hotel.

The marriage is announced of Miss Marie Louise Grandjean, daughter of Nicholas Grandjean, to Sterling [illegible] Veitch, which took place in [illegible] Va. Mr. and Mrs. Veitch will reside at 5218 Harper avenue.

The marriage of Miss Marguerite [illegible] ville, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederic Seville of 3360 Monroe street, to Ensign Carl Meyers will take place March 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sion of 13[illegible] South St. Louis avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Esther, to Nathan Bromberg.

~~Chocolate~~ cocoa Soufflé

MAKE dessert a real feast! The last dish will be best if you follow the recipe for Bunte Cocoa Souffle and serve it for dessert.

A Rare Perfection

All the essential qualities of chocolate and cocoa are in the cocoa bean. Purity and flavor depend on the blend of the cocoa beans and the process of manufacture. One secret blend—Bunte's—gives the real chocolate flavor—"the most popular in America." This perfection makes everything you cook with Bunte's distinctive—delicious—makes drinking Bunte's Cocoa a treat for young and old.

Bunte's Dutch Process

The Bunte Dutch Process removes the bitter center of the cocoa bean—removes the bitter shell—and gives you the pure meat—100% soluble. Bunte's Cocoa has all the pure concentrated chocolate flavor of the cocoa bean. With Bunte's there's no waste—no loss.

For All Purposes

Let Bunte's Cocoa take the place of chocolate for all cooking purposes. Chocolate has to be grated. Bunte Cocoa comes ready for use—it dissolves instantly. Cook with Bunte's. Bake with it. Drink it yourself and give it to the children every day.

When you cook with Bunte Cocoa you serve with satisfaction!

Business Women's Club Outgrowth of Sunday's Meetings

Mrs. Hamilton McCormick is chairman of the luncheons at the Chicago Business Women's council at 223 South Wabash avenue, where a 20 cent luncheon is served twice a week, followed by a twenty minute inspirational meeting.

Miss Lillian Shedd, after going into a chair factory and learning the trade of sandpapering chairs, has taught two blind men at the Lighthouse, a workshop conducted by the Improvement Association for Blind People. These men are now able to earn $15 a week each. Before Miss Shedd's instruction they were unable to do anything. A. B. Segur, industrial engineer for the Red Cross Institute for the Blind, is co-operating with the Lighthouse in securing positions for the blind of Chicago, civilian blind as well as returned blinded soldiers. A city-wide campaign is being carried on for the education of the blind.

Mrs. L. K. TerBush is president of the Vassar Alumnæ association of Chicago and the west, which is assisting in raising a fund of $400,000 for Vassar college. If a fund of $150,000 is raised before Feb. 28 an anonymous donor will give another $150,000, and the trustees of the college will complete the fund.

On Wednesdays and Fridays at noon business girls gather for luncheon and for twenty minute inspirational meetings following luncheon at the Chicago Business Women's council rooms at 223 South Wabash avenue.

The Business Women's council is a new but already flourishing society which has big plans for the future. When Billy Sunday was holding his campaign in Chicago luncheons were served to business women in the old Spalding building on Wabash avenue and short noon meetings were held. When the Sunday party left town the group of girls and women who had been in constant attendance at the noon meetings wanted to continue their activities, so they banded together and called themselves the Chicago Business Women's council.

A committee was formed to take charge of the permanent organization and support of the council. That committee was called the campaign conservation committee and is composed of Mrs. T. C. Keller, chairman; Miss Frances Whedon, secretary; Mrs. Joseph Long, treasurer; Mrs. Thomas R. Lyon, chairman of rooms and finance; and Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, chairman of the luncheons.

With the conservation committee to back it, the council has taken two floors of the building at 223 South Wabash avenue. The third floor is the lunchroom, where 20 cent luncheon are served twice a week and a 20 cent dinner on Thursday evenings, and the second floor is the meeting room, the rest room, the reading room, and the recreation room. The large meeting room accommodates 200 girls. At the front of the floor is a cheerfully furnished portion of the room, where books and magazines are on the tables and easy chairs invite to relaxation. The rooms are open all day every day, and there is always some one to greet strangers.

After the luncheons there are twenty minute inspirational meetings, nondenominational, which are addressed by the leading ministers and speakers of the city. The council, which has been open about six weeks, has an average of 200 girls at luncheon and at the meetings.

It is not necessary to attend the meetings following the luncheons, nor does one have to have luncheon at the council to be a guest at the meetings. Business girls, whether they are members of the council or not, are invited to take advantage of the reasonable lunching and dining facilities and to share in the meetings.

On Thursday evenings a Bible study class follows dinner. And on the third Thursday of each month a business meeting of the council members is held.

The council is supporting a canteen worker in France and has been of active financial aid in the case of Belgian orphans. On Tuesday, Feb. 18, there will be a concert for the benefit of the fund of the council to help in its philanthropic work.

The officers of the Business Women's council are: Miss Helen A. Brown, president; Miss Martha Seeberger, secretary; Miss Anna Lassen, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. E. Poole, treasurer. The vice presidents are Mrs. A. [illegible] and Miss Lillian Young[illegible].

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. X.

Rummage Sale on Magnificent Scale Is Plan This Year

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Just as regularly as the appearance of rich, thick furs in August and red flowered straw hats in January comes in this, our early spring, the rummage sale. This year we have one staged on a more magnificent scale than usual.

The war seems to have made it necessary to completely redecorate and make over from the mere walls a number of smart homes. All of the drawing rooms of the Louis periods that have been in brocaded pink will now be brocaded in the blue. The quartered oak dining rooms on the north of the house will be converted into music rooms, which have heretofore been on the south. And the dining rooms—all I can say for them is that they are going to become the chief feature of the establishment and dining is going to become the chief feature of New York life.

Has it always been that? Well, there are going to be some little cozy at home entertainments that will make those pre-war efforts seem like Sunday night supper at your Aunt Mat's. Those that were rich have become richer. Those with a little to spend now have much more and they are discussing ways and means for spending it.

Many Things in Stock.

Naturally all this change—this elevation, I was going to put it—in our point of view makes a great many articles to dispose of. Besides, the members of that substantial set who did not find it necessary to make over their dining rooms have nevertheless been rummaging through their garrets. They have thus come upon some old masters, old brocades, and old jewelry that they have not any further use for, and they have placed them on this pile.

Thereby they are making an epoch in the history of the rummage sale. You remember the first ones, with their 25-cent table containing the thick blue flowered salt and pepper set from the servants' dining room, the copper ash tray sacrificed from a bachelor's quarters and carried round by him personally because he had been entertained at dinner by the hostess in charge of that table. There was also the tall glass vase with a nick in it and the rather withered silk flowers off somebody's Fifth avenue hat of a season or two ago. This table, of course, was in the back of the room.

To get to it you passed between glass show cases full of gold vinaigrette bottles, castoff fans, wine decanters, soiled satin lampshades, and a wedding present ink well which that bride sent round unopened, having received twenty-four in all. There was usually in the center of the show window a heathen idol or other trophies of some one's trip round the world. You could yourself feel the relaxation of the household in getting the clumsy, useless thing out of the house.

Sure to Draw Crowd.

That was in the early days of the rummage sale, some five years ago. Last season it took a decided turn for the more elaborate—as with everything the smart set takes over—and they required the intervention of the police to still the mobs howling to get in. Goodness knows what will happen this year, for it is going to be something of the magnitude and scope of a grand opera production. Besides, styles are about to change now that the buyers can risk themselves on the ocean and the rich and great are disposing of their clothes. An advertised dress of a rich woman always draws a crowd, so look out for consequences.

This rummage sale is to take place at 723 Fifth avenue. It is to have auction sales in the afternoons of articles de luxe and there is to be a symphony orchestra accompaniment to the transactions. Also tea. It is really a very worthy charity because all of those who do not quite belong, socially speaking, can go and being there can close their eyes and dream that they are at a smart entertainment that is private and to which they have their own card of invitation, or to which perhaps the hostess has bidden them by telephone.

Proceeds to Settlement Work.

It has another secondary value as a piece of altruistic work. The ways of Providence are devious and this rummage sale is one of them for putting the melting pot in the way of boiling; in other words, for making good Americans out of very raw material indeed. The proceeds are going to be devoted to a settlement house in an Italian neighborhood.

Last summer, when a government morale worker visited this district he found it to be inhabited by a community of foreigners disliking and misunderstanding America. Women of the smart set then went and exerted a little ingratiating personality, with the result that they transformed the people into loyal Americans. These newly made Americans themselves asked for a night school, where they learned the responsibilities of citizenship. It later won a banner for outdistancing others in the purchase of Liberty bonds. The neighborhood is to be further improved with the proceeds of the rummage sale.

The women interested are indeed tried and proved in the art of smart hostess-ship, and they are delighted with their skill in making foreigners into good American citizens. Mrs. R. Penn Smith and her mother, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, are at the head of the committee. Others on it are Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Mrs. Cornelius Bliss Jr., Mrs. Douglas Robinson, and Mrs. James Floyd Derby.

At the Artists' Ball.

One of the excitements of the week was the artists' ball. As one of the participants said, "It is wonderful what you can do with a pair of striped pajamas if you have the right kind of Arabian scarf to carry them." He was a desert chief that evening and one of America's leading designers through the remainder of the year.

The smart set and the art set joined hands on this evening and made of it a jolly occasion indeed. A golden apple was awarded the most beautiful woman, and it was exactly like the one awarded some time ago in the judgment of Paris. Stuart Travis, the sculptor, designed it. The artists awarded the best prizes were Penrhyn Stanlaws, James Montgomery Flagg, Charles Dana Gibson, Howard Chandler Christy, and Harrison Fisher.

They wandered about all evening promiscuously pinning fifty red ribbons, twenty-five white ribbons, ten blue ribbons, and five of silver on beauties of varying degree until finally they at 4 in the morning gave the apple to Miss Edith Hyde.

The victor insisted that she had never been so astonished in her life, but I cannot see why, because she was almost the only one left without a medal of some sort. When Penrhyn Stanlaws was looking the other way some one stole five ribbons off his tray and distributed them according to taste, but not according to the taste of the artists.

The ball was a sumptuous thing. The Czecho-Slovak and the Russian orchestras furnished the music. They played their national instruments, the former on the tamburitza, a kind of guitar made out of turtle shell and played with a paper pick. The Russian instrument was the balalaika, a triangular guitar with three strings played with the fingers.

SLAMS OF LIFE
By J. P. McEvoy

THE AMERICAN MAIDEN'S SOLILOQUY.

They can bam the bolsheviki with torpedo, bomb, or brick-y,
They can pacify the Portuguese and Czech,
And I do not give a cent-a if the dinky Irredenta
Is a pale and puny palpitating wreck,
I devote no cogitations to the jelling of the nations,
And I do not care a hoot for subs or tanks,
But I'm getting cranial lesions from the thought of them Parisians
And the speed with which they're grabbing off the Yanks.

Yes, the idee kinder clinkers in my devastated dome.
Will there be a Parley Voo with him when Johnny comes marching
home?

I can garner no elation from the ratiocination
Of the convoluted cocos in the clan
That apportion beer and skittles and the other jots and tittles
From the borders of Bersheba unto Dan,
And the subtle subterfuges of the diplomatic Scrooges
Are as nothing in my gaily girlish life,
Only one idear oppressing keeps this wistful maiden guessing,
Will he grab a Fleur-de-Lizzy for a wife?

O, the thought it kinder hankers and it cankers in my dome,
Will there be a mademoiselle with him when Johnny comes marching
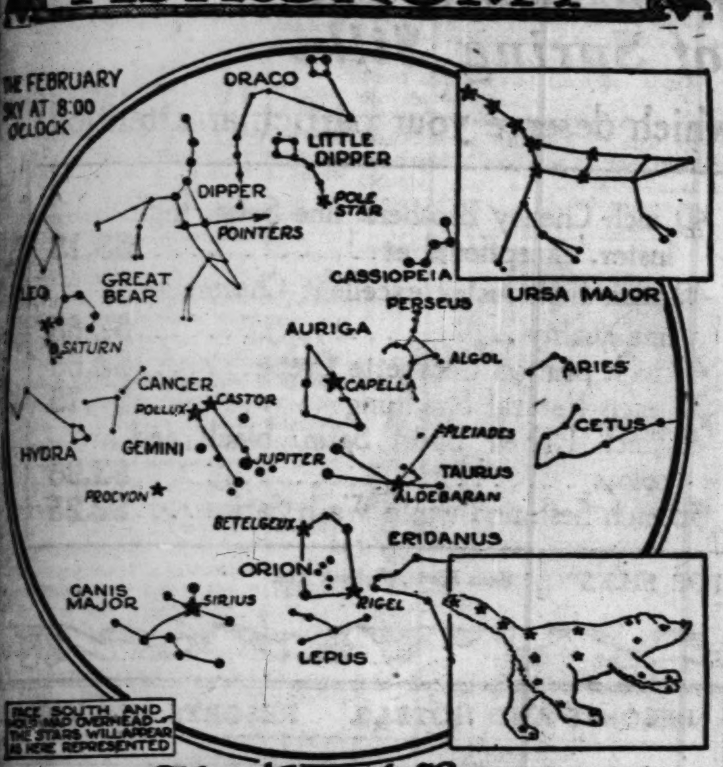
home?

ASTRONOMY



The Great Bear
DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL

THE GREAT BEAR.

WHETHER you know anything of the heavens or not you know the Big Dipper—and can find it. It is now, about 7 o'clock, standing on its handle in the east to the north, and below that handle, unseen but seemingly to be cajoled into the spring and summer sky by it, into the time of white oak leaves and fall foliage, is the star Arcturus. When Arcturus comes into the evening sky the snows have gone.

Thus the Big Dipper, as the instantly recognized form in the Great Bear, swings in these evenings, unseen, from the projection of its handle, a welcome portent, suggested against the fact of Sirius, blazing in the winter sky.

It is a fortunate thing that the Big Dipper in the Great Bear is so immediately identifiable, fortunate because with the Dipper a beginning can be made at the identification and location of many stars.

The stars in the outer line of the bowl are the pointers of the pole star, and by lines projected from them to the pole star and from it at various angles identifications came be completed.

It is suggested that as an interesting observation for people who have made their acquaintance with sky phenomena casual that they look into the space confined within the bowl of the dipper, preferably on a moonless night, without aid to the eyesight and see what stars can be seen thus there framed. Then that they take an opera glass and observe what even this feeble instrument will bring within vision. With fair eye sight possibly a dozen stars will be found within the frame. With an opera glass a hundred will come into view—a commonplace revelation of immensity and its components.

The Great Bear has an interesting history. The figure as it is now pictured came into existence before 1000 B. C. It appears to have been invented by the Greeks or possibly suggested to them by Phoenician traders. Homer speaks of it in the Odessy as a guide to sailing, and in the mythology of that time the bear is described with sufficient clearness to identify it with the dipper.

During the score of centuries before Greece became an important country the dipper lay much nearer the pole of the skyl than it does now. Instead of having a slow bodily motion as it has now it simply turned over and over. Because it remained fixed in the heavens and could always be seen when daylight faded the Egyptians symbolized it as the power of darkness.

For thousands of years travelers and navigators used the dipper as a guide, precisely as we employ the pole star. Cæsar tells us that the Romans did not say "north," but said "faces the seven stars" [Septentriones].

No drawings of the constellation as it was first invented have come down to us, but from descriptions we know that the animal was pictured as striding forward around the pole. The grouping of the stars in the constellation suggests the outline of a bear, particularly the nose thrust inquisitively forward in the direction the creature is moving. The only feature that is unbearlike is the long tail. It mars the naturalness of an otherwise good resemblance. The Greeks set their minds to rest on the question by saying that as Jupiter threw the original bear into the sky he gave it a few whirls by the tail, and in so doing stretched that appendage to its present length.

Strange as it may seem, the American Indians, when first discovered, recognized a bear in this same constellation of Ursa Major.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Presbyterian New Era Workers to Hold Conference

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE new era movement of the Presbyterian church of the United States of America which seeks $70,000,000 and a corresponding increase in the educational and spiritual work of the church will hold its Chicago conference on Tuesday and Wednesday with special meetings for men, women, and young people.

On Tuesday noon there will be a fellowship lunch at the Y. M. C. A. At 2 o'clock the first session of the conference will open at the Fourth Presbyterian church auditorium. The women will meet at the same time in the lecture room of the Fourth church.

The young people's meeting will be held morning and afternoon of Wednesday in the Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church under the leadership of the Rev. William Ralph Hall.

In the evening meetings all will join at the Church of the Covenant, Belden avenue and North Halsted street. On Tuesday evening Dr. John Timothy Stone will preside. The speakers will be the Rev. J. Frank Smith, Dallas, Tex., moderator of the Presbyterian church, and the Rev. William H. Foulkes, general secretary of the new era movement. On Wednesday evening Henry P. Crowell will preside. The speakers will be Dr. A. W. Halsey, New York, secretary of the board of foreign missions, and Dr. John R. Davies, Philadelphia, secretary of the board of ministerial relief and sustenation. Twenty-five presbyteries will send delegates.

Preliminary to the general meetings the permanent committee on vacancy and ministerial supply will meet in the Fourth church at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday. The Rev. George N. Luccock of Wooster, O., is chairman, and the Rev. W. H. Houston of Columbus, O., is corresponding secretary of the committee.

Nearly 1,000 Presbyterian ministers entered war service and of the number 300 were pastors who resigned their pastorates. The committee will take up the matter of supplying the vacancies.

The Rev. J. C Welsh

Father Welch is one of the pastors recently appointed to new parishes by Archbishop Mundelein. He succeeds in the pastorate at St. Kilian's, Eighty-seventh and Aberdeen streets, the late Rev. J. J. Greene. Father Welch was born in Philadelphia, educated at St. Vincent's seminary, Pittsburgh, and ordained in 1893 by Bishop Phelan. He was for twelve years assistant at Holy Angels' church, Chicago, and one year at Plano, Ill., where he built a church and a rectory. His last pastorate was one of twelve years at St. Agnes church, Chicago Heights, where he built a parochial school and sisters' convent. Last year he celebrated the silver jubilee of his ordination.

Memorial services for former President Roosevelt will be held today in churches throughout the United States by authority of President Wilson at the request of many prominent citizens, including former President Taft. President Roosevelt, as is well known, was always an outspoken champion of the Bible and of the churches of all kinds. He was a member of the Dutch Reformed church and for a time a teacher in Sunday school. The tune of one of the hymns in the Methodist hymnal, No. 713, "Our Father's God, to Thee We Raise," is named "Theodore" in his honor. On one occasion he gave his photograph to the junior department of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Newark, N. J., inscribed with the verse which was said to have been his favorite in the Bible, James i., 22: "Be ye doers of the Word and not hearers only." On the occasion of one of his visits to Chicago he preached in the pulpit of the Dutch Reformed church. His favorite hymn is said to have been "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord." At the time of Mr. Roosevelt's death the First Congregational church of Austin passed resolutions which were forwarded to the bereaved family, which express, we believe, the common belief of the churches. In the resolutions Mr. Roosevelt was called "a true citizen, a wise ruler, a servant of righteousness, a champion of liberty, and an apostle of progress."

Before resigning the rectorship last Sunday of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal church, Washington boulevard and North Robey street, the Rev. Benjamin E. Chapman found in 1,473 house to house calls only eleven families claiming to be members of the Protestant Episcopal church who were not attending the services of St. Andrew's. The eleven families belonged to the cathedral, Epiphany, or St. Luke's. Seventy-five per cent lived in rooming houses. Two neighboring churches have been turned over to Negro congregations, the Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, and the former Eighth Presbyterian church, to be known hereafter as the St. Paul's (colored) Presbyterian church.

Ted (E. C.) Mercer and Tom Farmer, who are engaged in a series of services in various Protestant Episcopal churches in Chicago and suburbs, will speak today at St. Barnabas', 4237 Washington boulevard. Beginning on Tuesday and continuing through next Sunday they will speak at St. Timothy's, Central Park avenue and Huron street; Feb. 18-23, St. Peter's, 621 Belmont avenue; Feb. 25-March 2, St. Paul's, 4925 Dorchester avenue; March 4-9, Christ church, 6451 Woodlawn avenue; March 11-16, St. Chrysostom's, 1424 North Dearborn street. Both men were reformed from drink and Tom Farmer from a criminal career. They live at the Sears-Roebuck branch of the Y. M. C. A.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, will speak this evening at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall on "The Constituent Elements of the World's Peace." He was formerly a Methodist minister and will address the Methodist ministers' meeting at First church, Clark and Washington streets, tomorrow at 10:30.

The Rev. Clyde Sheldon Shepard will preach today his initial sermon as pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Sixty-fourth street and Harvard avenue. By reason of a well known poem written by him on the subject, "Smile and Pray," he has been known as the Smile and Pray Parson. He succeeds the Rev. H. Samuel Fritsch, who went to Toledo, O.

The Forty-fourth precinct Republican club of the Twenty-third ward holds its meetings in the community house of the Lake View Congregational church, the Rev. C. S. Laidman.

Memorial services will be held this evening in the Second Presbyterian church, Michigan avenue and Twentieth street, for the late Dr. Simon J. McPherson, who was pastor of the church for seventeen years, from 1882-1899. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus will preach the sermon. Dr. McPherson died in Lawrenceville, N. J., Jan. 9. Mrs. Charles S. Holt and Mrs. N. W. Campbell, both of 60 East Cedar street, are sisters of the deceased pastor.

The northeastern deanery of the Protestant Episcopal church will meet tomorrow beginning at 11 o'clock in the Church of the Atonement, 5749 Kenmore avenue.

A Never Failing Way to Banish Ugly Hairs

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some Delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuzz. Be sure, however, to get real Delatone.

If your Child is Cross, Feverish and Sick.

Look, Mother! If Little Tongue is Coated, Cleanse the Inactive Bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is that they become clogged with waste, the liver becomes sluggish, the stomach is disordered, and then your little one becomes cross, feverish, and does not eat, sleep or behave naturally. Often the breath is bad, and system "stuffy" with a cold; the child has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste-matter, sour bile and undigested food pass out of the system, and you have a healthy, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," made by the California Fig Syrup Co., which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Look for name "California." Accept no Fig Syrup but "California."

To the Fountain of Eternal Youth

YOUTH CRAFT, the hand-maiden of beauty, will lead you to the Fountain of Eternal Youth. You women whose hair is beginning to show streaks of gray and looks faded and lusterless—and you men, too, whose hair is getting sparse around the temples and shows signs of saying "farewell"—let Youth Craft redeem your youth for you—let Youth Craft revitalize your hair.

Restore Your Youth

Youth Craft takes you back to the time when life was love, laughter and song. Youth Craft has the art of making your hair reassume the charm and beauty that was yours in youth. With Youth Craft at your command you have no excuse at all for looking old and faded.

Youth Craft
FOR THE HAIR AND SCALP

is made for all people—for those who are young and insist upon retaining their youth—for those whose hair, because of age, neglect or improper treatment, has lost its original beauty and strength and who now are anxious to regain their former attractive appearance. Use Youth Craft and let the results surprise you.

Gray Hair Condemned

In many cases of premature gray hair Youth Craft restores the original, natural color. The wonderful influence that the application of Youth Craft exerts upon the scalp and hair roots stimulates hair health and hair growth. Youth Craft is absolutely harmless, and by virtue of its approved contents can only have a beneficial result.

What Youth Craft
FOR THE HAIR AND SCALP
Does for Women's Hair

Apply Youth Craft regularly and in a very short time your hair will take on a glorious luster and become silky and fluffy. Beautiful, lustrous hair saves many a plain face. And Youth Craft will make your hair beautiful. Or, if you already have thick, beautiful hair, Youth Craft helps keep it that way. Youth Craft invigorates the hair roots—the old, dead hairs fall out—and the growth of new hair is promoted. Youth Craft is a sensible, valuable investment for any woman who values her personal appearance.

Men Demand Youth Craft
FOR THE HAIR AND SCALP
Because

Men know that the scalp must be kept in a clean, healthy condition if hair is to be normal and healthy. That is what Youth Craft does for the scalp—routs dandruff, relieves itching scalp almost instantly, and keeps the scalp clean, healthy and normal. If more men took proper care of their scalps there would be fewer bald heads. If you want to keep hair on your head, take care of it. Youth Craft shows results in a hurry.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Nielson Paintings on View at the Palette and Chisel

Low Tide, Coast of California by Peter Nielson AT THE PALETTE AND CHISEL CLUB

THERE is at the Palette and Chisel club an exhibition of paintings by Peter Nielson. Remembering the recent exhibit of Karl Ouren's work hung in the same gallery, I went this week in the hope of finding in the present pictures some of the haunting beauty of spirit that pervaded the former. But in this hope I was a little disappointed.

It may be because Nielson is an older man, and older at the trade of artist, but the young witchery that enshrined the gardens of Humboldt park for Mr. Ouren is lacking in the sterner stretches of mountain and river and plain that follow each other in quick succession the round of the canvases from Mr. Nielson's brush.

For the most part these pictures deal with the California coast. There is, it is true, a group of winter scenes showing a stream flowing dully under its thin coat of ice between banks of snow, where trees make purple shadows on the white. But the most impressive paintings are of the mountains and coast line of the Pacific.

Particularly beautiful is the little bay where the sands are golden, and where the red-brown rock cliffs rise oblivious to the sea's approach. On the beach flutter gulls. The blue water sucks itself with a rolling, eddying, whirling movement nearer and nearer to land, and suddenly dies, motionless, in the clasp of the inlet. Over it all is the blue bend of the sky.

A snatch of a broad river, fringed with bushes and overhanging willows, gliding majestically through and over the reeds that would stay the unhurried course of the tiniest ripples, brings close the days of June when the cows go down to the water and the bees are heavy in the honeysuckle.

Another brilliantly light canvas is the painting of an emerald green island, tossed into the lap of a greener flood, accented by the slender lines of a single boat at anchor under the rays of the glowing tropical sun. There are two other colorful glimpses of water and woods at sunset. The molten reflection of the sun makes a gold splash on the stream and the flickering light plays hide and seek among the leaves.

"The Rainy Season" gives the purple mountain ranges hazy against the sky. In the hollows the mist is like a sea, but about the summits it floats like streamers or the entangling veils of the houris that dance madly in the inner solitudes of a great god's temple.

On a further wall is seen a lonely little grove where the wind cries itself to sleep, and on the gray grass sward the dead leaves lie. A road trails by, dragging its weary length over the hill, abandoned by people. Lizards sun themselves on its sands, and in the deep worn ruts crickets and tiny green frogs at dusk lift their voices in chorus.

One last picture is perhaps worth mention. It is of a woman and child on the dock at sunset watching a boat put out to sea. A red glow is in the sky, and redder still is the flame of a fire low down on the shore across the harbor. The child sits contented on the dock, but the mother strains to see each dip of the little vessel that carries with it, under the freshening breeze, her man out to the unchartered waters.

There opened this week at the Chicago Camera club an interesting exhibition of prints by B. J. Morris and George H. High. Mr. Morris shows a splendid portrait of a man and an attractive print of a chubby child leaning over a low fountain's edge and dabbling gleefully in the water. An unusual effect is secured in his print of trees in winter reflected on the smooth surface of an ice-cased river. Another charming sketch is the dancing girl fallen, exhausted by her play, to rest a moment where the flowers and grass grow thickest. "The Domino" is a clever print of a woman in the costume of masquerade with high hat and ruff.

Among the pictures shown by Mr. High are several that are of artistic value. "Wyoming" is especially beautiful. One stands at the summit of a high mountain peak and looks off into the distances of the sky where other mountains roll ridge on ridge. Directly below the ground breaks away into a deep cañon. On the near peak stands a horse, his rider, a slender girl, beside him, silhouetted against the dusky sky and rocky vastnesses. The atmosphere of the west, softened perhaps and sentimentalized a bit, is strongly felt.

On Thursday at the Art institute there will open the annual exhibition of paintings by artists of Chicago and vicinity. Among the pictures there will probably be shown a group by Mme. Maurice Tassencourt, a former student of the Art institute. I saw a few of her paintings a short time ago. They are, some of them, rather appealing. The "Procession of Peasants" is a quaint sketch of Breton women walking in solemn conclave to the little, low Breton church. The painting of a canal that glides in sunshine and shadow between two tall rows of pink and white houses, reflecting their colors on its smooth surface, is attractive. Two little stretches of sand by the sea are rather nice.

Mme. Tassencourt has been awarded a medal at the Paris salon and at the salon at Amiens.

Willard STORAGE BATTERY SERVICE STATION

Copyright registered, 1919

On the Wrong Track

Sometimes you hear a man say "Oh, you can't hurt the battery."

He forgets to add distilled water.

He steps too long on his starter instead of cleaning his spark plugs.

He puts in acid instead of having his battery charged.

He never has a Hydrometer test made.

And when his battery suddenly quits he can't realize that it has been gradually dying from neglect and abuse.

It's a fallacy to believe that you can neglect any battery without suffering the consequences.

The Bone-Dry Willard Battery with Threaded Rubber Insulation is made to give unusual service and long life, but it must be kept charged, and has to be supplied with pure water.

La Salle, the explorer, made possible to the early pioneers a new and grander empire by opening up to them the great physical resources of a vast and unknown region in the New World.

La Salle Extension University makes greater achievements possible to all men by opening to them, thru practical extension education, new and grander opportunities in the field of business.

Do You Seek Advancement?

Increased Incomes Have Been Brought Within the Reach of More Than 145,000 Men and Women During the Past Ten Years by La Salle Training

LA SALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY offers you today ten years of experience and remarkable achievement in training men and women for business and professional success. The total enrollment on the occasion of this, its tenth anniversary, exceeds 145,000.

Train During Spare Time

At the present time approximately 41,000 business men and employees, thru active membership, are profiting from helpful counsel, instruction and personal guidance supplied in the various departments of the university. The extension method makes it possible to carry on the work during spare hours without absence from or interference with business duties or employment.

For Executives and Employees

This membership includes people ranging in station from presidents of large corporations down to clerical workers. Not only ambitious employees in subordinate positions have found La Salle training the short cut to greater efficiency, personal power and advancement, but also business executives, bankers, lawyers, doctors, priests, teachers and others from all walks of life. Graduates from many of the leading resident universities and technical colleges are enrolled with La Salle, in order to supplement their college training with that practical training in the fundamentals of modern business management and administration necessary to handle higher executive responsibilities.

Investment Value of Training

Chicago papers have recently carried some splendid editorials on the value of a four-year high school education. Facts and figures supplied by the United States Bureau of Education have surprised many people as to the valuation placed upon a high school education as a cashable business asset. It is appraised as equivalent to an $18,000 investment bearing interest at 5% per annum, or $900, which represents the additional annual earning power of high school over grammar school graduates.

Salaries Increased 25 to 600 Per Cent

Higher salaries and additional earning power representing increases of 25% to 600% or more of their earnings at time of enrollment have been reported by hundreds of La Salle members. Many of them have realized substantial advancement long before completion of their respective courses.

An Investment Worth $30,000 To $100,000

By capitalizing the earning power of many La Salle members in the same way that the U. S. Bureau of Education capitalizes the increased earning power of the high school graduate over the grammar school graduate, the average 300-hour specialized, home-study business courses offered by La Salle Extension University represent income-bearing business investments that can be appraised at from $30,000 to $100,000, and even higher. No other form of investment known to the world has ever produced greater returns than money invested in "brain capitalization" thru specialized business training.

These Men Have Done It

In the files of the University can be found the grateful acknowledgments of many thousands of enthusiastic and satisfied members. The following excerpts are typical expressions being received daily from men who have profited from La Salle training:

"Am now manager of a corporation with assets of over $4,000,000."—W. M. C.

"Have passed the Ohio Certified Public Accountant examination."—L. C. R. (Scores of such letters from La Salle trained men who have passed C. P. A. examinations in the various states.)

"In less than a years' time my La Salle training is paying the handsome profit of 57% per month."—G. M R.

"Have successfully passed the bar examination in this state."—G. L. B. (Hundreds of similar reports from La Salle legally-trained men in practically every state in the Union.)

"I have not yet fully completed my course, and my salary has been increased 600%. I was a ledger clerk two years ago."—G. W. A.

"Am now one of the officials of the company, because I am able to present statements to our directors showing the true condition of affairs at any time."—C. A. E.

"Your traffic training enabled me to save our company $15,000, and a probable $25,000 more this year."—C. E. B.

La Salle trained men occupying responsible positions can be found thruout the entire English speaking world. In this country it is possible to step into the executive departments of any of our largest corporations and find La Salle members in important positions. Here are a few of the larger corporations which have employed from 150 to more than 1,000:

Pennsylvania R. R.	1163	Armour & Company	207
American Telegraph & Telephone Company	671	Chicago & N. W. Ry.	455
U. S. Steel Corporation.	273	Ford Motor Company	169
Baltimore & Ohio R. R.	626	Swift & Company	221
		Standard Oil Company	286

Among the numerous firms and corporation employing 50 to 100 or more La Salle men are the following:

Western Electric Company
International Harvester Co.
B. F. Goodrich Company
Wells Fargo Express Co.
Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company and every important railroad company in the United States

A few expressions from business men of prominence who have given their endorsement to La Salle training and service.

"In rendering this service to men who are ambitious to equip themselves for real responsibilities of business, La Salle Extension University is doing an important work which is worthy of the commendation of our best business interests."
ALEXANDER H. REVELL.

"I look upon instruction by mail as one of the most wonderful and phenomenal developments of this age."—Theodore Roosevelt.

A large measure of the success of La Salle Extension University is attributable to the fact that it has adhered rigidly to its original policy of a purely business university, broadly enough interpreted to include the profession of Law and the field of Public Speaking which are so closely allied to business.

Expert Personal Instruction

Each department is actively directed by specially qualified experts in their respective fields, guided by the General Educational Council of the University, and aided by liberal appropriations made possible by the University's abundant resources of approximately $2,500,000.

The educational, executive and service staffs of the University have grown to an organization of about 350 people. There are experts in law, organization, management, finance, banking, business correspondence and letter supervision, advertising and selling, interstate commerce and railway traffic, business economics, office practice, etc.

Staff of 800 Persons

The La Salle text and lecture contributors and expert consulting advisers number about 300 special authorities from the leading colleges, and from professional and business life. The field organization numbers more than 150 registrars. The total, therefore, aggregates over 800 persons organized for the sole purpose of rendering exceptional business training and service.

Members in any department of the University are entitled to general consulting privileges in all other departments of the University. Advice is obtainable upon practically every phase of business from expert authorities who have demonstrated by their own conspicuous success their right to make helpful suggestions to others.

Clearing House of Business Information

The large reference library and the files of business, financial and other data which have been built up make available to members every angle of information and experience upon business questions and problems which are submitted to the University in great variety from every state in the Union.

On account of this practical and distinctive consulting service, La Salle very properly has been designated as "The World's Clearing House of Business Information." It is a service which, to our knowledge, can not be supplied by any other institution. Enrolled business men and executives, especially, regard the consulting privileges as one of the most valuable features of La Salle membership.

La Salle Texts

The high merit of the text books, specially prepared for home study by the University's staff of writers, is recognized by more than 290 schools, colleges and universities which have adopted La Salle texts in their resident courses. La Salle publications meet with favor from the most critical sources because they are authoritative and practical, and the information so presented that it is easily understood and applied.

Resident Evening Classes

Resident evening classes are held in classrooms located at 116 South Michigan Avenue. Complete courses are offered in General Accounting, Cost Accounting, Advanced Accounting, and C. P. A. Coaching; Income Tax Accounting and Procedure; Interstate Commerce and Railway Traffic.

"The work done by correspondence is even better than that done in the classroom."—Dr. William R. Harper, Late President U. of C.

WHITE CROSSES AND WHITE FLAGS IN FRANCE.

The maneuvers at the peace table may well cause apprehension to the families of America's fighting men. There is a chance they will lead to Utopian conditions for the Czech, Jugo, and all other Slavs. There is a greater chance they will lead to early wars from which the fighting men's families alone will really suffer.

The peace table is surrounded by nonsoldiers. They are pretty much the same men who conducted their various nations into war and then stood safely by on the side lines while the fighting men fought and died and the fighting men's families agonized.

Nearly two years have gone by since the professional politicians and professional pacifists dominated this country. But two years ago and for years before that they were unhampered in their conduct of affairs. And how did they conduct them?

They conducted them as a neatly creased, hair-parted-in-the-middle professor conducts a paid lecture before a tea-and-sweetened-cake meeting of a club of maiden ladies. They conducted them with phrases suited to give a pleasant thrill to a system satisfied with angel cake and stimulated by a mixture of caffeine and hot water. Listeners settled deep in comfortable armchairs at the comforting idea of their being "too proud to fight." They cooed at the prospect of "a peace without victory," and they folded well manicured hands over nicely replete abdomens at the inspiring suggestion that they at least were not "nervous and excited" because the world was on fire and the wind blowing towards our house. Their subconscious instinct informed them that they were not firemen. And so they tea'd and caked and rocked us into the blast furnace. That is, they rocked a great many of us. They themselves stood coyly aloof, just close enough to feel a pleasant glow of warmth.

The fact stands up like a blasted tree that those who managed the affairs of the nation into war did not take part in the war.

With almost unanimity the families of those in supreme authority stayed far away from the battlefield. One conspicuous young man was the son of a father who could have placed him anywhere in the war. He went to the naval academy during the war, which incidentally was the safest place in America, and resigned upon the dawning of peace. Other conspicuous young men joined the marines, but not the marines of Chateau Thierry. We read of them on moonlight excursions along the Potomac at a time when other young men were doing their night life to the illumination of star shells.

When the war came it was an entirely different set of people from those who brought us into the war who went forth to fight. It was Americans of a type that had not been prominent in public life since Theodore Roosevelt left the White House. The farmer boy let go the plow. The teamster stepped down from his wagon. The printer came, wiping the ink stains from his fingers. The banker, the breaker boy, the broker, the butcher, and the brakeman each left his position and his little bit of heaven to enter the pacifist-made hell.

They all entered a great disorganization. The mechanic was given a horse to groom. The farmer boy was put behind a ledger and told to compute figures. The clerk was attached to a machine gun squad. The lawyer shoveled coal in a destroyer. Everything was topsy turvy because the nation entered the war unprepared.

Enthusiastic literati dubbed them crusaders and they were like crusaders in more than one way. The crusader's soul was theirs and so was the crusader's lack of organization and of arms. Our millions sailed to France with empty hands and there picked up such equipment as our allies could furnish, and there fought without such instruments of modern warfare as the allies could not provide.

American soldiers walked through the snows of wintry France without socks on their feet and wearing paper shoes. American soldiers manned their guns in the deadly fumes of poison gas with ill fitting masks. American infantry charged without support of artillery. Americans who had not been taught how to fight machine guns marched against machine guns, and they marched never more.

But in spite of handicaps and of hardships they fought to victory, spilling a cup of red blood for every cup of tea the pacifists had thrilled to, leaving a stark body on the grass for every cake consumed while attending pacifist lectures. And now victory no more than won, up bobs the pacifists' chatter again. Without pausing a decent time while the soldiers' families mourn their far-lying dead, the pacifists flock around tea tables groaning with cakes and chocolate drops. Again the spirits are gladdened with commonplaces about leagues of nations and the rights of little peoples, ignoring the fact that the party which dominates the United States rules solely through the oppression of one little people.

Soldiers' wives still wait for their unreturned husbands, but the well gowned wives of skillfully tailored peace emissaries cross the ocean in specially provided ships and occupy the most luxurious quarters in an overcrowded, underfed city.

A complacent gentleman who suffered neither hardship nor danger in this or any other war, assures our tired, gagged soldiers that they fought for humanity. How does he know what any fighting man ever fought for?

The soldiers fought for their country, and, having brought victory to their country, they wish to come home before the stay-at-homes get so firmly intrenched in every line of endeavor as to make the sacrifice of the soldier last his entire life. But they are kept in their muddy billets in Europe or their uncomfortable cantonments, while the peace time men at the peace table address each other with high sounding titles and throw flowers to an unappreciative multitude on the roadside.

The peace piffler is again on top. The soldier is not only back where he was before the war broke out, but farther back. He is divorced from industry and he is denied even the expression of his opinion of the crime the tea party pacifists committed against him.

The pacifists may be rocking us into Utopia. They may be rocking us into war. They are playing a sure hand themselves. They will benefit if Utopia comes. They will suffer nothing in war. Therefore, they have no compunctions in gambling Utopia against war. They do not see the desirability of getting safety and peace without Utopia.

The soldiers would not gamble war against Utopia. They want a quick, safe peace and an honorable peace. They want to get back to the families which they left in order to fight for their country, for they did not go forth to fight for pretty phrases.

But they are muzzled by military censorship as autocratic as Prussia's worst, and pacifists are gambling the soldiers' lives against a pleasant thrill.

MICHIGAN'S ROADS AND PARKS.

Michigan is to be congratulated—and Gov. Sleeper likewise—for a comprehensive program of good roads and parks proposed. The north central states can all take heart with this plan of Michigan's to do its share in making the highways of the whole community into a network of industrial thoroughfares.

It probably would be going a little bit too far to say that Michigan needs roads as badly as Illinois. Illinois has been in the mud for a great many years, but is going to get out. Indiana has led the central west in good highways. Michigan is getting into line. The result, as we can foresee, will be an example on a big scale of the progressive life.

In his message to the Michigan legislature Gov. Sleeper says: "We must have more roads and better roads. Money spent for highway construction is one of the best investments the state can make. Michigan should be the greatest tourist state in the union. . . . Better roads would bring millions of dollars into the state annually from the tourist trade alone. With the development of the rural motor express substantial highways are an absolute necessity."

Gov. Sleeper has touched on an important phase of Michigan's worth when he refers to its great natural beauty, and in a separate communication to the legislature he urges the establishment of a system of state parks to include outing spots at all of the natural watercourses, of which there are many. Of this he says:

"I therefore earnestly recommend that steps be at once taken . . . to acquire the land necessary to establish a great chain of state parks bordering our rivers and lakes, and in this chain I would include some of our inland lakes. . . ."

Thousands of Chicagoans, to say nothing of multitudes from other localities, flock to Michigan in the summer time. The incentive to go there would be vastly increased by the introduction of better motoring facilities. Also Michigan as the great center of the motoring industry should be by all means the foremost state in the inducement to travel by motor. Gov. Sleeper recognizes that the coming of the motor express will in a measure revolutionize shipping as well as develop distribution to a new power.

With good roads in every state there is a newer and wider sweep of interstate commerce. Conceivably the products of western Michigan will be much nearer the Chicago market with the motor car as an aid to the railroads in short hauls. The lakes traffic will always have its niche in industry and be in no wise hampered by motor traffic.

Michigan proposes that road building be carried on in such a manner as to provide work for the thousands of returning soldiers. Illinois proposes the same program. The interests of the whole lakes community will be served by such thoughtful processes as the Michigan campaign and it should receive the support of all Michigan citizens.

THE SUBURBAN FARE.

The increase in suburban rates ordered by the railroad administration, and now by a new order suspended pending a review before an "appropriate tribunal," did not hit the average male of the commuting species. His monthly ticket was exempt from the increase. He could get his personal ticket, sixty rides a month, at the old rate.

What the railroad administration tried to do was to tax the women more for their shopping and matinée trips to town. They do the bulk of the buying of ten and twenty-five ride suburban tickets, at least the bulk of the buying done by established suburban residents.

We do not know whether the railroad administration studied the psychology of the order. Did the women detect in it a masculine suggestion that the woman's place was in the home? They might have replied to it by buying monthly tickets and going to town every day. There were the provocative elements of a woman's war in it, and we are not astonished that Mr. Eustis, chairman of the western passenger committee, says that the Illinois public utilities commission preferred, if the new rates were ordered, that they be ordered by the federal administration. The public utilities commission was perfectly willing to pass the buck.

Editorial of the Day

UNITED STATES AND FREE PORTS.

[New York Evening Post.]

That other nations are intending to push the establishment of free ports should weigh with the United States in dealing with the bill to grant the secretary of commerce power to authorize the establishment of such ports here. The federal tariff commission made a report on the proposed legislation two months ago warmly espousing the general idea. In its hearings, now published, is brought out the fact that Englishmen—who as a free-trading people have not needed such ports at home—are considering the establishment of free zones throughout the empire; transshipping agencies of great size already exist at Gibraltar, Hongkong, and Singapore. Sweden has been planning free areas or ports at Gothenburg and Malmo. About two years ago Russians were talking of one at Petrograd. Switzerland has been considering the establishment of a free area at Basel, where transit trade for all the surrounding nations might be handled. A consular report from Havre states that that city and Marseilles are likely to be given free-zone privileges, and other consular reports show Norway interested in making Christiania a free port. Portugal has been establishing one at Lisbon. Spain authorized a free zone at Cadiz in 1914, at Barcelona in 1916, and at Bilbao and Santander in 1918. Considering how many free ports existed in the world before 1914, the United States will be left in splendid isolation unless it takes steps to create them here.

THE STORY OF A HERO

BY MERRITT W. PINCKNEY.

[Judge of the Superior Court of Cook County.]

Tom is not quite 19 years of age. He looks older. That is because, without his fault, he became, shortly after his fourteenth birthday, the victim of the wanton act of a reckless youth which resulted in his present infirmity and aged him beyond his years.

Tom is not his real name. Since this is a true story, and the hero of it lives in our midst, we will omit his real name.

I wish I could say he is alive and well, but I cannot. I am sure you will agree with me, when you know his story, that he is much alive. Mentally and spiritually he is well, but not physically; for he is doomed to the use of a crutch and cane all his remaining years.

At 14 he was a healthy, wide awake, active boy, ever ready for a foot race, a game of ball, or a wrestling match. He was also ready to run errands for his mother.

In September, 1914, he entered the eighth grade. He stood well in his class. After school and on Saturdays he worked for a grocer, and received $4 per week, all of which went to his mother to help support the family. His father is dead. An 18 year old brother and a sister of 7 years, Tom and his mother constituted the family, when fate was unkind to him.

Today as Tom approaches his nineteenth anniversary he stands nearly 6 feet tall. He is slender and, owing to his infirmity, moves with difficulty. Yesterday, daylight, sunshine, green meadows, sparkling waters, the song of the birds—the world before him where to choose; today, night, darkness, lost opportunity, the wings of his soul beating against the bars of his living prison—his crippled body.

Chance plays an important part in most of our lives. It did in Tom's life. It guided his steps on Nov. 27, 1914, into the presence of four bad boys, who were pilfering the barn of his employer. Tom chased them down the alley. He undertook their capture single handed — four against one. Two showed fight, and one stabbed Tom in the back with a pocket knife.

The seriousness of the result was entirely out of proportion to the weapon used. Here chance again played an important part. The small blade of the pocket knife entered Tom's back about the level of the tenth dorsal vetebra. Paralysis from the hips down immediately resulted.

An eminent surgeon and neurologist, after making a careful examination of Tom in the presence of the juvenile judge, the psychopathic physician of the Juvenile court, and the lad's mother, gave as his opinion that Tom's case was hopeless; that he could live only a short time longer; and that it would be useless to continue any physical treatment in the hope of his living beyond a year and a half at the most.

In so far as it was possible to do so, it was sought to soften the crushing effect of the blow by telling Tom that doctors were not infallible—that they made mistakes, and that this doctor especially was mistaken. Tom was told that the future use of his legs depended upon him; that he must concentrate his will power, all his mental strength and thought, upon an effort to move his legs; and that he must never give up; that this must be the task of his every waking moment.

Tom's tears ceased to flow. I never saw him give way to tears again. Indeed, during the entire four years of his struggle to regain control of his half-dead self I never heard a word of complaint against his fate.

Fortunately for Tom his teacher in the public school had an interest in the pupils she taught which was not measured by the salary she received.

Her sympathetic nature saw Tom's great need, and responded immediately. She devoted herself so generously and so effectively to Tom outside of school hours that he was able to graduate with his class in June, 1915. He sat on the platform in a wheelchair during the exercises. There may have been other members of the class who were as proud as he to receive the diploma—surely none deserved it more.

About the time Tom graduated from the eighth grade it became apparent to his friends that his health was failing and that his physical progress was not satisfactory, and that little if any improvement had been made in his powers of locomotion.

Certain friends of the judge were appealed to, and sufficient funds became available to place Tom in a west side sanitarium, where he remained for one year. While there his diet was carefully prescribed and regulated. He received osteopathic, hydropathic, and chiropractic treatment regularly.

When he left the sanitarium in June, 1916, he was much improved in his general health; he could, by placing his hand on a chair, a table, or against the wall, rise to his feet; he could stand and balance himself unsupported, and by extreme effort and exertion he could move his left foot, and by and by take a step.

Our funds were running low and must be husbanded. So Tom returned to his mother's flat. He brought with him a knowledge of the dietary principles he had absorbed, and of the health exercises and physical culture movements taught him. These he continued to observe and practice.

Tom's prospect was even now anything but alluring. He was still living. He could stand alone and take a step, but he could not walk.

But "where there's a will there's a way." Given a worthy cause to work for, one should fall to with a will. From sources you least expect help will come.

So it was with Tom. Two citizens of Chicago, one a captain of industry and the other a wealthy widow, responded generously to the call for help and for nearly two years Tom's board and lodging was provided for. He needed a typewriter; the first business man asked sent him one. His inability to walk kept him from attendance at the school room. The president of one of the best schools of correspondence undertook to instruct Tom without charge in a course of English. So well did Tom avail himself of this opportunity that he passed the final examination, receiving a grade of 97 per cent.

The great problem which now confronted Tom and his friends was the selection of a vocation. It was decided he should take up stenography with a view to his becoming a court reporter.

The manager of the best shorthand school in the city donated his services to Tom's stenographic education. At first his instruction was by correspondence. Later he was taken to the school in a taxicab three times a week, when he received dictation in the class room and came in competition with other students.

Again the lad made good in a way that won the admiration and respect of his teachers and of the manager who had befriended him. He devoted himself with untiring energy to the work. He has made remarkable progress and is ready for his first job as a stenographer.

Tom should not work until he is stronger physically and until he is better equipped in his general education and in his special training. It may mean a physical or mental breakdown—possibly both. But there seems to be no choice to his friends for two reasons; first, a scarcity of funds to carry on his further treatment and instruction and, second, Tom's determination to escape from a condition of dependency which hurts his pride and to become self-supporting.

Why have I written this sketch? First, because this experience of Tom's has been a great help to me and I hoped that if I could make you who read this story see and understand it as I have seen it—see and catch the spirit of the lad rising triumphant above every adversity, it would prove a great help to you; second, I hoped that the story might bring a brave and deserving lad the help he so much needed but which, unfortunately, the few friends familiar with the facts could not give.

If the latter end is not attained, I shall feel the fault is mine and that I have signally failed in the telling of his story; for surely there are many men and women in Chicago liberally endowed with this world's goods who, if they could read this word picture understandingly, would gladly make Tom's future secure and his remaining years happy ones.

OUR STOMACHS CHRONIC GRUMBLERS.

Of the people who write to this department a very large number write about stomach troubles. In most instances the diagnosis is home made, though doctors are responsible for many of the diagnoses and patent medicine advertising for more. Most of the people who write have taken gallons of liquid stomach medicines and pounds of pills. Most of them, having run through a long list of stomach troubles, have fallen back on soda and this they take every day. The names of many of them are to be found on the lists of testimonials circularized by the patent medicine people. I should say that I get more letters about stomach trouble—so-called dyspepsia—than about any other single complaint.

Now the stomach is a very healthy organ. Rarely does it cause death or even serious illness. Reports of vital statistics have very few entries of deaths due to stomach trouble. The stomach has no infections similar to pneumonia in the lungs. Tuberculosis of the stomach is a very rare disease and possibly never exists except in people who are infected with tuberculosis in many organs. The stomach has no disease similar to Bright's disease of the kidneys. It has no disease similar to locomotor ataxia in the spinal cord or softening of the brain. Although when a man smokes his first cigar his stomach is the first organ to rebel, there is no stomach condition comparable with smoker's heart. Unlike the thyroid it does not develop goiter or anything like it. Unlike the eye it does not develop cataract or anything like it.

To summarize, the stomach is remarkably free from tendency disease. No other organ is capable of standing so much abuse without wearing out or becoming lowered in resistance and developing an infection. And yet my records and those of everybody else show that stomach complaints lead all others. The reason is that the stomach is a very complaining organ. It is a constitutional grouch and general all-round kicker. It complains of its own troubles and everybody else's. It not only raises a row over the abuse of a neighbor but it may grow very indignant over injury done some organs a long way across the body.

Being on the same party line as the appendix, lower intestines and gall bladder, naturally most of the stomach complaints originate in those organs. For the large abdominal sympathetic nervous system which connects up all the organs in the abdomen and pelvis is a good deal like a neighborhood telephone in the country. When one man rings he rings every bell on the circuit and the insulation being poor the bell tingles lots of times when no one has rung. The sympathetic nerve is a great system of communicating, very poorly insulated nerves.

Let us illustrate by a lot of cases taken from the literature.

No. 1.—A woman 40 years old, for a year had a feeling "as though there was a lump in the stomach." The distress from this lump made life a burden. Whenever she took tea or coffee she vomited. Although nauseated a good part of the time she did not vomit except after drinking tea or coffee. The symptoms were worse in the morning and she never had any appetite for breakfast. Stomach analysis and X-ray examination showed nothing.

No. 2.—A woman 43 years old had suffered with severe pain in her stomach for three weeks. The pain was constant and was not affected by eating. It was just as bad when the stomach was empty as when it was full. It was dull and gnawing in character. She belched frequently. There was no jaundice and no history of jaundice having been present. There was tenderness at the rib edge on both sides.

No. 3.—For three years a man thirty-four years of age had complained of dull, gnawing in the pit of the stomach. Eating relieved the pain but about an hour and a half afterwards the pain was back, hurting as hard as ever. Occasionally nausea was present, but there had never been any vomiting. Belching was objectionable. There was no jaundice. This man had lost fifteen pounds in weight. There was tenderness over the appendix. X-ray examination showed adhesions around the stomach interfering with its work.

No. 4.—A man 66 years of age had complained of pain in the stomach for two months. The pain came on one hour after eating and lasted for two or three hours and was relieved by drinking hot milk. He did not vomit. The man had lost twenty pounds in two months. He gave a history of having had a similar attack which lasted one month two years before. Stomach analysis did not help in the diagnosis. X-ray examination indicated that there was a tumor outside the stomach pressing on it.

No. 5.—A woman forty-nine years of age had had severe pain in her stomach for seven months. Her pain radiated from the stomach to the shoulder. The pain was made neither worse nor better by taking of food. Nausea was almost constant and she vomited occasionally. She had never vomited any blood. She had lost twenty pounds in three months.

Almost any home diagnostician would have called these cases severe stomach trouble. The loss of weight in three of them would have been interpreted as meaning cancer. And yet operations showed that all five were suffering from adhesions around the gall bladder and when the adhesions were operated on the symptoms of stomach trouble all disappeared.

It would be just as easy to find five cases of supposed stomach trouble due to inflammation of the appendix. The symptoms of a properly chosen group of cases of stomach trouble due to chronic appendicitis would be even more typical of dyspepsia. The same statement could be made as to gall stones, ulcers of the intestines, constipation, and disease of the pancreas.

Let us wander still further afield. Some forms of Bright's disease cause more symptoms of stomach trouble than they do of kidney trouble. In fact, unless the urine is examined no symptoms of kidney trouble are found. The vomiting of pregnancy is proof that conditions in the pelvis may cause symptoms of stomach trouble. Many brain troubles cause vomiting and other symptoms of stomach trouble.

Now let us come at the matter from the side of symptoms rather than of the diseases which cause them. There is no symptom of dyspepsia which necessarily means trouble in the stomach. Belching is as reliable a symptom of dyspepsia as we have. Very little gas is found in the stomach. In the first place the food only remains in the stomach one to three hours, not long enough for the formation of much gas. The stomach contents being acid, very few live bacteria are found in it, and those are not producing any considerable amount of gas. Most of the gas belched is swallowed or partly swallowed as a part of the act of belching. The disposition to swallow in and immediately belch it may be caused by discomfort or irritation in the stomach or the irritation may be located at almost any other point in the abdomen.

Fullness after eating is altogether a "nervous feeling." It may mean trouble in the stomach or an overloaded large intestine or gall bladder trouble or trouble elsewhere. In many cases an enema or a saline purge will quickly relieve the symptom.

Spitting up sour stuff is regarded as about the surest sign of dyspepsia. The contents of the stomach are naturally very sour. They must be sour to perform the work of stomach digestion. Therefore, if anything which is not sour comes up there is something wrong. Then, if the quality of sourness is not where the fault lies, where is it? The fact that any part of the stomach contents comes up means that there is something wrong. But what and where? The belching up of stomach contents is not far from being a physiologic act. Babies do it almost habitually. It does not mean stomach trouble with them, not with cows and other ruminants. Usually this symptom in an adult means that the opening into the stomach is not so tightly closed as it should be. This may be due to stomach trouble or trouble anywhere else in the abdomen.

Pain is another symptom frequently present. It is caused more often by trouble elsewhere.

And so on down the line with stomach symptoms. If there is no symptom of stomach trouble that is dependable what are we going to do about it? We will gain a good deal if we do nothing. As matters now stand, the custom is to do too much. As a rule we rush first to the soda can, and that is about the worst thing we could do. A dose of soda neutralizes the normal acid of the stomach and stops digestion. The amount taken is always many times as much as the acid of the gastric juice. Taking alkali always stimulates the secretion of acid. Before a person has taken many doses of soda he had his stomach ruining itself trying to secrete enough acid to neutralize the drug. The balance of the body between acid and alkali is very delicate. Taking soda disturbs this balance.

The second effort generally lies in the direction of patent medicines, dyspepsia tablets, and such. Since these are about 99 per cent soda the patient has merely changed from cheaper soda to expensive soda. Probably the first step is to stop eating for two or three days. And the second is to change the habits of eating. This means smaller meals, slower eating, better chewing, and a more hygienic diet. If this, exercising, and regular bowel habits do not effect a cure nothing short of a careful examination and appropriate surgical or medical service will.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

IN LIEU OF THE SALOON.

La Salle, Ill., Feb. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Having just finished reading your editorial on "Rum and Rebellion," I want to tell you how fully I appreciate it.

I have been an advocate for prohibition for years and feel very glad to see the efforts of the workers crowned with success.

One year from now the country will be dry and thousands of people who found their enjoyment in the saloons will have nowhere to go. I think it is a part of our duty to see that some place is provided where they can at least have good wholesome enjoyment.

Why not keep these organizations which have proved so efficient during the war? I mean the Y. M. C. A. and the K. C. When the men come back they will turn to them as they did during camp life. If we subscribe as we have done during the war I am sure they will fill the void left by the closing of the saloon.

"BIRD NOTES."

Utica, Ill., Feb. 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I have been greatly interested in Larry St. John's "Bird Notes" in THE TRIBUNE. At a time when many people are becoming so keenly alive to the desirability of conserving the wild life of our country, and when our government is attempting adequately to protect such life, such articles are especially pertinent.

In last Friday's issue of your paper Mr. St. John refers to the spring variations of the white-breasted nuthatche's song. The only bird book to which I have access at present is Mathews' "Field Book," in which he says:

"The nuthatches are entirely unmusical—they have no song." He proceeds to dwell at some length upon the "yank, yank," with which nature lovers are familiar. It is interesting to know that the eccentric little fellow does really sing, and one wonders just what his song may be like.

Daily bird articles, dealing with both our summer and winter residents, would be of great interest to nature lovers, as well as of special value to a large class of boys who would willingly exchange the rifle for the opera glass could their eyes but be opened to the advantages of the latter weapon.

COURT ACTION NECESSARY.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—My son is with the American army in France. Last Christmas (1917) he bought a phonograph on the installment plan. He paid the monthly installments up to April, when he enlisted. He was unable to keep up the payments after that. Now the firm from which the phonograph was purchased threatens to take it if back payments are not made. Please inform me if they may take this phonograph while he is still in the service.

MRS. B. C.

From the facts as you state them, our opinion is that the vendor cannot take the phonograph without court action. By the terms of the soldiers' and sailors' civil relief act, on the hearing of such action, the court may order the repayment of prior installments or deposits or any part thereof as a condition of terminating possession of the property, or may stay the proceedings until three months after the military service, unless in the opinion of the court the ability of the defendant to comply with the terms of the contract is not materially affected by reason of such service, or it may make such other disposition of the case as many be equitable to conserve the interests of all parties.

FIRE PROTECTION IN EDGEWATER.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Whereas it seems to be a hopeless case to secure a fire engine station in the North Edgewater district, why is it not possible, in order to save time and property, to have the nearest engine company (which is in Summerdale) equipped with motor apparatus?

The better protected districts of Chicago appear to have plenty of motor engines, and there is no real necessity for this type in the loop except for display.

J. R. D.

The assistant fire marshal is now making a survey of the territory, Summerdale, in connection with the complaint that motor fire apparatus should be installed for the protection of the property owners.

I also notice that the complainant raises the question of motor apparatus in the loop district. I am inclined to believe that the gentleman is not familiar with the values attached in this district, or his statement that motor apparatus is not a real necessity in the loop except for display purposes would not have been made. However, we will give his complaint serious consideration at the earliest possible date.

CROSSING TO BE PUT IN SHAPE.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I would like to know what, if anything, is being done in regard to the street car crossing at Seventy-third street and Yates avenue. I believe this is the worst crossing in Chicago and certainly a menace to life and property. Any stranger coming down this street either before or after dark has no idea of the roughness of this crossing until he hits it.

I have been going across this place for two and one-half years, and it has been in that condition all that time. R. A. S.

We have notified the Chicago Surface lines to restore this crossing to good condition at once. Any repairs needed on the balance of the roadway will receive the attention of our street repair division as soon as weather conditions permit.

HIRSCH STREET LIGHTING.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Why has Hirsch street between Spaulding and Kedzie avenues been kept dark most of the winter? Humboldt park is kept lit up most of the night for the very few autoists who use the park at this time of the year, while Hirsch street is in darkness. What is the cause of this condition?

X. Y. Z.

The street lamps in Hirsch street between Spaulding and Kedzie avenues have been subject to line trouble, which necessitated work by the construction division. For the last three months the department has been unable to hire sufficient men to do work of this nature, for which reason considerable outage has not been given the prompt attention that it would receive under normal conditions. We are pleased to state that men for this work are now available and trouble throughout the city is being cleared as rapidly as possible.

Freeport, Ill., Feb. 4.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have an idea for the improvement of one of the small features of present railroad construction which with slight changes would materially safeguard the running of trains in bad weather. ANARCHS AND ECSTASY

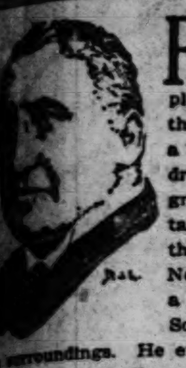
by James Gibbons Huneker



FROM Bach to Scriabin, have not all composers been anarchs? At first blush, the plodding John Sebastian Bach of the Ill-Tempered Clavichord seems a dubious figure with which to drape the red flag of revolt. He grew a forest of children. He taught early and late. He played the organ in church of Sundays. Nevertheless, his music proves him a revolutionist. And, like any good Social Democrat, he quarreled with his surroundings. He even went out for a drink during a prosy sermon—all sermons are necessarily prosy, else they wouldn't be sermons—and was almost discharged by his superiors for returning late; a perpetual warning to thirsty organists.

If Lombroso had been cognizant of this suspicious fact he would have built a terrific structure of degeneration theories with all sorts of inferential subcellars. Stranger still, the music of Bach remains as revolutionary as the hour it was written. No latter day composer has gone so far as some of his fantasies. Mozart and Gluck depended too much on aristocratic patronage to play the rôles of anarchs; yet tales are extant of their refusal to lick the boots of the mighty or curve the spine of the suppliant. Handel! A fighter, a revolutionist born, a hater of tyrants. And the most virile among musicians except the peasant Beethoven—since the recent war become a Belgian composer! His contempt for rank and its entailed snobberies was like a blow from a muscular fist. Haydn need not be considered. He was a henpecked Croatian, and strange stories are related of this merry little blade, truly a chamber music husband. Mendelssohn was Bach watered down for general consumption. Schubert and Schumann were anarchs, but the supreme anarch of art was Beethoven, who translated into daily practice the radicalism of his music.

Because of its opportunities for the expansion of the soul, music has ever attracted the strong, free sons of the earth. It is, par excellence, the art masculine. The profoundest truths, the most blasphemous ideas, may be incorporated within the walls of a symphony and the police none the wiser.

FROM his point of view I do not wonder at Reginald de Koven's abhorrence of the Kaisermarch any more than I fail to laud Dean Krehbiel's hatred of Prokofieff's dangerous symphony. Frankly, I sat in fear and trembling at Æolian hall and Carnegie hall when Serge Prokofieff played, momentarily expecting the police to rush upon the stage and seize the musically wicked young Russian—the police and also the Comstockian society. If it needed four plain clothes men to overhear Josef Stransky, when he conducted Wagner at a Philharmonic concert, how big an army would it take to suppress Prokofieff? (Cable Premier Paderewski, Warsaw, Poland, for an adequate answer.)

Chopin presents us with a psychic "equivalent of war," as William James has put it, in portions of his music, notably the polonaises; while Richard Strauss has buried more bombs in his work than ever Chopin with his cannon smothered in roses, or Bakounine and his nihilistic prose. Liszt, midway in his mortal life, was bitten by the socialistic theories af Saint-Simon, and, though a silken courtier, he was an innovator in his music. Brahms was a freethinker and a democrat, but closely hugged the classic line and seldom strayed from the boundaries of his Romantic park.

Berlioz, Hector of the Flaming Locks, was, his life long, a fiery individualist. He would have made a picturesque figure waving a blood red flag on the barricades. His fantastic symphony is charged with the tonal commandments of anarchy. Richard Wagner may not have shouldered a musket during the Dresden uprising of 1849, yet he was, with Roeckel and Bakounine, one of its inspirers. Luckily for us he ran away, else "Tristan" might have remained in the womb of eternal silence. Wagner may be called the Joseph Proudhon among composers; his music is anarchy incarnate, passionately deliberate, like the sad and logical music we find in the great Frenchman's "Philosophy of Misery" (by the way, a subtitle). His very scheme of harmonization is the symbol of a soul insurgent in the music of Richard Strauss.

And what shall we say to the exquisite anarchy of Debussy and Ravel? To the cerebral insurrection of Schoenberg? To the devastating sirocco blasts of Scriabin, Stravinsky, Ornstein, and Prokofieff?

AND ecstasy! It is not an eminently modern quality in the Seven Arts. Sculpture did for a time resist the universal disintegration, this imbroglio of all the arts. Before Rodin no sculptor had so greatly dared to break the line, had dared to shiver the syntax of stone. Sculpture is a static, not a dynamic, art; therefore, let us observe the rules, preserve the chill spirit of the cemetery. What Mallarmé attempted in poetry Rodin accomplished in clay. His marbles do not represent, but present, emotion or the evocation of emotion; as in music, form and substance coalesce. If he does not, as did Mallarmé, arouse "the silent thunder afloat in the leaves," he summons from the vasty deep the spirits of beauty, love, hate, pain, joy, sin, ecstasy—above all, ecstasy.

The primal and danger-breeding gift of ecstasy is bestowed upon few. Keats had it, and Shelley; despite his passion, Byron missed it, as did the austere Wordsworth—who had loftier compensations. Swinburne had it from the first. Not Tennyson, and Browning only in occasional exaltation. Like the "cold devils" of Félicien Rops, collected in frozen ecstasy, the winds of hell booming about them, the poetry of Charles Baudelaire is ecstatic. Poe and Heine knew ecstasy, and Liszt, too; but Wagner, ill tempered like all martyrs, was the master adept of his century. Tschaikowsky closely follows him, and in the tiny piano pieces of Chopin ecstasy is pinioned in a few bars, the soul rapt to heaven in a phrase. Richard Strauss has shown us a variation on the theme: voluptuousness troubled by pain, the soul tortured by the very ecstasy of ecstasy. Like Yeats, he is "Master of Still Stars and of the Flaming Door."

SCRIABIN is of this tormented choir; is Arthur B. Davies, our own mystic, primitive painter. And Charles Martin Loeffler. It may be the decadence, as any art is in decadence which stakes the parts against the whole. That ecstasy may be aroused by pictures of love and death, as in the cases of Poe and Baudelaire, Wagner and Strauss, should not therefore be adjudged morbid. In the far east they hypnotize neophytes with a bit of broken mirror, for in the kingdom of art, as in heaven, there are many mansions. It was possibly a relic of his early admiration for the Baudelaire poems that set Wagner to extolling ecstasy from his orchestra by images of love and death, though doubtless the temperament which seeks assuagement in such a comminglement —a temperament more often encountered in medieval art than now—was natural to Wagner. He makes his Isolde sing madly and mournfully over a corpse, and, throwing herself upon the dead Tristan, she dissolves into the ecstasies of sweet, cruel love; in Salome, Richard Strauss closely patterns after Wagner; there is the head of a dead man—though on a charger—and there follows a poignant ecstasy not to be found in all music.

Both men play with similar counters: love and death, and death 'mid love. In Pisa may be seen (attributed by Vasari) Orcagna's fresco, "The Triumph of Death." It has been set to grotesque music by Liszt in his "Dance of Death." Let us not forget the great Italian, Gabriele d'Annunzio, whose magnificent prose, from "The Triumph of Death" to "Forsè Che Si Forsè Che No," is a pæan to the tutelar gods of humanity, love and death. The sting of the flesh and the way of all flesh are intermingled in Rodin's astounding fugue, "The Gate of Hell." First things and Last things, love and life, bitterness and death, have ever ruled the arts; and all great art is an archic, cosmos, and chaos cunningly proportioned.

THE HAWTHORN TREE

By Siegfried Sassoon

Not much to me is yonder lane
Where I go every day;
But when there's been a shower of rain

With fearsome things to see
Would give his eyes for just one glance
At our white hawthorn tree.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

FEBRUARY

Mid Winter.

WHITE days and gray; light snows and heavy; whirling winds and soft; streams frozen and streams running black by white edged banks; days of crisp air and days of soft rain; the brown face of the earth glazed with frost or white with new snow or sodden in a surface thaw.

The wind sibilant in the dried leaves which the white oak retains as assurance of another foliage and holds almost until the new buds have forced the dead to drop; willow catkins on cut branches lengthening and dropping pollen in the heated room to which they have been carried and in which they have been forced. Hepatica, having put forth small fuzzy spirals, raising them in the same warmth to which folk, impatient of slow processes, have carried them to see the revival of spring, even if the north wind do blow and carry snow.

Intimations everywhere in stalk and bud of the whirl of the wheel from brown and white to green; wild geese overhead in the faintest light of day, flying from inland marsh to the shore of the lake; the spring song of the chickadee, a song which comes as through a window opened and then shut. Storm and inclemency, brisk cold and brilliance, promise and deferred fulfillment, gray, white and brown, a long trail, but one along which the buds swell and the song increases.

THE LOGIC OF THE HUMAN BODY—By Waldo Frank

"MAN'S SUPREME INHERITANCE," by F. Matthias Alexander, with an introductory word by Prof. John Dewey. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

THE philosophy and technique of Mr. Alexander are perhaps best approached through an understanding of the vast human need which called them forth. It is no new story that man's dwelling on the planes of civilization is playing accumulative havoc with those faculties of endurance and control upon which his being really civilized depends. Indeed, man's conscience of social helplessness and spiritual disease is the deepest story of the nineteenth century.

The romantic reaction of Rousseau, the mountain-top panacea of Nietzsche, the Christian anarchism of Tolstoi, the divine pity of Dostoevski have, all, this common base: that they express man's knowledge of some huge discrepancy between his culture on the one hand and his self-power and desires on the other. The development of the new psychology of Freud is similarly grounded. For it lays bare the conflicts and the ruins brought upon us by this same discrepancy.

And all the social and economic activity of Europe from Proudhon to the great war and from the war to Lenin is the stirring for equilibrium and for adjustment. Something is the matter. The universal reports of increased physical and mental degeneration make this plain. The failure of so-called education bears this out. The art and literature of Europe for a hundred years have been tragic paraphrases of the same conclusion. In the work of Mr. Alexander we are at last groping toward a constructive answer.

The simplicity of the answer has probably helped retard its more general acceptance. We have an old habit, bequeathed us by the early Christians, of despising the human body. We prefer to solve our lofty problems by jumping into the clouds. Many of us Americans, indeed, think we can cure even our stomach aches by the same gesture. When, therefore, after the welter of complex metaphysical and transcendental speculation in which we have been floundering for a thousand years, we are told to return humbly and devoutly to our body as to the seat both of trouble and salvation, something in us revolts: something "answers back: "Ah, no! We are beyond that! We have gotten over all of that. We are mental, spiritual beings." And, in consequence, the abyss between Desire and Power which has caused all the agony of the modern epoch continues to grow wider.

BRIEFLY stated, Mr. Alexander presents this thesis: Our bodies, like our behavior, were at one time organized for unconscious control, as are the bodies of other animals. Our lives, however, have in civilization been pushed far from those activities and patterns of behavior for which the primitive unconscious control was adequate. Unconscious control, in other words, for men who sit at desks and read, and eat sophisticated food, and work at complex machines, and lead emotionally intricate lives, has broken down.

Our bodies are abandoned, therefore, at this climax of civilization, by the one guidance—the instinctive, unconscious one—which nature gave us. In place of it we must achieve another guidance, achieve conscious control to synchronize with the deliberate, organized life of civilization. And until we have this new control there must continue to exist a dangerous gulf between the demands made by society and by our minds upon our organism and its capacities: there must ensue just such physical and nervous breakdown, just such social malady and such soul sickness as brand the last century as the most agonized in the human story.

TO have formulated this thesis would have been perhaps enough to gain Mr. Alexander the rather belated recognition he is receiving at the hands of advanced educationists. But what makes his book revolutionary is that Mr. Alexander has done more. He has evolved a technique for the acquistion of conscious control and he has applied and is teaching others to apply it.

It is impossible here to go deeply into the psychological wealth of his methods. Approximately, what Mr. Alexander achieves is a linking up of the lower with the higher activities of the human organism. Let me try to make this clear. In modern civilization, our intellect has gone on developing, refining, taking up new spheres of consciousness and new functions of activity. And all of self not included in that surface world of cerebration remains in the unconscious realm of reflex control adequate only to those demands of animal existence upon which and for which it was built up.

Unfortunately, however, civilized mind remains attached to uncivilized body. Results: All manner of functional disorder of which the most common of course are the physical diseases and the psychoneuroses. Mr. Alexander's method provides a means of doing away with this inner war.

IT will be plain at once wherein this method touches upon and differs with the analytic psychology of Freud. Both techniques are means toward the aggrandizement of conscious self. Psychoanalysis by such royal avenues as the dream reaches the hidden deposits of desire and in bringing them up within the sway of the patient's mind empowers his will, to make disposal of them. The Alexandrian technique is more than the mere converse of the Freudian. By way of sensory reëducation and manipulation the pupil's mind is brought into contact with the equally hidden scope of his physical and sensory activity.

And when once a unit of will and function is achieved for the psychophysical self, the pupil is able to cope with the problems of his highly specialized life, quite as the animal with instinctive control can cope with the demands of its instinctive world.

There is no need here to compare these two paramount contributions to human progress. Psychoanalysis has given us deeper knowledge of the human psyche in its individual, historical and aesthetic aspect than any other inquiry. And yet there is the justice of logic in the claim that as regards problems of actual functioning, the technique of Mr. Alexander is the more fundamental. Let us take an example: A man is invalidated by neurotic fears. Psychoanalysis makes conscious for him that these fears are in reality suppressed desires and that, unable to face them in himself, he has projected them as fears into the outer world.

Mr. Alexander considers such fears, and indeed all specific nervous and physical maladjustment, to be end symptoms of a general conflict in the functioning of the human organism. We have explained whence, in his judgment, this conflict comes. He therefore thrusts underneath details and by his method makes of his pupil's organism a conscious instrument. This instrument is the result of a correlated mastery of mind and body. By means of it the pupil is enabled to cope not only with specific disorders—including the presence of actual disease. He finds within himself an enhanced power to react, in accordance with the dictate of his mind and will, to all the difficulties that arise from his existence as a social being. The psychoanalyzed patient might still remain in a state of helplessness as regards such organic control.

The abyss between psychic control and the substratum of sensory and muscular control will not have been bridged. And from this chaos a new conflict might arise, as did the old one. To this conclusion we are led even by the analysts themselves. Adler and Jung have established the source of neurotic disorders in the presence of physical disability and social maladjustment. So that, while the work of Mr. Alexander in no way supersedes the other, it does, from the standpoint of individual functioning and practical education, decidedly cut under it. It reaches direct to the physical foundation of life: to the physical foundation of psychic life. It is therefore a radical contribution to dynamic psychology, and to the entire scale of individual and social progress of which the amelioration of human organism is the tonal key.

LET me take a single instance of its application. Today, under whatever guise of modernity, we still insist that by training a child's mind we are giving it an education. It is plain, however, from Mr. Alexander's thesis, that if the child's inherited plane be one of unconscious control, it can be educated for conscious life in civilization only by a complete and integral reëducation upon the conscious plane. In our failure to act upon this logic of the human body, we create in our schools the beginnings of that very division between mental life and functional control whence come all our ills. For with their inadequate inner guidance, the bodies of children subtly break down before the demands of intellectual life. Bad physical habits are formed: eyes weaken, shoulders round, chests grow rigid as the stress of the world's tasks swing the children farther from their unconscious sensory base. And it is the finding of Mr. Alexander that the imperfectly used body brings the inevitable psychic or nervous flaw. Conversely, however, the harmonious organism needfully flowers into healthy psychic articulation.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by Fanny Butcher

BOOKS rarely have a sensuous appeal. Most books are just plain ugly to look at, or at best merely a so-so temple for the spirit within. Sometimes, however, a book is so sensitized an entity of type, paper, illustrations, and text that it is a work of delicate beauty, a bit of creative art just as satisfying to the senses as a Grecian urn. The new edition of Max Beerbohm's charming fantasy "The Happy Hypocrite" reflects the joy in the doing which is the foundation of all real craftmanship. No text could be a more potent inspiration to an artist. George Sheringham must have done a work of love when he made the wholly charming illustrations. Carefully chosen paper, dignified type, and an ink which looks more like india than ordinary printers' ink and delicate color prints perpetuate the artist's and the author's ideals.

"The Happy Hypocrite" is too well known to need reintroducing. It appeared first in the famous Yellow book and it has appeared in book form and has been successfully produced as a play. The John Lane company which has made some very beautiful books, never made a more exquisite one than this. "Positively lyrical about it," scoffs the cynic anent my enthusiasm. Wait, old Sniffer until you see it. You'll be dazzled yourself.

Back to the old Clayhanger days Arnold Bennett goes in "The Roll Call." The old leisure of description, of psychological analysis which seems nothing more than a description of a landscape, the old Jack Horner quality of always pulling out a plum when he sticks his thumb into the pie of life the omniscience that inspired one of my classmates at college into the exclamation. "Arnold Bennett reminds me of God, he knows so much about people"—all of those qualities are in the first part of "The Roll Call." But the latter part of the book proclaims loudly that Arnold Bennett didn't "feel" the war. Answering the roll call for George Edwin Cannon might have been a business journey, so little of the usual thorough psychologizing does it inspire in Mr. Bennett's pen. "The Pretty Lady" and "The Roll Call" are Arnold Bennett's literary reaction to the war. Before August, 1914 he was one of the greatest of the great English novelists!

The books which are most called for at the public library are as good a barometer as could be found of the literary likes of the average reader. Mr. A. Reader has asked this week for Robert Cortes Holliday's "Walking Stick Papers" [Doran]; Mrs. T. P. O'Connor's "Herself-Ireland" [Dodd Mead]; Lyton Strachey's "Eminent Victorians" [Putnams], and Francis Hackett's "Ireland" [Huebsch].

Those who are inclined to be sentimental about the German people are urged by the Outlook to read "The German Terror in France" [Doran], by A. J. Toynbee.

Four additions to the Modern Library [Boni & Liveright] are "Villon's Poems," "The Flame of Life," by Gabriele D'Annunzio, "Woodrow Wilson's Selected Addresses and Public Papers," and "The Woman Question," composed of wise words by wise men and women, garnered by T. R. Smith. The Modern Library is a joy!

Gene Stratton Porter admits that her books are sentimental and idealized. In fact, she proclaims it. She gave out a statement the other day, to-wit: "For every bad man and woman I have ever known I have met, lived with, and am intimately acquainted with an overwhelming number of thoroughly clean and decent people, who still believe in God and cherish high ideals, and it is upon the lives of these that I base what I write. To contend that this does not produce a picture true to life is idiocy. It does. It produces a picture true to ideal life, to the best that good men and good women can do at level best. I care very little for the magazine or newspaper critics who proclaim that there is no such thing as a moral man, and that my pictures of life are sentimental and idealized. They are! And I glory in them! They are straight, living pictures from the lives of men and women of morals, honour, and living kindness. They form 'idealized pictures of life' because they are copies from life where it touches religion, chastity, love, home, and hope of heaven ultimately. None of these roads leads to publicity and the divorce court. They all end in the shelter and seclusion of a home." You can't blame her for glorying in them. They've put her among the gold plated daughters of the land.

A grim echo of the past came the other day in a story from the inimitable lecturing partnership of James Whitcomb Riley and Bill Nye. It was told to me by a man of truth and veracity, who swore it had never been printed. They got into a little town, and Bill Nye sought out the station agent to ask where the town tonsorial parlor was located. The station agent 'lowed as they wasn't no parlor, but they was a man what could shave 'em. "Lead me to him," said Bill, or whatever they said in those days. "I'll fetch him," the agent answered, and departed for the town barber, after carefully locking up the station, so that the strangers had to sit down on a freight truck or stand up. He came back with a polled hayseed and a carpet bag. "He'll shave ye." The barber looked around, saw the truck with the two men on it, and said, "Which one of ye wants tuh get shaved?" Bill Nye admitted he was the dandy of the family. "Then ye'll have to get down off that waggin," he said to Riley, "and lie down flat on it," to Bill Nye. "But I want to get shaved. You don't lie down to get shaved. See here, are you a barber or aren't you?" "Well, I'm a barber, all right, mister. But I always shave 'em lyin' down. I ain't never shaved a live one."

FURTHER LIGHT ON MR. WILSON'S MIND

The following, which may or may not be significant of a phase of the English attitude, appeared in a recent issue of the English Nation.

We have received the following account of an interview with Mr. Wilson from an occasional contributor. We offer it under the necessary reserve; but its remarkable agreement with the Times interview goes far to convince us of its authenticity.

PRESIDENT WILSON was in the middle of an anecdote when I was announced. He glanced at his watch and immediately cut the story short and showed President Poincaré the door; for it was to him that he was speaking. This is characteristic of the man. He is never late, even by the fraction of a second. He never wastes a moment between two interviews. And he always contrives to end the interview in the middle of an anecdote. By this he secures an important insight into the disposition of his visitor. If he is really interested, he comes back to hear the end of the story. If not, the president has no use for him.

Perhaps it was English prejudice; but I had expected to see a small man. And, like my colleague of the Times, I had been led to believe that the lower part of the president's face exactly resembled the upper half. I was mistaken. His brow resembled his chin in material, but was unmistakably different in shape. And he was a full sized man. I was told afterwards that—if I may paraphrase Falstaff—he is not only tall himself, but is the cause of tallness in others. Newspaper correspondents find after interviewing him that their legs are at least three inches longer than before. Inexplicable as this phenomenon is, there can be no doubt that it occurs.

Mr. Wilson's first words made the same impression of intense sincerity on me as on Lord Northcliffe's ambassador. "I am delighted to see you," he said. "The world expects, and rightly expects, that its democratic statesmen shall take it into their unreserved confidence through the medium of the press. Question me without reserve. Explore my mind. I have no secrets. I am going to be perfectly frank with you; and I promise you that what you report will never be disowned by me. Whatever record leaps to light, you never shall be blamed."

"I am unspeakably obliged to you," I replied, confused for the moment by this excess of confidence. "I shall, when I have collected myself somewhat, venture to put two questions."

"Two thousand," he exclaimed in a ringing voice, and threw himself into an all too short chaise longue, which cracked in all its joints at the impact of the hickory figure.

"What," I said, cautiously weighing my words, "do you understand by making Germany pay for the war?"

Each of his eyes suddenly fixed itself on the other; an infallible sign that his mind was working at its utmost strain. "What," he repeated, slowly and deliberately, scrutinizing every syllable, "do—I—understand—by — making — Germany—pay—for—the—war? Ah, what, indeed?" With a sudden impulse of self-revelation, he leaned towards me and tapped my knee with his forefinger. My knee is ticklesome; and had it been tapped by an ordinary man at an ordinary moment I should have shrieked hysterically; but now I hardly noticed it; my flinching was mere reflex action. "Do not delude yourself, my friend," he said; "and do not try to delude me. Germany cannot have a war for nothing. The price of war is always terrible. I need say no more. Come to your second question."

I responded to his challenge with, "Do you think you will see eye to eye with Mr. Lloyd George at Versailles on the question of the freedom of the seas? Pardon the bluntness of the question."

"I not only pardon it; I thank you for it," he said. "And my reply shall be equally straightforward. I most emphatically shall see eye to eye with Mr. Lloyd George at Versailles. In fact, I shall not wait until then. I am going to London to see eye to eye with Mr. Lloyd George. I have come all the way from Washington to see eye to eye with Mr. Lloyd George, not only on the freedom of the seas, but on the other thirteen little matters as well. Are you answered? Is England answered?"

"If she be not," I replied, unconsciously moved to an unusual attention to my literary style by something professorial in his aspect, "she is indeed singularly hard to please."

"You are too good," he exclaimed. "Ask me another."

"Is America," I ventured in my most tactful manner, "going to build a bigger fleet than Britain?"

"For me," he said at once, with a remarkably noble air, "there is no longer any British or American fleet. The war has put an end to that. There is now only an allied fleet. Soon it will be the police force of the league of nations. Can I say less?"

"Indeed, no," I replied gratefully. "What about Japan?"

"Yes," he said, echoing me with a sweet, slightly interrogative intonation, "what about Japan?"

"What I mean is," I said, "what do you think Japan wants?"

"I see what is in your mind," he said with infinite kindness shaping my thought for me. "You think Japan wants Australia. You think she wants the Maritime province. You suspect her of aiming at a yellow hegemony in Asia. You tremble for India. You feel that you had better be particularly civil to me in view of such possibilities. Once for all, banish such suspicions from your mind. Let our union be one of hearts, not of interests. Believe me, Japan has no greater admirer than Woodrow Wilson. As a little child I licked the last sweet specks of my molasses ration from a willow pattern plate. I collect netsukis. My wife's favorite negligé is a kimono. When the Germans tell me that you are quite capable of trying to hem me in between your fleet and the Japanese fleet in your next Einkreisung, I tell them that I should like to catch you at it, just to show you how happy I should be in the embrace of two such cherished allies. Have no fear of Japan, my friend. Ask me another. Ask me another."

"You relieve my mind more than I can say," I said. "It would be so unpleasant if there were to be any disagreements between you and Mr. Lloyd George at Versailles."

"There will be none," he said fervently, "unless George is a very different man to the one I take him to be. You will find he will agree with me. But even if he did not, what could I do?"

"That is true," I said, thoughtfully. "After all, you could do nothing?"

"Absolutely nohting," he said with irresistible conviction. "I should simply go home."

"Go home alone," I echoed, catching something of the pathos of the word "home" as he uttered it. There was a far away note of the Swanee river in it.

"Alone," he repeated sadly. "Except for the American army, of course. That would come with me. Have you ever heard the story of——?"

I had; it was a chestnut. But I pretended I had not. In the middle of it Clemenceau was announced; and I had to go.

Abraham Lincoln Considered as a Literary Figure

Wednesday, the 12th, is Lincoln's birthday. Great inspirational figure in our national life that he was, Lincoln is annually the subject of one or more books. Not until the publication this week of "Abraham Lincoln as a Man of Letters," however, has there been a book written to reveal Lincoln as a writing man of marked individuality and compelling force. Luther Emerson Robinson, M. A., author of the work, traces Lincoln's literary development from an early, rather rhetorical style to that of the impressive dignity of the Gettysburg speech. We are indebted to the Reilly & Britton company, publishers of the volume, for permission to reprint the subjoined, which forms a part of the book. A reproduction of a photograph of Abraham Lincoln accompanies this issue of "The Sunday Tribune" as a supplement.

BY LUTHER EMERSON ROBINSON

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S career is of perennial interest to the world because it represents a high personal achievement accomplishd under severe difficulties. Such an achievement, entirely possible in a democracy, excites admiration among every generation of men. It contains so many points of human interest that a large and growing literature has come into existence to tell the story of his struggles with poverty, his untoward opportunities for acquiring an education, to describe his personality, to interpret his political views and policies, and to exhibit his "genius for expression."

So significant is his position in history that we preserve every scrap of his writing, trivial or important, and perpetuate every tale or tradition that promises to add to our memorial of the man and his performance. For many, his utterances on public questions have become as touchstones of political wisdom. There are reasons also for believing that, had the circumstances of his life, fallen in more favorable ways, he might have become as distinguished in the field of letters as he was eminent in statesmanship. These reasons are to be found within that large body of letters, addresses, and state papers hich he has left as a legacy from the wealth of exertion and clear thinking which fell to his experience.

We know Lincoln's biography intimately enough to discover that his mental life was a persistent and progressive unfolding in the direction of genuine culture. He was ambitious to acquire knowledge. He laid hold of even meager occasions to widen his horizons. Apparently he was equally eager to lead a life of action. At the age of 21 he had successfully piloted his father's family from Indiana to their new homestead in Illinois.

Within two years after this change of residence he became a candidate for election to the Illinois legislature from Sangamon county. In the address which he issued to the voters of the county in March, 1832, we may find a clear hint of the type of mind and inspiration which distinguished his maturity. Although up to this time he had enjoyed the privilege of less than a year's training in the elementary school and had studied English grammar only "imperfectly," the sentences and the ideas of this first political pronouncement arrest our attention. One is led to wonder how large a percentage of our legislators today would be able to write paragraphs at once as coherent and thoughtful as are contained in Lincoln's "handbill" written when he was twenty-three.

THIS earliest political document of Lincoln's, with its beginning of deliberate thinking and good style, suggests also a negative characteristic of the man. It contains a good-natured confession of humility springing from that sense of his lowly origin which seems to have survived throughout his life in much that he wrote and spoke. This characteristic was coupled with a certain infection of pioneerism which, while enhancing the popular love of Lincoln, left its stamp upon his humor, touched with mediocrity many of his figures of speech, and made very commonplace language suffice for much of his routine.

Hence, a large part of his writings do not share the literary distinction of another part for the reason that Lincoln psychology contained leanings that were as ordinary as his moments of uprush were beautiful and ideal. A touch of rusticity, contributed by his birth and environment, is to be found in much of his written work, but it enriched his personality and deepened his sympathy and imagination. But when his mind was moved to its highest points of feeling and sincerity, his expression took on a purity, an elegance, and an insight which gave it the qualities of literature. . . .

Throughout Lincoln's works the reader traces these opposite marks of style—the homebred and the finished. The intellectual elements entering into his mind's growth during the three wears he was postmaster at New Salem (1833-1836) were important. During his brief experience as storekeeper he read Blackstone's "Commentaries on the Laws of England" and followed this up with other law books borrowed from Springfield friends.

He had been a diligent reader of newspapers, an opportunity favored by his incumbency as postmaster. His acquaintance during this time with the Rogers family, who had come to Illinois from Cooperstown, N. Y., in 1818, and at whose place, a few miles from New Salem, another postoffice was established, furnished Lincoln with new cultural interests. His trips to take mail from New Salem to the Rogers office gave him access not only to additional newspapers, but to the "chest of books" which the Rogers family had brought with them to Illinois. Newspapers remained with Lincoln an important source of intellectual stimulus. From them he obtained political information and comment, reports of lectures, poems, and foreign intelligence.

Lincoln's studious reading of newspapers and such books as came within his reach constantly enlarged as he came into wider contact with people. This wider contact was afforded by his attendance upon the legislature at Springfield, where he made industrious use of the new State library, chiefly to enhance his knowledge of the law, preparatory to his future profession.

His biographers agree that Lincoln had a highly retentive memory. There is evidence to show that both upon the stump and in private conversation he was acquiring a vocabulary of ever-increasing range and accuracy. He had become a careful and ambitious student of words, and sought rather than avoided the stimulus of a crowd in the practice of speech-making. As a young man at Gentryville, Ind., and later at New Salem, he had the reputation of knowing more as a result of reading than anyone else in the neighborhood.

It was during his New Salem experience that his courtship of Anne Rutledge occurred. Apparently he encouraged her own intellectual aspirations, for at this time their mutual friend, Arminda Rogers, tutored Miss Rutledge in Kirkham's grammar, Blair's rhetoric, and other elementary subjects, as a foundation for her admission to a young women's academy at Jacksonville. Anne Rutledge's death in 1853 destroyed their cherished hopes. Lincoln's recoverery from a severe illness was followed by two years of assiduous study during the intervals between legislative and other employments concerned with his livelihood.

THE year 1837, while he was still a member of the legislature, marks an eventful stage in Lincoln's career. In this year he moved to Springfield, which he had been influential in having made the capital of the state. He gained admission to the Springfield bar, and entered into partnership with John T. Stewart, a lawyer of ability and experience, whom Lincoln met in the legislature, and from whom he had borrowed books and received encouragement in the prosecution of his legal studies.

It is not possible, up to this time, to specify just what books had entered into Lincoln's cultural reading. There is evidence that this material included the English Bible, certain of Shakespeare's plays, "Pilgrim's Progress," "Robinson Crusoe," Weems's Washington, Statutes of Indiana, a history of the United States, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution.

Just what knowledge he had of poetry and of fiction is indefinite. He was familiar with current political parties and issues, both State and national, and had arrived at settled convictions upon matters of public interest. He had already exhibited the elan of a politician and had ambitions looking toward the future. During this year he made a well-considered speech before the legislature on the state bank issue, which a capable student of Lincoln regards as "an able argument, logical, convincing, and expressed in the best English." The speech is indeed expressed in excellent English, and shows a studious grasp of the subject discussed.

Lincoln was now a man of advancing reputation in the state, recognized as a resourceful debater and as a man of integrity and ideals. On Jan. 27 of this same year he gave before the Young Men's Lyceum of Springfield a written address on the "Perpetuation of Our Political Institutions." The language of this address as a whole is overrhetorical, as might be expected from a young man ambitious as an orator, self-instructed in the art of expression, and still under the spell of frontier standards. But the address has the substance of high ideals and moral convictions as well as reflection. It contains the following quotable passage on law enforcement:

"Let every American, every lover of liberty, every well wisher to his posterity, swear by the blood of the revolution never to violate in the least particular the laws of the country, and never to tolerate their violation by others. As the patriots of "seventy-six" did to the support of the Declaration of Independence, so to the support of the constitution and the laws let every American pledge his life, his property, and his sacred honor; let every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his father, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty. Let reverence for the laws be breathed by every American mother to the lisping babe that prattles on her lap. Let it be taught in schools, in seminaries, and in colleges. Let it be written in primers, spelling books, and in almanacs. Let it be preached from the pulpit, proclaimed in legislative halls, and enforced in courts of justice. And, in short, let it become the political religion of the nation."

This address, instinct with noble feeling and sincerity, foreshadows the deep devotion to duty and the natural refinement of spirit which Lincoln, under the impress of experience, so often exhibited. It is prophetic of the high seriousness and simplicity which gradually matured toward the faultless diction in which he conceived the Gettysburg address and the second inaugural.

The student of Lincoln's works is sometimes tempted to ascribe his command of good English to genius. He does indeed appear to have had some native gift of style. There is a letter of Lincoln's, dated April 1, 1838, to Mrs. O. H. Browning, anent his courtship of Mary Owen and their contemplated marriage. The story is familiar to readers of Lincoln's biography, but it is told in this letter with a freedom and elegance of diction which suggests the artist in narration. As a composition the piece engages greater interest with the re-reading. It betrays a certain Addisonian acumen for words that goes far to persuade one that the writer held within his endowments the possibility of a successful essayist.

THE PERILIST OF PEACE

By Guy F. Lee

The world so [illegible] rescued from the avalanche of war,
Is menaced by a danger ramified as ne'er before:
The rainbow that we longed for isn't promising—it's fed
With angry, hectic colors that presage distress and dread.
The sparks of inequality that smoulder may be fanned
Into a conflagration if they're not kept well in hand.
But the direst of the perils on five continents now stalking
Is the omnipresent, never ending, hyperbolic talking.

You can stop the bolsheviki if you send sufficient guns,
They know the language spoken by the not lamented huns;
You can reason with a hungry man by slipping him some food,
And various and sundry means will make mankind be good.
A striker has a grievance, but you give him half a chance
And he'll slap you on the shoulder where he once eyed you askance.
But I've never found a way to stay the adjectivic birds
Who feel called on to rise and spill a richochet of words.

They are talking, talking, talking, in a multitude of tongues,
They are punishing the atmosphere with egotistic lungs;
They chew the rag, without a gag, breathe deep and then resume,
And they're all named Jeremiah, and they all distribute gloom!
Old Mother Earth, for all I know, may soon go on the blink,
But no depressing eloquence will steer her from the brink.
And so I say, Demosthenes of Doom, if you must spout
Please stick a cheerful pebble in your mouth before you shout!

News and Comment of MOTORDOM Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER

That northern Illinois is slowly but surely "getting there" in the matter of good roads was evidenced last Sunday, when the Great Lakes Naval Training station tackled the job of moving its exhibits from Great Lakes to the Coliseum for display at the motor truck show. Not so many years ago the only way to bring the big hydro-airplanes and other paraphernalia into town would have been by rail, with at least six loading and unloading processes involved. In this instance they were simply piled on trucks and whirled to the Coliseum door. The picture shows the navalcade on the fine stretch of concrete along the Green Bay road between Highland Park and Glencoe. A significant feature of the trip was the use of four-wheel trailers, a type of equipment seldom seen hereabouts because it can be used to advantage only on exceptionally good roads.

Concerning New Bodies for Old

BY HIGH SPEED.

THERE are thousands of motorists throughout the country whose cars seem to give excellent service, but are not quite as up to date in appearance as the more recent models of the manufacturers.

The automobile after all depends for its goodness on the chassis, that is, everything except the body. Therefore with the chassis in good running order there is no reason why the old body cannot be remade to suit the particular case of the owner. Or it is possible to satisfy the same conditions by having an entirely different body designed, using some of the parts of the old body.

Those owners who are particularly handy with tools and are fond of carpentry may be able to do a good bit of the work themselves, using the material in this article as suggestions. If the owner does not wish to do the work himself there are numerous concerns in this country which can remake an old body into almost any sort that the owner desires at comparatively slight

In redesigning, let us say, a touring car to make it into a speedster the owner must decide beforehand on the lines of the car he is to build. A pencil sketch is sufficient to give him an idea, but the better way is to get pictures of some desirable cars and then sketch a body, incorporating the features which appeal to the owner.

One important thing must be kept in mind and that is as many as possible of the parts of the old car should be retained, but often the retention of some parts spoils the symmetry of the body.

The start should always be made with the radiator. If you wish to use the old radiator leave it in place on the chassis and work from it to the rear. If a new radiator design is to be used cut out the form of the raditor, using cardboard or wood, and mount this in the position that the radiator occupies. After the radiator shape and position have been ascertained the next step is determining the location of the dash, which at the same time determines the length of the hood. The dash should be made in dummy form if the old dash is not to be used. This dash should be mounted on the body sills, which are nothing more than two planks of wood like the old sills and usually are of the same width as the top of the frame. The sills constitute the ground work.

With the dash in position you have ready to make out of cardboard or paper a covering which extends from the radiator to the dash and you have the hood, and if a cowl is desired this may be extended beyond the dash as far as one wishes.

The next step is to determine the seat location, and this, of course, depends on the driver's taste. He should take a comfortable position in another car or on a box and measure the distance from the box to his feet so that he can get the distance in the reconstructed car from the pedals to the new seat. This is a matter easy to decide, but it certainly should not be overlooked, because once the seat location is determined upon and work started, it is costly to make a change.

At the same time this dimension is taken the owner should decide whether the steering wheel is in the proper position, otherwise the steering post may have to be lowered. The method of doing this, of course, will vary with the type of car.

We now have the radiator, dash, and seat locations and hood and cowl form, with all of these patterned over the chassis and the body sills in position. Working from the body sills a wooden structure must be made, over which body metal is fastened. This wooden structure is simply a skeleton with supports at such points as to carry the outline of the body metal.

Thus, if there is a curve to be worked into the lines there will have to be a support at the center point around which the metal is worked. Where it is necessary to paint the metal, as, for example, in the case of the deck or cowl, it may be found impracticable to do this without slitting the metal and taking up the slack at one point.

The slitting of the metal will, of course, result in a certain number of places where the ends must be riveted together. This will leave an unsightly spot apparently, but the body makers' method is to fill in this depression or groove caused by the riveting together of the two parts and use solder for filling it. After this the solder is filed flush with the sheet metal and the paint over this makes it look as though the metal were not cut.

The wood to use should be extra hard, preferably ash. Where certain curved pieces are needed the owner may have the bending done at a woodworker's shop. Bear in mind that the woodwork is a mere shell which is covered by the sheet metal. In order to fasten the metal to the woodwork the edge of the metal is cut out like a saw and each projection bent over on to the wood and tacked individually. Of course, a hole must be punched in each tab, as it might be called. These are then hammered flat and filed even. A piece of molding or upholstery covers up these tacked down tabs.

There are, of course, hundreds of details which might be mentioned in connection with the building of a speedster body, but so many of them are for individual requirements that the writer will have to omit mention of more of them and ask that readers make inquiries for specific information.

What It Costs.

Government road officials estimate that road construction and maintenance in the United States involve an annual outlay of over $300,000,000, a sum which, if capitalized at 5 per cent, would represent an investment of $6,000,000,000. There has never been a nation-wide traffic census to show either the direction or volume of traffic over these highways.

The Experts Say———

ANY car owner who has struggled with a battery terminal so set that it cannot be removed from its socket will welcome this idea for a pair of tongs especially designed to care for this trouble. Take a pair of wide faced pliers and if necessary hammer the faces flat. Next cut a slot in one of them large enough to allow it to be placed over the cable side of the terminal, while the other face exerts pressure against the other side. No terminal can resist this treatment.

Whenever the car is brought into the garage in cold weather the gasoline should be shut off at the vacuum tank outlet or at the main tank, and then the engine should be run long enough to draw all the gasoline from the carbureter and supply line. This prevents moisture from accumulating inside the carbureter and supply line, where it will probably freeze. When this precaution is practiced the car owner will be sure to turn on the gasoline before starting and flood the carbureter before making the start.

An excellent method of preventing tools getting rusty is to give them a coating of vaseline in which a little gum camphor has been mixed, after which the mixture is melted over a slow fire. The coating should be applied to the tool with a soft rag.

If gasoline drips from the carburetor when the car is standing and the engine is not running the needle valve connected with the float should be investigated. If pressing it down stops the dripping the float is too high. If the dripping persists the valve leaks and should be ground in, preferably using pumice stone.

A frequent cause of leaks in radiators is that the vents in the filling caps and overflows become choked with sediment, with the result that steam accumulates in the radiator and the pressure, seeking an outlet, forces an opening at the weakest point. A little care of the vent will remedy this trouble.

Sometimes the enthusiastic amateur in his desire to make sure of a quick start overprimes the engine. The result is so much liquid that the spark fails to ignite it. The cure for this condition is to open the relief cocks and turn the engine over half a dozen times or so; this works out the raw fuel. Next take out the spark plugs and squirt oil on the tops of the pistons, using about a pint to four cylinders and turning the engine over four or five times, thereby working the oil film back on the pistons and cylinder walls.

Wants Road Rules Made at Versailles

INTERNATIONAL rules of the road, similar to the international rules of sea and air routes, to be worked out in detail at the peace conference at Versailles, is the subject of a plea addressed to the London Times by Lord Montagu of Beaulieu.

The present condition is extremely chaotic, the writer suggests, since every country at present is a law unto itself. "The Versailles peace conference, sitting in the land of Napoleonic roads, should lay down a universal rule of the road on land," he asserts.

"Here in Great Britain we drive on the left, passing right hand to right hand, and our motor manufacturers design their seating and driving arrangements accordingly, the driver sitting, as he should, on the right side of his vehicle. In France, America, and many other countries the opposite fashion prevails, and vehicles are driven on the right hand side of the road, many drivers sit on the left, and all of them pass left hand to left hand.

"In Italy, Germany, and Austria-Hungary the rules of the road sometimes vary, even within each country, towns and rural districts having contrary rules. Different parts of the British empire also have different rules of the road, and in some more or less uncivilized countries there are no rules at all.

"Now surely in the interest of future order on the world's highways an effort should be made to adopt a uniform rule of the road. I will not attempt to indicate on which side driving should be—and we can then pass into each other's countries without the constant fear of instinctive habit overriding latest impression."

Lord Montagu further advocates the teaching of the rules of the road for land, sea and air, in all schools throughout the world. He points out that the neglect of drivers to observe the rules of the road on land leads to many serious accidents every year, much waste of roadway spaces, and consequent unnecessary expenditure of public money on widening.

"And there is a most important point for all motor manufacturers to consider," he declares. "If the present senseless lack of uniformity is to continue, eventually two types will have to be built for the countries in which the two systems prevail.

"For instance, in France and America before the war manufacturers were already building chasses with the driver's seat on the left of the vehicle. For neutral and friendly markets where driving on the right prevails, our manufacturers are already, and in the future will be further handicapped unless they build a special type to suit these countries."

Protect the Cables.

Electric cables that rub on sharp edges of the battery box or other places will soon wear through the insulation from vibration of the car and a short circuit will occur that may be hard to find. Such parts of the wire should be well protected with adhesive tape and should also be frequently inspected.

Loose Flywheel Symptoms.

When there is a suspicion that the flywheel is loose the way to determine it is to speed up the engine suddenly and then quickly close the throttle; if this procedure produces a knock from the vicinity of the flywheel just at the instant the throttle is closed it is pretty certain that a loose flywheel is causing the trouble.

Racer Speeds Up Traffic in France

THINGS have changed since George H. Robertson, speed maniac, won the Vanderbilt cup race in 1908, observes a writer in Stars and Stripes, the A. E. F. paper in France.

For instance, the same daredevil driver is now a major, and, as provost marshal at Bordeaux, is engaged in establishing and enforcing up to date traffic regulations, patterned on those of New York City.

So successful has the work been, particularly in speeding up traffic and eliminating congestion on the five-eighths of a mile long bridge forming the main artery between the eastern and western banks of the Gironde river that Maj. Robertson has won the complete coöperation of the French.

And now, in order that the work may be put on a par with that of any large American city, a school for turning out efficient traffic cops is to be established.

It used to take from fifteen to forty minutes for an army truck to cross the bridge. Today it takes four.

Traffic, particularly that having to do with motor cars, is a hobby with Maj. Robertson, and he at last obtained the written permission of the mayor of Bordeaux to try and work some order out of the hodge-podge of pushcarts, two wheeled wagons, motor cars, trucks, dogs, and pedestrians ordinarily found on the streets of a French city.

Men experienced in the regulation of traffic were placed at all the principal corners of Bordeaux, and twelve stations, in charge of officers and traffic men, were established across the length of the bridge over the Gironde.

French drivers at first resented the interference in their affairs, but when the real value of the regulations was realized this resentment changed to coöperation.

Heavy, slow moving vehicles were compelled to keep next to the curb in crossing the bridge, and motor driven vehicles were made to follow the street car line. A law preventing the overloading of French trucks was enforced and also the law limiting the speed of American motor cars. The result was quickly order out of chaos, more speed and fewer accidents.

The traffic problem which the Americans were up against can readily be realized when it is stated that by actual count during an average nine hours a total of 7,920 vehicles crossed the bridge in addition to horses, cattle, sheep and pedestrians. The count did not include street cars.

The working out of the traffic problem at Bordeaux has resulted in the formation of a company of 200 men which is known as the traffic division. This company is commanded by a captain, two first lieutenants, and two second lieutenants.

The entire personnel is to be given a course in the traffic school. Every man in the company was selected for this special duty from the hand picked M. P. organization of 1,600 men.

Keeping Busy.

A total of 81,000 road maps in nine days is the latest mark hung up by the printing department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, holder of several world's records in multigraph work.

WELL, HERE'S HOPING

It won't be the inventors' fault if we don't some day get a satisfactory substitute for the air-filled tire. The latest "solution" of the problem comes from a Denver man, who submits a punctureless device which he thinks will bring a new era in motoring. May be it will.

The contraption is a resilient tire of the cushion type, mounted on springs, which are supposed to absorb a considerable share of the road shocks. Its unique feature is that it is contrived in small sections, so that when a part gets into trouble it can immediately be replaced by a new one, which the motorist simply takes out of his tool box.

The inventor figures that his tire can be manufactured at about one-half the cost of the pneumatic type, and that its upkeep will be about 60 per cent of what it costs to maintain the tires now in use. It sounds good, but one suspects we'll have to worry along on air for a while yet, anyway.

An Emergency Starter.

Says Motor Life:

It sometimes happens that the starter fails to work and the hand crank has been left at home or mislaid. The first thought of most motorists on such occasions is to look around for another car to start the engine by towing the car with the gears engaged. Usually this means more or less delay in waiting for the car to appear, arranging for hitching up, etc. The situation is doubly difficult if the car refuses to start when in the garage and the hand crank is not available. There is an easy way to get the engine going, however, which any motorist can employ without assistance.

By jacking up one of the rear wheels securely, putting the gears in high and turning the uplifted wheel in the direction in which it revolves when driving the car forward, you will find that a few turns will start the engine. Be sure to place your gearshift lever in neutral, however, before letting down the jacked up wheel or the car will plunge forward, with resultant damage, and you will have the work to do all over again. For the same reason you must be sure that the vibration of the running motor will not upset the jack. Properly done, the operation of starting the engine in this way takes only a few moments.

Road Racing Again.

The Santa Monica road race, the blue ribbon event of the motoring classics of the far west, is to be revived on March 15 this year. The race is to be conducted by the Motor Car Dealers' Association of Los Angeles, and probably will be followed two weeks later by a 100 mile race on the Ascot speedway in Los Angeles.

Quebec's Cars.

In the province of Quebec 28,338 motor vehicles were registered in 1918, as compared with 21,702 in 1917, an increase of 6,636, or nearly 30 per cent. In 1916 the totals cars registered in that province was 15,347, while in 1915 it was 10,112 and in 1914 it was 7,413.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

Because of the large volume of requests for touring information and the relatively small amount of space available for answering them, readers who wish measurably prompt replies are advised to inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope with their inquiries, so that they may be answered by mail. Questions of general interest, such as those pertaining to driving and the care of the car, will be answered as far as possible in this column.

I have a Chalmers 6-30 touring car that has sprung a leak in the rear gasoline tank. A seam has opened where the two halves are united, and there is a leak also around the two hanger rivets by which the tank is suspended from the frame. Would it be safe to weld these seams, and, if so, what would be the procedure? If it is not safe, do you think soft soldering would hold it? At what clearance would you set the push rods in this car? D. D. DRAKE, Clarinda, Ia.

You will be safe in handling this job so long as you bring no flame to the opened seams. This means that the job would have to be soldered, which would be all right if the leaks are not bad. In any case it would be well to get out all the gasoline you can by ordinary means and then run a stream of compressed air through the tank for a quarter of an hour. The longer you run the air through the tank the surer you will be that all the fumes have been removed. Then you can either weld the job or solder. If the seams have opened very much it would be well to bend a re-inforcement strip around the seam and solder it in place. Under ordinary conditions solder known as half and half will be all right to use. The easiest way to determine the clearance between valve tappets and valve stems is to insert a thin visiting card between them. This gives about the correct space between them and if anything the exhaust valves can have just a trifle more clearance than the intakes. In thousandths, the clearance would be about .0156 of an inch.

Please tell me the drawbar horse power rating of a twin cylinder nine horse power motorcycle motor. ED REID, Chicago.

In order to get the drawbar horse power rating of a motorcycle you can use the following formula:

$$\frac{8.5 \text{ times } D^2 \text{ times } S \text{ times } G\ R}{W\ D}$$ wherein D is the diameter in inches of the cylinder, S the stroke, G R the gear ratio, and W D the diameter of the wheels.

Kindly advise me regarding the following: (1) After stopping my engine the radiator is apparently cool, but as the heat radiates the water gets hotter and when the car is used again I always find about a pint has evaporated. Should not the water begin to cool when the motor stops? (2) Would you do anything to the clutch (cone) after driving 12,000 miles? It seems to operate all right. (3) Two or three of my cylinders have about half a teaspoonful of oil each on the piston heads. Does this indicate worn rings, assuming the cylinders are not scored? The gas mixture is very lean. (4) What about the standardization of tires? I understand that after 1920 only certain sizes will be made. I am using 32x4. Could I use 32x4½ with 32x4 tubes, or should I use 33x4? (5) Can you tell me the gear ratio of my car (Buick D44) and what the indicated speed should be? V. W. LAMB, Chicago.

[1] I suggest that you look your cooling and lubrication system over carefully. Nowadays much of the gasoline we pass through our carbureters is not consumed in the combustion chambers of the engine and, as a result, it gets down into the crank case and dilutes the oil. In such cases the oil has lost much of its lubricating value and, as a result, the crank cases must be drained much more frequently than heretofore. Improper oiling will cause an engine to overheat. Also make sure the water pump is functioning, for with the pump system of cooling an engine will easily get too hot and the water boil if the pump forces only a portion of the water it should. New packing may be necessary, or new hose connections. Make sure, also, that you drive with the spark advanced. Obviously the mixture should be as lean as possible, but the tendency nowadays is to run on too rich a mixture. This is done in order to get as much volatile fuel as possible and thus the heavy ends of the fuel have to go through unburned, as stated above. Perhaps some of the hot-spot devices on the market would help you, as they have done in similar cases. [2] If the clutch works all right leave it alone. [3] Probably the rings and pistons, as well as the cylinders, have become worn. [4] After Nov. 1, 1920, the following sizes and types of tires will be manufactured: 30x3½ clincher, plain and nonskid; 32x3½ straight side, plain and nonskid; 31x4 clincher, plain and nonskid; 33x4 straight side, plain and nonskid; 34x4½ straight side, plain and nonskid; 35x5 straight side, plain and nonskid; 36x6 straight side, plain and nonskid; 38x7 straight side, plain and non skid; 40x8 straight side, plain and nonskid. In your case you will have to get new wheels or rims, for you cannot fit 32x4½ tires to your present rims. The oversize tires for 33x4 inches would be 33x4½, but this is one of the sizes to be discontinued. It is probable that dealers will have on hand plenty of the outgoing sizes after Nov. 1, so car owners can be supplied with the old sizes for some time. [5] The gear ratio of the Buick D-44 is 3.78 to 1. In order to know how fast the car is traveling at a given engine speed you must know the tire size and gear ratio. Suppose your engine turns over 2,000 r. p. m. Then with 33x4 inch tires and a gear ratio of 3.78 to 1 the car speed would be about fifty-two or fifty-three miles per hour.

Trucks on the Farm.

"Profitable Farm Hauling with Motor Trucks" is the businesslike title of an addition to motor truck literature issued by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

From the foreword: "The ability to carry heavy loads across rolling fields, regardless of roads and seasons; to quickly transport farm products to market over sandy or muddy or snowy roads; to move live stock to shipping points with a saving of shrinkage in weight; to carry garden produce, fruits and other crushable materials to destination quickly; to save time and labor in bringing closer to the farms—all of this is what makes a motor truck a practical and profitable farm tool."

C. M. C. Elects This Week.

The Chicago Motor club's annual meeting and election of officers will occur at the clubhouse on Tuesday evening. No serious opposition has developed this year to the "regular" ticket headed by Charles M. Hayes as candidate for re-election as president.

Britain's Road Program.

Grants amounting to $50,000,000 will be distributed by the British road board for the reconstruction of roads and bridges in England in 1919. Demobilized army units will be used to do the labor. Local highway authorities will be required to match this appropriation by at least as large a program of road work as they carried out in the year before the war. Area taken into consideration, England's program is thus far in excess of that of the United States, including both federal aid and state funds.

Park Highway Urged.

A national highway, to link up the national parks and monuments of the United States, is recommended in the annual report of the director of the national park service. Attention is called to the fact that such a road would necessarily pass through undeveloped districts, and as the states and counties would not have funds enough for the work, federal construction is suggested.

Automobile Trade Notes and Gossip

THE Chicago Automobile Trade association has, on the whole, every reason to congratulate itself on the success of its first automobile show. The passenger car section of the exhibit was an enthusiastic affair, with good attendance and tangible results from a business standpoint, one firm, for example, reporting the sale of no less than thirty cars from its booth at the Coliseum alone. Popular interest fell off somewhat during the truck display, but this was to have been expected.

Automobile men, during the closing days of the show, were disturbed by revival of a rumor that the government is preparing to sell thousands of army trucks and passenger cars in Chicago, Philadelphia, and elsewhere at prices which would mean temporary disaster to the regular commercial market. The report was denied authoritatively in Washington several weeks ago, but to put a further quietus upon it a telegram was sent to Gen. Charles B. Drake, chief of the motor transport corps, at the capital. Gen. Drake's reply was prompt and uncompromising: "Absolutely no truth in rumor that government is selling trucks or passenger cars of any kind."

The B. F. Goodrich Rubber company has gathered figures on 1918 automobile registrations which indicate a total of 6,088,169 passenger cars and trucks licensed in the United States during the year—an increase of more than 1,000,000 over the total for 1917. The reports from some of the states tally closely with those presented by THE TRIBUNE in its issue of Jan. 26, but in many cases estimates, rather than accurate reports, have been included in the list, so that the grand total can be accepted only as an approximate one. As a matter of fact, it is impossible to arrive at an absolutely accurate total, for registration systems in the different states vary widely; many cars are registered in more than one state, and there are other items of confusion to mix the thing up. Moreover, the automobile licensing departments in several of the states have not yet completed their tabulations for the year. Probably the best one can do is to say that the United States now has about 6,000,000 cars, and let it go at that.

As a feature of its truck efficiency contest which will continue through the year, the Packard company has inaugurated a series of weekly smokers for drivers at its headquarters in Michigan avenue. The meetings are held on Friday evenings, with the program in each case including talks by experts on the fine points of truck operation and maintenance. About 125 men attended the first of the gatherings.

F. H. Akers, sales manager of the Reo organization, finds irritation in the report that the former kaiser's fourth son has gone into the automobile business "and set us back," as Mr. Akers puts it, "in the class of questionable occupations again. Seriously," he adds, "it has always been an enigma to me why the profligate son of a rich man or an ex-husband and hanger-on of some notorious money making film star, when he essays to pretend to earn his living, blithely drops into the automobil ebusiness. I'll wager this princeling will starve to death on automobile row if his eating depends on his own sales ability."

Personalities: George R. Bury, for the last three months general manager of the Packard Chicago division, has been made president of the Packard Motor Car company of Chicago . . . H. H. Grobe, formerly manager of the Kelly-Springfield Tire company's Baltimore branch, has been transferred to Chicago as district manager for this territory.

Here's the Ford "baby tank," of which 15,000 had been ordered when the armistice was signed. Had the ex-kaiser and his armies held out until the little demon got into action in the numbers planned, army officers believe the results would have been spectacular. The tank carries a crew of two men, with a single Browning machine gun, and is driven by two ordinary Ford passenger car engines. It was photographed the other day during a demonstration before government officials in Washington.

Wants a "Gasoline Day."

Chester S. Ricker, Indiana representative of the American Automobile association's contest board, wants the motoring interests of the country to set aside May 31 this year as "America's gasoline festival day." He propounded the idea in a letter read at the dinner with which New Yorkers greeted Eddie Rickenbacker on his return from France.

Says Ricker:

"Why not set aside one day to be the holiday of the entire automotive industry, the day on which it formally celebrates victory over the problems of war from which it has just emerged? For one day let the whole industry play. Let everything on rubber fall into line and parade—new cars, old cars, trucks—anything and everything. Such a demonstration would be the most tangible and concrete answer the automotive industry could make to the question: 'Can the automobile come back this year?'"

Incidentally, May 31 is the date of the 500 mile race with which the Indianapolis speedway will reopen its gates.

ROAD BULLETINS

That Desert Bugbear.

EASTERN tourists are sadly misinformed about conditions on so-called western deserts, according to Secretary W. D. Rishel of the Utah State Automobile association, who sends to Chairman Carl G. Fisher of the A. A. A. touring board this summation of far western road travel conditions:

"What about the so-called western deserts and automobile touring travel? Every person east of the Rocky mountains who contemplates a tour through to the Pacific coast is today in fear of the so-called deserts. He has in mind his old school geography, which branded all that country lying between the Rocky mountains and the Pacific coast as the Great American desert. He has visions of miles and miles of sand with almost unbearable heat, through which he must push his way to reach the Pacific ocean.

"Now, what are the actual conditions? The tourist can follow any one of the central routes and have a bed to sleep in under a roof every night. He can sit down at a table to eat his three meals a day. He will find gasoline, a garage, and automobile supplies at frequent intervals, or as often as he needs them. The lighter he is equipped the faster time he can make. Instead of heat he will find an overcoat comfortable if he drives at night, and he will encounter more sand at the old river bed crossing near his farm in the midcontinent territory than he will encounter between the Rocky mountains and the Pacific coast. And, what is more, he will scarcely ever be out of view of another automobile, occupied by a man and his family traveling to see the country.

"The desert stunt has been overworked and the western motorist traveling across the country never takes the deserts into consideration. He knows there are long stretches of country with nothing but sage brush and jackrabbits, but he also knows that, as a general rule, he will make more miles per day than over any other section of the United States where the roads are not improved.

"Automobile associations and automobile touring bureaus of information have a busy time explaining away the fears of the timid public, but as more and more tourists cross the country the fact will become gradually known that the person responsible for calling the great intermountain west 'the Great American desert' did not know what he was talking about."

New Roads in Florida.

Chicagoans who tour to Florida in a year or two may find the lower peninsula lifted out of perpetual glades, with scenic touring facilities second to none. The task is under way and nearing completion west and south of Miami.

One who has toured Florida by road vehicle as far as possible and fished and hunted through the Everglades where roads have been unknown will appreciate the importance and wide reaching significance of the present projects, known as the Tamiami trail and the Ingraham highway.

The projects call for a highway across the Everglades, almost due west from Miami, connecting the Atlantic ocean with the Gulf of Mexico and south from Miami direct to Cape Sable.

With these two highways completed the tourist will be able to make a loop of the lower section of the state, taking in the east and west coasts and interior sections.

The Tamiami trail is more than half completed and the Ingraham highway already finished to the Monroe county line.

HIGH POWER
With Savings

In the Oakland Sensible Six, due to scientific construction, high power does not cost the user a premium. Indeed, Oakland automobiles operate on smaller amounts of gasoline and oil than many cars with less power.

The elimination of every needless pound of weight in the chassis and body of an Oakland has the effect of unburdening the engine—FOR IT HAS LESS TO PULL.

The Oakland high-speed overhead-valve, six-cylinder engine delivers 44 horsepower or 1 h. p. to every 48 pounds in the touring car, 1 h. p. to every 47 pounds in the roadster, 1 h. p. to every 56 pounds in the sedan, and 1 h. p. to every 58 pounds in the coupe.

OAKLAND YEAR 'ROUND CARS

Because of their high power plus seasonable shelter, the Oakland sedan and the coupe are automobiles of the most useful type.

They are built for town and country, for work and recreation. They perform ably on steep hills and in sand and mud. Yet they are cars of individual style, well designed for social purposes.

Advanced construction in the bodies of these cars gives them full strength without undue weight.

Both comfort and convenience are increased by the heating and lighting equipment, the placing of the driving controls, and the seating arrangement in each car.

Come and see these truly fine automobiles of surprising economy. Learn why their pronounced advantages are available at such moderate cost.

In presenting Knight and Blackstone Tires to the car owners of Illinois and Indiana, we feel that we are offering the two best tires made in their respective classes.

In fact, we think so well of the Blackstone as a medium priced tire that we pledge our personal guarantee of 5,000 miles.

The Knight Tire, which is recognized as the leading fabric tire of the country, is guaranteed for 6,000 miles.

Satisfaction or Your Money Refunded

Both Knight and Blackstone Tires will, of course, be sold on the basis of complete satisfaction or your money back.

Tire dealers who are supplied by Conley & Hussey, Inc., are thoroughly in accord with our policy of never having a dissatisfied customer.

Study the detailed descriptions of Knight and Blackstone Tires, then look up the dealer nearest to you. We will be glad to tell you who he is.

Knight Tires

Knight Tires are designed and made for the motorist who insists on the best.

They are guaranteed for 6,000 miles, but it is a rare case where a Knight Tire does not greatly exceed this guarantee.

The material used in Knight Tires is the very best that can be bought.

The rubber is so good that only a small part of that offered on the market is up to the standard demanded.

For that reason the Knight will never be a common tire.

The fabric used is the best specified for any tire, and it is so carefully tested and examined that no piece with a flaw ever gets into a tire.

The workmen who make Knight Tires are carefully chosen and trained and each is a master tire builder.

The entire aim of the makers has been to produce the best tire that can be made.

Enthusiastic users declare that they have succeeded.

Blackstone Tires

In the past year only six out of each one thousand Blackstone Tires have been returned for adjustment.

This is a record which we believe is not equaled by any tire in the Blackstone's class.

It is a record of which the makers are proud, and one which they hold always before them.

Blackstone Tires are guaranteed for 5,000 miles, but we frequently receive reports of tires which run as high as 12,000 to 15,000 miles.

Of course, these are exceptional cases, but they show what Blackstones will do under favorable circumstances.

Blackstones are made for the man who wants a good tire at a fair price.

We believe them to be the best tires made in their class.

We ask that you prove this claim by giving Blackstone Tires a trial.

We will abide by your verdict.

How Men and Women Express Approval of Franklin Light Weight and Fineness 1917

There was no mistaking the opinion of both men and women in 1917 regarding light weight and fineness versus heavy weight and rigidity, for Franklin sales increased 135% against the 12% increase of all other fine cars.

1918

Demand still increasing, when entire Franklin facilities were turned over to Government war work, including highly skilled production on Hispano Suiza and Rolls-Royce aeroplane engines. This work now completed; production resumed.

1919

Normally, current winter months are slow in sales but from indications throughout the country it is already evident that the temper of men and women has not changed. The demand for the Franklin is exceeding the supply.

APPROVAL expressed by actual purchase is approval indeed. Big volume took time, for at first, people were indifferent to efficiency in a motor car.

But as more and more people have owned automobiles and compared values, Franklin superiority became more evident.

And it is not alone the splendid Franklin economy—a daily delivery of 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—instead of 10

10,000 miles to the set of tires—instead of 5,000

It is more than that—for with that economy goes the sense of satisfaction in owning a really fine, efficient motor car, one that insures remarkable riding-comfort, ease and safety of handling, year-round useability, and capacity for long service.

The public has come to realize that this kind of motoring is only possible in a car of scientific Light Weight and Flexible Construction. And these have been basic principles of the Franklin Car for sixteen years.

That is why you are seeing more and more Franklins, with their gracefully sloping French-style hoods, running lightly, comfortably, on every road in the country.

And men and women who have determined to buy a motor car that will combine fineness with motoring satisfaction, are expressing their approval in actual sales of the Franklin—America's Only Light Fine Car.

Up-to-the-Minute Franklin Features

The Franklin policy of constant effort towards maximum owner satisfaction is reflected in these Franklin Features. Every one of them is worth your immediate inspection, as a positive step to a still higher level of motoring perfection.

ELECTRIC PRIMER insures ready cold weather starting—even from low-grade gasoline. Minimizes spark plug fouling and loading up.

MASTER VIBRATOR produces fat, hot spark even when battery is low. Another source of motoring satisfaction.

STARTING DEVICE. Simplest, surest, large capacity, controlled by ignition switch. No meshing of gears and pushing of pedals.

LARGER TIRES increase already remarkable tire mileage. 33 x 4½ inch cord tires now on all types assure utmost tire reliability.

NEW OILING SYSTEM with reservoir and wick eliminates messy grease-cup troubles. Surer, requires less attention.

AIR INTAKE STRAINER keeps road dust, grit, etc. out of engine internals. Prevents wear in cylinders, valves, etc. Lessens repairs.

PISTON CONSTRUCTION automatically takes up cylinder wear. Maintains compression. Engine indefinitely retains responsiveness.

INTAKE YOKE HEATER quickly warms up mixture by use of exhaust gases. Original with Franklin; perfected in today's cars.

HOW TO SECURE A POSITION.

In order to place yourself and your capabilities before the business houses who would be the class and kind which you would care to affiliate yourself with, if you were to handle it yourself it would be necessary for you possibly to write two or three hundred letters, (1st) to find out if such an opening existed, (2nd) to show your qualifications and ability in order to secure an interview, which might or might not net you the returns which you wish to secure.

Have you ever considered that this work can be done for you, that it costs you nothing in comparison to the time, the labor, the worry, which you will have to go through should you undertake this procedure yourself.

In this day and age of efficient business if you wanted a new table in your house, you would not go down and cut down a tree and build that table yourself; you would go to a place where completed furniture is handled and buy it. If you wanted a new suit of clothes you would not first cut the wool from the sheep's back, weave that into cloth and then make the suit yourself; you would go to the tailor.

If you are not doing these things, why is it that you can afford to waste your time and energy in securing for yourself the opening which you are desirous of obtaining?

You can eliminate all of this waste motion by coming to us. It is our business, our specialty, our success, to analyze your business condition for you, to place you directly before our clientele of business houses who can use men of your caliber and type, thereby bringing you in direct contact with that which you wish to obtain.

Waste motion on your part costs money. For a small portion of this money we can perform the service for you, and REMEMBER you do not pay us anything for the position until we definitely have made good our assertions and have given you what you personally desire.

REAL ESTATE—SUB'N—WEST.

WYLDEHURST, WHEATON, ILLINOIS.

This beautiful residence property is located on Franklin-st., opposite and directly north of the campus of Wheaton College. It consists of about two and one-half acres of ground, improved with a twelve room brick residence situated 180 feet back from the street, facing south; also a barn and other small buildings. The residence is of Colonial design, built of the best materials, and extremely heavy framework throughout. It has hardwood floors throughout, Spencer hot water boiler, pressed steel radiators, electric lights, gas in the kitchen, soft water, stationary vacuum cleaner, high ceilings, a very large parlor with colonial mantel, large living room and numerous large closets, a very large bathroom, and four lavatories. In the basement are laundry vegetable and fruit closet, toilet, storerooms, etc. There are about 200 trees in the place, including some of the most beautiful buckeye, linden, walnut, maple, elm, butternut, oak, hickory, beam, ash, alder, dogwood, and other varieties of deciduous trees, besides hemlock, spruce, pine, and other evergreen trees. There are bearing apple, pear, cherry, and peach trees of several varieties, also a large number of choice grapevines, raspberry, blackberry, and currant bushes. There are hundreds of ornamental shrubs of different kinds, also perennial plants, bulbs, etc. The place is a veritable paradise. It would require a generation to grow trees and arrange grounds as attractive as these are. This is by some people regarded the most beautiful place in Wheaton.

It has frontage on Franklin-st. of 232 feet and a depth of 447 feet, besides a frontage on Irving-av. of 131 feet on the east and Washington-av. terminates at this property on the west. It is convenient to the college with its refined atmosphere and literary and cultured surroundings, is remote from noise and other objectionable features, is surrounded by the very best of neighbors, and is an ideal home. Ordinary language fails to convey a proper impression of the genuine beauty of this place. Price $16,000.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Wisconsin.

A VIRGIN FIELD

The Oconto River Valley District is located in the northern part of Oconto County and the southeastern part of Forest County. With its large area of Kennan Silt Clay Loam lands, its ample rainfall, good water, healthy climate, its many beautiful inland lakes and unharnessed creeks and rivers, this district offers you exceptional opportunities. The large forests of maple, basswood, yellow birch, all hardwood varieties are disappearing rapidly. Farming is yet in its infancy. You still have a chance to select the very best of our tremendous acreage. As you want a farm home you should investigate this district carefully; it is young, but a very progressive district.

LAND VALUES.

If you buy a farm your future success depends directly upon its fertility. Plant food consists of ten essential elements, seven of which, nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, magnesium, iron, and sulphur are contained in the soil. No plant can attain its proper growth without a sufficiency of these seven elements. Before buying a new piece of land be sure that your soil contains these elements and in the right proportion for maximum crops.

The soil in the Oconto River Valley is known as a Silt Clay Loam and is considered one of the very best and most important soil varieties of the state of Wisconsin. Our lands will stand your inspection and closest investigation. We have level land, rolling land, classed as excellent agricultural land. We have rough and bluffy land, which is classed as grazing land. We have swamp land and submarginal land, which is not offered for sale.

OUR SALES PLAN.

With a down payment of $500 you will get 40 acres with a house, barn, well, cow, calf, pigs, sheep, small tools, and fruit trees. No further payments for five years. LARGE TRACTS ON SIMILAR TERMS. We also furnish dynamite on credit for blasting stumps and rent you clearing and farming machinery as soon as you need it. Our contract will appeal to you if you desire to buy a farm on time. You can use your capital to develop your land. You do not need to worry about payments.

If you wish to buy on monthly or yearly payments we will give you the benefits of our credit plan when $500 has been paid—the only safe way to become the owner of a farm for a man with small means.

SPRING OPENING.

The best time to buy land is when the snow is gone. Investigate. In this way you will avoid mistakes. All conservative men prefer to see the land before buying it. We fully realize that many desire to locate very early this spring. We will do our best to accommodate them and shall notify any one interested as soon as it is practical to show land. Our prices are $20, $25 to $30 per acre for AGRICULTURAL LAND. Grazing land for sheep and stock ranches at lower prices.

YOU DEAL WITH OWNERS.

We are the Land Dept. of the Holt Lbr. Co., the Menominee Bay Shore Lbr. Co., and the Oconto Company. These lumber companies own the land we offer, as well as mills, factories, farms, camps, logging railroads, and are directly interested in the development of our district. Your success means our success.

"VICTORY" ECONOMY IN FURNITURE BUYING

Economy is money well spent.

The war brought us face to face with this fact and proved it.

War-time economy, we called it.

We practiced it.

We learned to buy shrewdly—to compare this selection with that, to decide upon the purchase which would give the greater ultimate service for the money spent.

In the present period of victory and reconstruction we will continue to use to good advantage this buying skill which we developed.

Now we will call it "victory economy."

When we buy furniture, for instance, we will select storage furniture because it exemplifies the aim of vigorous economy.

It has been proved that Kessel Bros. have an immense variety of only the highest grade storage furniture—period suites, single pieces, davenports, day beds, floor lamps, oriental and domestic rugs, Victrolas—in fact, everything for the home at economical prices.

COME IN TODAY.

Liberal discounts to Soldiers and Sailors.

Open evenings.

Special attention to out of town buyers.

ARMY PERSONNEL SYSTEM OFFERED TO BUSINESS MEN

How to apply the classification methods of the United States army, which classified and assigned some 3,000,000 soldiers during the war, toward solving the industrial problems of the reconstruction period, will be explained to Chicago business men this week by Col. Walter Dill Scott, originator of the system and head of the personnel committee of the army.

Col. Scott before the war was head of the department of psychology of Northwestern university, and was nationally known for his authoritative works on business psychology. He will speak Wednesday noon before the members of the Chicago Association of Commerce at their weekly luncheon at the Hotel La Salle.

In addition, he will have on exhibition Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at the Northwestern University building, Lake and Dearborn streets, the exposition of the equipment of the system transferred from Washington, in charge of an officer assigned by the war department, to explain it in every detail. Chicago business men are invited to attend.

Col. Scott's system, briefly, discloses what a man's capabalities are in the light of past performances, indicates what his possibilities are for the future, and, through a series of tests, enables the heads of the army to know just what their men can do and who is best adapted for each particular task. It enabled the prompt filling of requisitions for men for special service. The work included not merely the finding of a man for a given job, but determining what the job should be and what qualifications were necessary to fill it.

BOARD'S HEARING ON 7 CENT FARES IS POSTPONED

The hearing of the petition of the Chicago Surface Lines for an increase in fare has been postponed by the public utilities commission because of the inability of Commissioner James H. Wilkerson to attend next Monday, the day previously set for the hearing. The hearing will be resumed Feb. 17.

Of the twenty-two cases to be taken up by the commission next week, the majority concern requests for raises in rates for various kinds of public service. One of the most important is the petition of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois requesting permission to advance rates for gas service in Arlington Heights and forty-six other municipalities. The same company asks permission to raise water rates in Harvey.

The Consolidated Light and Power company has asked an increase in rates for gas service in Kewanee and Wethersfield and for an advance in light rates in the Galva district. The Macomb Telephone company wants to increase telephone rates.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Many Notable Changes in Automobile Coverage.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

Many notable changes are being made in automobile insurance rates and coverages. The agents in the west will this week receive the new schedules for fire and theft insurance, which take effect March 1 and make a material increase in rates. The advance is due chiefly to the enormous theft losses and is highest on the cheaper cars.

Farmers' cars are to be written hereafter on the term plan, the companies generally having decided to meet the competition of a few of the farm writing companies. It is feared that this will lead to a movement to write all cars on the term plan, with a monthly reduction in valuation.

Strong sentiment is being developed in favor of a new plan of rating automobile liability insurance, it being agreed that the horse power basis is illogical. The Underwriters' Laboratories is working on a schedule based upon the physical conditions of the car, and the National Workmen's Compensation Service bureau is considering a new plan, taking as factors the price on the car, on the theory that larger verdicts are returned against the owners of high priced cars, mileage run, and whether a car is driven by the owner or by a chauffeur.

The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the late residence in Evanston. The burial will be at Aurora Monday, under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic.

LUNCHEON TO M. L. JENKS.

The Chicago staff of the American Surety company gave a farewell luncheon yesterday at the College Inn to M. L. Jenks, who retires this week as Chicago manager to become vice president of the company at its home office in New York. R. R. Walton, chief inspector, presided as toastmaster and presented Mr. Jenks with a diamond set Alpha Belta Phi watch fob.

M. J. Cleary, insurance commissioner of Wisconsin, who is to address the Fire Insurance club of Chicago Tuesday evening in the auditorium of the Insurance exchange, will speak on "Insurance Conditions as I View Them."

Life insurance companies report a record breaking production during January and attribute the increase chiefly to the educational effect of the influenza epidemic.

Cravens & Cage of Houston have been appointed managers of Texas for the Union Insurance society.

The monthly meeting of the Cook County Field club will be held Monday.

REAL ESTATE MARKET SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

WEEK'S REALTY MARKET SHOWS MORE ACTIVITY

Larger Transactions Are Marked by Unusual Number.

The week's real estate market developed much activity, the number of important transactions being surprisingly large, while the aggregate movement of property showed a substantial increase over the corresponding week a year ago, as evidenced by the figures of the recorder's office. It was a broad market, too, including nearly every class of property, except the downtown district, but this was represented by several highly important leases of building space. Some big leases of outside building space also were included.

There also was an important sale of West Twelfth street business property, a deal in the south shore district involving the erection of a $1,000,000 apartment building, while much activity was shown in residence property.

One of the most important developments of the week, however, was the $100,000 purchase by the Seng company, manufacturers of furniture hardware, of a site for a $500,000 plant. Of ware, of a site for a $500,000 plant and the $80,000 purchase by the Ilg Ventilating company of the site for a $250,000 building, the first unit of a plant to cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Lease 60,000 Square Feet.

In connection with manufacturing property a highly important transaction was the lease by the Isko company, manufacturers of refrigerating machines, of the two upper floors of the big plant of the Northwestern Terra Cotta company, containing 60,000 square feet of floor space. A special interest attaches to the transaction for the reason that the lessee company is moving its entire business from Detroit here.

The Seng company, has purchased from Charles F. Beck, through J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co., a tract of 377,679 square feet at the northwest corner of Diversey and Crawford avenues, with a frontage of 1,146 feet on Diversey and 290 feet on Crawford avenue, for $100,000, as indicated. The property has excellent shipping facilities, and the purchase was made to meet the growing needs of the company. The company is now located at the southwest corner of Dayton and Blackhawk streets, occupying an entire block.

In speaking of plans, President Frank J. Seng said it is the desire of the company to begin work on the new plant as soon as possible, but that much depends on business conditions. If by early summer they are favorable work will be begun. The plant gives employment to 300 persons.

Ilg Company Purchase.

The purchase of the Ilg Ventilating company, comprises 325x1,333 feet at the southwest corner of Crawford avenue and George street, adjoining the purchase of the Seng company, and was acquired from Charles F. Beck for $80,000. J. H. VanVlissingen & Co. were the brokers. The proposed building will be three stories, of the unit system, the first one to cost about $250,000. The company manufactures fan blowers and ventilating apparatus of all kinds, and gives employment to 250 hands.

The growth of the company has been rapid, and has necessitated several increases in space. The company moved from small quarters in East Kinzie street in 1910 to its present location on Whiting street, where it has been compelled to make several additions to its plant. It is interesting to note that the company is one of the pioneers in profit sharing with its employés.

$18,000 Annual Rental.

The plant of the Northwestern Terra Cotta company, the two floors of which have been leased by the Isko company, is at the northeast corner of Terra Cotta place and Clybourn avenue, and the lease is for a term of years at an annual rental of $18,000. Both parties to the transaction were represented by Louis Beardslee.

The entire removal of the company's plant from Detroit is rather convincing evidence of the superior advantages offered by Chicago in a manufacturing way.

In an important near north side deal in manufacturing property involving extensive improvements the Krasberg Manufacturing company has contracted to purchase the 200 feet of frontage north front in Ohio street, being 109 feet deep, 158 feet west of Lake Shore drive, from the Primley estate. It adjoins on the west the seven story Lake Shore and Ohio building, owned by F. M. and E. J. Bowes Jr., and it is said to be the purpose to erect a similar building on the 200 feet just acquired. It is said that sketches for the new building are now being prepared by Architect Alfred Alschuler. It also is said the entire investment will be in excess of $300,000. E. J. Bowes Jr. is the broker in the transaction.

Plans Under Way for $1,000,000 Apartments

Plans for the erection of a big high grade apartment hotel, to cost around $1,000,000, are said to be back of the sale, reported late in the week, of the vacant 110x211½ feet at the northeast corner of South Shore drive and Seventy-third street.

The property was sold by Alvin H. Reed to William L. Park, federal manager of the Chicago & Great Western railroad, for an indicated consideration of $31,500, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000, assumed by the grantor.

The plans for the structure, it is said, are not completed yet, but it is believed the building probably will be erected some time this year.

LADIES OF VIKINGS MEET.

The Independent Order Ladies of Vikings held a one day interstate convention yesterday at the Hotel Sherman with more than 100 delegates present from Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Nebraska.

BUILD NOW TO GET LOW PRICE, EXPERT'S ADVICE

Nimmons' Says Boom Will Keep Costs Stable.

The following article by George C. Nimmons, one of the leading architects of Chicago, on the building outlook, is of special interest because it embodies information gathered by him in the course of an inspection of the great port terminals in connection with the preparation of a series of articles for the Architectural Record of New York:

"It is estimated that the cost of civil building construction postponed on account of the war, has now reached the sum of $3,000,000,000 and that it is equivalent to the average amount of building done in one year over the entire country.

"The reason most projects are now being deferred is that heavy decline is expected to take place in the cost of labor and building materials. Any trustworthy information, therefore, that can lead to any feeling of confidence generally as to just what this decline will be and when it will come is the information needed now to stabilize conditions and establish a definite program for the coming year's operations.

"Recently the writer had an opportunity of securing from many of the builders who are still engaged in the most important construction work now going on in this country, their statements and opinions as to the future conditions. This information was gathered during an inspection of the great port terminals and other war work, in preparing a series of articles for the Architectural Record of New York.

No Material Drop.

The consensus of opinion of all these men who are now most closely in touch with present conditions is, that there will be a further drop in the cost of buildings, but that this drop will not be very material. The reason given for this was, that when some additional reductions in cost are made, sufficient building projects will go ahead to stimulate these prices and keep them at a level not far below where they are now.

"The building projects which will proceed will come from two sources. First, from industrial and commercial concerns whose business demands or whose business will justify expansion in buildings. In such cases the excess cost of buildings will often be taken care of by the resulting increase in business and charged off in a period of probably ten years. The other source of building will come from the federal and state governments.

Jobs for Soldiers Seen.

"It was held that the growing sentiment for giving employment to soldiers and utilizing existing resources, will soon result in creating legislation for a vast amount of construction. The average yearly cost of such work is $600,000,000, and there is talk of doubling that.

"Additional reasons given for the above statements were that labor will not come down in price, according to Samuel Gompers and the building trades organizations, and that for over twenty years, in spite of all panics and hard times, the cost of labor for building has steadily advanced. Part of the cost of producing building material is labor, for the price of which there is little prospect of decline.

"As to the best method of securing the bottom price for any building project, the opinion seemed to prevail that an owner could only secure whatever deduction there may be made by going into the market with plans completed ready to buy; that material men and contractors will hold back their price cutting until there is positive evidence in the completed plans of really getting a job.

Delay Not a Saving.

"It appears, therefore, according to these authorities who are so closely connected with the present building situation, that any one desiring to build is not likely to secure any material reduction in cost by deferring the beginning of such work for a number of years.

"Their opinion was that the ones who started first would gain a greater reduction in the small profits which idle builders would at first accept than the saving there may be in cost from reduced prices of materials later after the builders generally have secured enough work to engage their organizations."

Transfer Figures Show Boom in Realty Market

Substantial evidence of the improving character of the real estate market is furnished by the transfer figures for January, which show a gain in every detail as compared with the corresponding month last year. Thus, there were 3,315 deeds filed for record with total consideration of $4,654,740, as compared with 2,837 and $4,207,928 last year, a gain of 478 in number and $446,812 in amount. There were 305 deeds under the Torrens system with total consideration of $277,211, as against 265 and $160,000 last year. Applications for initial registration were 34, as against 30 last January.

MANY TRANSFERS OF APARTMENTS MADE IN WEEK

Medium Sized Deals Mark Trading; Few Large Sales Made.

There was a fair degree of activity in apartment property during the week, although there was a scarcity of large transactions. On the other hand, there was rather more than the usual number of medium sized deals.

An important south side transaction covered the Emden building, a court structure containing thirty-two apartments of three, four and five rooms, on a lot 81½x171 feet, at 4826-32 Prairie avenue, having a gross annual rental of over $13,000, which has been purchased by Leslie P. Mick, president of the Mick Drying Machine company, 548 West Jackson boulevard, from George L. Lavery of Cleveland, O., for a reported consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $45,000. The building was erected about three years ago. The purchase is said to have been made as an investment. Willis & Frankenstein represented both parties to the transaction.

Eighteen Apartment Building Sold.

The eighteen apartment building of four, five, and six rooms at the northwest corner of Fiftieth street and St. Lawrence avenue, lot 100x125 feet, has been sold by Blanche C. Bunker and Alice B. Romans of Aberdeen, S. D., to Charles B. Klafter for an indicated consideration of $56,000, subject to an incumbrance of $27,500, the stamps indicating that $28,500 was paid for the equity. John J. Fischer represented all parties to the transaction.

A Torrens transaction covered the property in Bernard avenue 178 feet north of Leland avenue, which has been sold by Joseph Weidenhoff to Ida L. Benson for an indicated consideration of $51,500, subject to an incumbrance of $37,500, the purchaser giving back a trust deed to Mr. Weidenhoff securing a loan of $6,000 six years, at 6 per cent.

The lot is 90x125 feet, east front, and is improved with a twenty-four apartment building of four and five rooms, having a gross annual rental of about $9,540.

Gives Property in Exchange.

In part payment the purchaser conveyed the six apartment building of five and six rooms at 5674-76 Ridge avenue, lot 50x130 feet, east front, having a gross annual rental of $3,720, at a reported consideration of about $26,000, subject to $12,000 incumbrance, and vacant at Rockwell and Ainslie streets. Decker & Golden represented both parties to the transaction.

The Les Tours apartment building, at the southeast corner of Indiana avenue and Forty-fourth street, title to which recently was taken by R. E. Humphrey, has been conveyed by him to Oscar E. Hagen for an indicated consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $45,000. It contains twenty-four apartments and occupies a lot 101x124 feet.

Flat Building Sold.

Christian Soest has sold to Edward J. Birk, secretary and treasurer of the Birk Bros. REALTY MEN TO PUBLISH DATA ON CITY'S RESOURCES

The Chicago Real Estate board at its monthly meeting last week acted on the suggestion of Walter S. Ross and started a movement to advertise Chicago's manifold advantages in an industrial way. A committee of five, of which Mr. Ross is to be chairman, will be appointed to compile data for a booklet, detailing the present and potential advantages offered by Chicago in this field.

Mr. Ross, who has made a close study of the resources of the Calumet district, northern Indiana and elsewhere, and who has been in Washington in government service, spoke of the lack of data compiled by Chicago organizations.

The Realty club, composed of the younger renting and mortgage men of the city, has indicated, by resolutions, its approval of the plan of the Chicago board. The action of the club, which took the form of the adoption of a resolution submitted by Harry Prussing, carried with it the appointment of a committee of five by President Kanaley, to work with the Chicago board.

Gentlemen:

In reviewing our Auditor's reports of our business for the last 18 months, since we began doing business with you, we find the results so gratifying as to possibly be of interest to you, and if desired you may use our name.

When we began doing business with you some 18 months ago we were not in position to borrow from our banks the large amount necessary to carry on our operations on an extensive scale, and could see no way of doing so unless by an increased capitalization.

Through your plan of cashing our accounts, we have accomplished our aims by having more than doubled the volume of our business, and have placed this company where it is now perhaps the largest of its kind in the country - all this without increasing our capitalization one dollar. Today our stockholders are in position to retain all of the future profits, without having to share them with added stockholders.

We have often wondered why other concerns do not avail themselves of a system such as yours, thereby keeping their profits. Perhaps it is because of the mistaken idea sometimes prevalent that your plan is not good banking, an idea that would quickly be eliminated if a little time were spent in analysing your plan.

Because of our growth, our banking connections are now such that we can secure all of the assistance which we may need - yet we consider it a good policy to continue our relationship with you whereby an immediate conversion of accounts into cash, without disturbing our customers with notice, will enable us to complete even larger undertakings.

Yours very truly,
THE BRUMBAUGH SYSTEM
D W Brumbaugh
President.

"Ordered South"

Again "as the days grow longer, the cold grows stronger," and February "as usual" sets Chicago by the ears.

Thoughts of the Southland recur. Timetables become the most interesting reading. Society plumes itself for flight.

Prudence, comfort, fashion, forbid us to fling our winter garments into the "fires of Spring." So, preliminary to everything is the outfitting.

The 1919 Southern outfitting began under auspices more favorable than for several seasons. The stores made lavish preparation unhampered by war restrictions, and the tourist may choose a tropical wardrobe to taste, with no patriotic pin-pricks of conscience.

Chicago merchants want your trade this year—that's why they naturally plan to sell you through THE TRIBUNE—the paper most widely read by the prosperous families of Chicago, and the cities and towns in the Central West which do their seasonable outfitting in Chicago.

Styles, prices, fabrics are first shown here, and travelers start the Southern trip right when they
